TEDDY AND ALBERT

Is It Roosevelt and Beveridge in 1904?

SO BELIEVED IN INDIANA

Hoosier Republicans Think Their Brilliant Young Orator and Statesman, Who Speaks at Ogden on September 11th, Will Be the Vice-Presidential Nominee in 1904—What He Has Said About Expansion, Our Commerce and the Trusts in Former Speeches.

Indianapolis Ind., Aug. 27.—Much interest attaches to Beveridge's choice of Indiana for the personal participation of Senator Albert J. Beveridge, the young orator from the Hoosier state, who will speak in Ogden, Utah, Wyoming and Idaho in the company's campaign of tours on September 11th, is expected to be one of the most notable of his career as orator and speaker in nonpartisan and political.

It is known that his tour in Oregon, California, Utah and other States where he is to deliver initial speeches at the opening of the campaigns was arranged in conference with President Roosevelt. It is known also that there is a striking resemblance between the lines of thought and lines of purpose indicated by the speeches of President Roosevelt and Senator Beveridge, although there is of course, good humoredness in form of expression.

A STRIKING RESEMBLANCE.

Republicans of Indiana who were fortunate enough to hear or to have read Senator Beveridge's memorable address before their State convention June 19 June are struck by the resemblance between the general construction of that speech and the tone of logic and thought found in speeches made during the week by President Roosevelt in his tour of New England. In speaking of our territories in the Far East, our acquisitions and growth of foreign markets and the massive growth of our own, Senator Beveridge, in his speech here last June, voiced the key which is now being spoken by President Roosevelt. Senator Beveridge's sentiments at the Philippine question in his great speech of June last in this city is singularly similar to the treatment of the subject during the present week by President Roosevelt.

BEVERIDGE ORIGINAL EXPANSIONIST.

Senator Beveridge has since the first Presidential campaign of President Harrison in 1888, advocated as the safest course for the future development and maintenance of our industrial and commercial interests, the expansion of our foreign markets. When Beveridge, in 1888, spoke in behalf of President Harrison's election, almost exclusively along this line, older senators and wise politicians believed him to be a very Demosthenes statesman and without an peers on the forum. Subsequent events simply confirmed the fact that young Beveridge. Hoosiers were not deserved as no other town in the country. He course our national affairs should and would take. He has increased almost every great development of the country, and is pointing the pleasure of expansion and commercial and industrial development.

In the course of his speech here last June the Senator, in speaking of our commercial relations among other things said and this will be of interest to those who will hear him at Ogden on September 11th:

EXPANSION OPENS MARKET FOR MANUFACTURES.

Another matter for our consideration is certainly every dollar invested in manufacture and sold in the markets of the world. Our factories are now producing more than we can use. We have 10,000,000 of spindles in our factories and we are the greatest manufacturers of cotton in the world. We have 14,000,000 of people who wear cotton and we are the greatest manufacturers of iron and steel in the world. We have 70,000,000 of people who use iron and steel and we are the greatest manufacturers of cotton. We have 70,000,000 of people who use cotton and we are the greatest manufacturers of iron and steel
