LOCAL TALKS.

What Prominent and Observing People Find to Interest Them.

Bishop Hurst—In asking for the extension of Massachusetts avenue we do so both for the advantage we would derive in facilitating access to the proposed Methodist University, and in our belief that the property holders would be benefited by the improvement. No, the entire amount of $100,000 has not been raised for the payment of the ground for the site of the new university. About $55,000 has been contributed, but we are not at all troubled about the entire payment for the ground by the people of Washington. When the ground is paid for then we will look after the endowments for the university, for which we expect to raise $2,500,000. I read yesterday of the death of Mr. Daniel B. Fayrweather, in New York, who left $2,100,000 to educational and charitable institutions, and I believe there are many rich men whose deaths will show that they have left similar liberal legacies.

Very wealthy men, at least some of them have, it seems, concluded not to leave their sith and kin large fortunes, but to distribute their money where it will do the most good to humanity. It was but recently that a gentleman well known to me died in Brooklyn, N. Y., leaving bequests of $250 000 mostly for educational purposes. He was a quiet man; never had taken any extraordinary interest in the cause of education, but his will showed that he had given it earnest and careful thought. As to the endowment of the university I will say that we have some pledges, but you know that such matters go slow at first and we are willing to wait. For instance, there was the Johns Hopkins University which took seven years to get into shape. It is so with other universities throughout the country and we are hopeful that our university will in years to come be one more seat of learning to mark the educational progress, not only of the National Capital, but where young men from all parts of the country will be enrolled as its students.

Dr. Tindall—I am known as always having been partial to brick pavements. If a brick pavement is laid properly it will last longer than any other. In wet, sloppy and slushy weather it dries faster than any other, and in winter it is not as liable to be as icy and slippery as some other sidewalks. Yes, I do think that it is more thoughtlessness than anything else that people do not throw ashes or sand on the sidewalks when they are sleety and slippery. A reminder sometimes has a good effect.

A Correspondent—There are a number of our "ilk" who have incomes of $5,000 per annum, derived from journalistic work and as clerks to committees. Some clear that much from newspaper correspondence alone. There are among the army of correspondents at the National Capital some who have become rich through marriage, through speculation and through inheritance. The three wealthiest journalists that I can think of at present are Colonel Perry S. Heath, $150,000; Frank A. Richardson, $150,000, and John S. Skinner, $50,000. And they are growing richer and richer.

Captain Skidmore of the Salvation Army—Yes, we are making some headway in Washington. We have had more men giving in their experiences within the past two weeks than ever before. I heard a man whisper the other night that "the Salvation Army was going down." I tell you that God is saving souls through the Salvation Army, and it is going up. I thank God that the Salvation Army ever passed through my town. It saved my soul. I was not a very big sinner when I took my seat among the penitents, but I do not think that morality alone will save any one.

A Builder—An amusing illustration of the popular curiosity excited by anything that so much as suggests concealment, even if concealment is not intended, is presented in the way people hang around the high board fences which contractors build about lots upon which big buildings are so be erected while the cellars are being dug and the foundations laid. Of course, there is nothing to hide in operations attendant upon digging cellars and laying foundations. The fences have to be built to keep pedestrians from tumbling into the pits and hurting or killing themselves. The fences are made high so that small boys cannot climb to the top of them and tumble over.

But the very fact that the work is thus concealed from sight attracts a constant crowd, and the gate through which the carts pass up and down from cellar to street are generally so thronged that it is difficult to get by. I've often stood on the opposite side of the street to these places and noticed men and women, many of them well dressed, walk all around these high fences searching diligently for some crack or knot hole to look through. Just as soon as the foundations are built, however, and the building begins to develop to plain sight of everybody, curiosity ceases. People cross the street then to get out of the way of the muss, and sleepy swear at the contractor for encroaching upon their sidewalk privileges.

Pythian Visitation.

ATTEMPTED SELF-MURDER.

Mr. Sullivan Becomes Despondent and Cuts His Throat with a Razor.

A desperate attempt was made by Stephen Sullivan yesterday afternoon to end his own life. The attempt was made at his room, No. 149 I street, where he boarded. Ordinarily Sullivan was of a very cheerful disposition, but when he went home yesterday it was noticed by the other boarders that he was somewhat despondent. Later, when one of the servants in the house went to his room with a request that he come down to dinner, Mr. Sullivan was found bleeding freely from two ugly gashes in his throat. A razor by his side was sufficient evidence as to how the wounds had been inflicted.

Doctors Herbert and Lochbeiler attended the would-be suicide and succeeded in staying the flow of blood from the wounds in his neck, and under their advice he was sent to the Providence Hospital. The surgeons there do not consider the wounds dangerous.

WINTER WISDOM.

[Exchange.]

Don't be afraid of fresh air, but avoid draughts.

Don't go out of doors for a second without extra covering.

In selecting your winter underclothing, choose that which is warm and yet more or less open in texture.

Take off your overcoat when you enter a warm place, whether office or private dwelling, even if your visit is to last only three minutes.

If you catch cold or develop a cough, get rid of it at once. This is better than being "blue" and thinking that pneumonia or consumption has marked you as a victim.

The best remedy for a cough or cold (however stubborn), or a sudden chill is pure whiskey. A dose of whiskey in water will impart a generous warmth to the whole body and keep off the diseases of the season.

Don't forget that only pure whiskey should be taken. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has the strongest recommendations from the leading doctors as to its efficacy, and from the most prominent scientists as to its purity. It is the only standard medicinal whiskey. Take no other from your druggist.

Henshaw; sergeant at arms, R. H. Zimmerman; delegates to the District Cabinet, Wm. Briggs, B. A. Barlan, and M. E. Jones; delegate to Fraternal Congress, B. A. Harlan.

An Incorrigible Youth.

As fine a specimen of callousted incorrigibility as could well be created was arrested last night and locked up at the Twelfth-street police station by Officer Moore in the person of Joseph Carter, a 10-year-old colored boy. The officer found him hanging around in front of Willard's Hotel between 12 and 1 o'clock, and when he asked him where he lived and what he was doing out so late, replied: "I live out by the Electric road, and my mother gave me a dollar to come in and pay a man at the Centre Market."

"When did she give you the money? the money?" the officer inquired, and Carter said: "About three years ago."

Joe has just completed a term in jail for stealing $20 from a man he had been living with. A few nights ago Agent Sweeney gave Joe his supper and a bed for the night, and before Mr. Sweeney arose next morning Joe had skipped out and taken the night shirt which had been loaned him by his benefactor.

Daylight Thieves.

Between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the residence of Charles D. Schench, No. 401 Eleventh street northeast, was entered and goods of considerable value stolen. The family was away from home at the time and entrance was effected to the house by the front basement window. Among the valuables stolen were a pair of diamond solitaire ear-rings and a gold watch. According to the reports sent into Police Headquarters the entire value of the property will not exceed $125.

Did Not Drive Too Fast.

Simms denied the fast driving, and testified to the unruly conduct of Connor upon the car, and of his having fallen against and broken a glass. The case was dismissed.
