DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES

and Measures.

A strict construction of the Constitution, and no assumption of doubtful powers.

A Diplomacy, asking for nothing but what is clearly right and submitting to nothing wrong.

No connexion between the government and banks.

An ad valorem revenue tariff.

No public debt, either by the General Government or by the States, except for objects of urgent necessity.

No assumption by the General Government of the debts of the States, either directly or indirectly, by a distribution of the proceeds of the public lands.

No extensive system of Internal Improvement by the General Government, or by the States.

A constitutional barrier against improvident State loans.

The honest payment of our debts and the sacred preservation of the public faith.

A gradual return from a paper currency.

No grants of exclusive charters, special legislation, to banks.

No swindling corporations.

No connexion between Church and State.

A preference for democrats over whigs for every office.

Acquiescence in the rule of the majority in all cases of party discipline.

No proscription for honest opinions.

Fostering aid to public education.

A "progressive" reformation of all abuses.

Dr. Andrew Combe.—A sketch appears in the Phrenological Journal of Edinburg, of which a summary is given by a correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser, of the eminent man whose name is at the head of this paragraph. He is extensively known in the United States by his literary works, which are to be found in all our public libraries, and are distinguished for their good sense and sound practical views in regard to health. Dr. Combe was one of a family of seventeen children, of whom two brothers and two sisters are all that now survive. Although not quite fifty years old at the time of his death, it is believed that he had labored under pulmonary disease for upwards of twenty-seven years. The prolongation of his life under these circumstances, he was accustomed to attribute to his undeviating observance of those natural laws upon which the preservation of health depends, and the operation of which it was his object to illustrate in his well known work on The Principles of Physiology. Owing to the philosophical care with which he thus preserved such physical power as was left to him, he was not only able to give to the world the various invaluable treatises which from time to time appeared from his pen, but also to taste, with real enjoyment, all the calmer pleasures of existence. He died in August last, six weeks after his voyage to the United States, the extreme heat of the weather and the fatigue of travelling not having agreed with his delicate constitution. In a summary of his character, with which the memoir concludes, there is the following statement, which gives another and a beautiful confirmation to the sincerity of his teachings:

"Though endowed with all the gentle qualities and domestic affections which render the married state agreeable, Dr. Combe scrupulously refrained from matrimony, and would not have reckoned an opposite course the less culpable because sanctioned by a clerical benediction. His motive will be obvious on perusal of what he has written about hereditary transmission of disease. Except for the reason alluded to he must long ago have ceased to lead a single life. One of the most striking features of his character was his attachment to and sympathy with women of intelligence and refinement, and the sacrifice of enjoyment which he made at the call of what he considered to be duty, will be best appreciated by those who knew him most intimately."

"My brethren and friends," said a preacher out west, "it is necessary to make a demonstration. We live in an age remarkable for mighty inventions, not the least of which is the patent pill which my elder brother gave to the world. It is the most astonishing, wonderful invention that this ever-gifted genius has conferred upon the world; it is the greatest benefit of the species. From motives of pure philanthropy, I have put a few in my pocket, which you can have at the close of the service, at a dime a box."

Punch says:—"It may be proper to state, that the distinguished personage known among the ancients by the name of Cupid, has recently changed his name to Cupidity, and will hereafter devote his attention to matters of money, as well as love affairs. It may be well to state that he has exchanged his darts for dollars, as he now finds the jingle of the latter quite as effective as the keenness of the former.."

An editor away down east, who served four days on a jury, says he is full of law, that it's hard for him to keep from cheating somebody.

PATENT CORPSE PRESERVER.

THE attention of the public is respectfully invited to this newly invented apparatus. The object for which it is intended is perfectly to preserve corpses from decay for any length time, without being any wise offensive to delicacy, or unseemly in appearance The value of such a machine cannot be estimated but by those tender feelings which long for the preservation of a departed friend; and among those who have been compelled to use it on account of the fast decaying of their friends, a general and pleasing satisfaction has been given; for none can speak too highly of such an important and useful invention. Benevolent institutions and all others who desire to delay funerals until the arrival of distant relatives, or to make suitable preparation for interment, can, by the use of this machine, preserve them for weeks in a perfectly inoffensive state, allowing all to gaze upon them.

The undersigned has secured the patent for Marion county of this valuable and much needed apparatus. It can be used in the best room in the house without the least inconvenience, and if it does not give satisfaction, no charges will be made. This apparatus can be seen and will be applied by the undersigned, Undertaker and Coffin Maker, at his old stand, sign of the Eagle, Main street, Indianapolis. J. I. STRETCHER.

N. B. The undersigned has two hearses and carriages, and the best and most careful hands in his employ; so that, if it should happen that he is absent on professional duty, that all orders left at his place of business, will be attended to in as good style, and as punctually, as though he himself was there. The impression being spread that when professionally absent no person would attend to funerals, he wishes his friends and the public to understand, that they can be attended to by those in his employ, to their satisfaction. Ready made coffins always on hand. ☞Punctual attendance at all hours 21-tf.

MARK THE SCOUNDREL.

DR. JOHN J. DRUMMOND, of Noblesville, Indiana, seduced my wife, a few days since, and departed to parts unknown to me. This infamous scoundrel has succeeded in seducing one of the best of wives and broken up my family, consisting of my wife and five children, and rendered myself the most miserable of mortals. For twelve long years my wife and I had lived in the enjoyment of the greatest domestic happiness. I considered myself the happiest of men, being in the possession of a wife whom I deemed a paragon of domestic fidelity and female purity. But alas, the wicked spoiler came. I desire that you, Mr. Editor, will publish this brief notice of this robber of female virtue, that he may be properly estimated in those parts where he has fled to, and that he may receive some punishment for his wicked conduct, and scorn of the holy saying, "Those whom God hath joined together let not man put asunder."

INDIANAPOLIS STEAM FACTORY.

THE subscribers having leased for a term of years the building well known by the name of the Old Steam Mill, situated in front of White River bridge, Indianapolis, which they have fitted up for a Woollen Factory, where they purpose manufacturing woollen goods of various kinds. All those who wish to get their wool spun into yarn, or manufactured into cloth or woollen goods of any kind, can be accommodated on good terms by giving them a call. They would also inform the public that they have three sets of carding machines for carding wools, they being all new and in good order. Therefore they will warrant satisfaction to all who may favor them with their work. Persons living at a distance, by calling at this factory, can have their wool carded without delay, by giving a few hours' notice. They will also be prepared to full and finish cloths of any kind, or color, in good style. They will keep on hand woollen goods of their own manufacture, such as Cloths, Satinetts, Tweeds, Jeans, Blankets, plaid and plain Flannels; all of which they will exchange for Wool or good Country Produce of any kind. They will give the highest market price for wool and produce, and sell goods of their manufacture as low as any goods of the same quality can be bought for in Indianapolis. All those who may have full blood Saxony and Merino wool to card or manufacture, can have it done in good order at this factory, as they have machinery expressly for such wool. Good wood and produce of all kinds will be taken in exchange for work.
