His Old Umbrella.

When you took a second look at him you could see a sort of grimness about him which convinced you that whatever he undertook to do he would accomplish or break his back in trying. About noon yesterday, when the rain fell fastest, he appeared on Woodward avenue under an old umbrella worth the price of its ribs. At the Opera House he placed the old rain-shedder in a doorway and took position in another not far away. In about two minutes along came a citizen with his left eye watching for just such a chance, and he hawked on that umbrella with a chuckle of deepest satisfaction. He didn't wait around there for the owner to appear, and he didn't care whether it belonged to a Sister of Charity or an overgrown bond-holder. As he started off the grim man followed. The umbrella-hooker had a walk of half a mile to reach his residence, and the grim man was close at his heels all the way. As the citizen halted at his gate the other detained him, and quietly remarked:

"I want you to do me a favor."

"Ah, yes—I never give anything to tramps," was the reply.

"I want you to take that umbrella back to the dorway from which you stole it."

"This umbrella? Why, is this yours?"

"It is, and you must take it back!"

"Well, you see, I couldn't do that, but I guess it has been worth a quarter to me."

"Will you take it back?" asked the man with the iron jaw.

"Why, no. What's the old thing worth, anyhow?"

"One hundred dollars!"

"That's a good joke. I'll give you 50 cents and keep it."

"If you don't 'bout face and take that umbrella back to that identical doorway, I'll mop you into every puddle of water between this and the corner, and when I let up on you your wife won't be able to find a button to identify you by!"

Thus quietly remarked the grim man as he unbuttoned his overcoat and displayed a chest like a bass drum. He had the strength of an ox and there was an "I mean it!" look in each eye.

"Say, I don't want any quarrel with you," observed the citizen. "Take your umbrella and a couple of dollars."

"No, sir!"

"Say three."

"No, sir!"

"Say five."

"The price," said the grim man, "will be one hundred straight dollars, and you must take the umbrella back. If I stand here in the rain five minutes longer I shall charge one dollar per minute!"

The citizen headed for down town. He was too mad to raise the old umbrella, but carried it under his arm, while the grim man kept close behind him. When the doorway had been reached and the umbrella replaced the c' i en was about to turn away, bu t he other placed a hand on his revolver and said:

"Stranger, you are a good walker, and you have performed your share of the contract to my entire satisfaction. In the future it will be well for you to buy your umbrellas in the regular way, or take your walks between showers. You can now finish your excursion!"—Exchange.

If the latter course be adopted, the following form will be deemed a sufficient compliance with the act:

Saint Mary's county, to wit:

On this —— day of ——, 1880, before the subscriber, a Justice of the Peace of the State of Maryland, in and for said county, personally appeared —— and declared that he intends to apply for a traders' license, under the 2nd section of the act of January Session, 1858, to the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Saint Mary's county, and made oath that the amount of the stock of goods, generally kept on hand by him, (or by the concern in which he is engaged, in case it is a partnership,) at the principal season of sale, (or if the applicant has not previously engaged in such trade, that the amount of the stock of goods which he expects to keep, &c.,) does not (or will not) exceed $——.

MALTBY HOUSE,

BALTIMORE.

APRIL 1st, 1879.

Recognizing the fact that the relationship existing between the Counties of Maryland and the City of Baltimore is such that residents of the Counties have occasion to visit the City frequently during the year; in consideration of these facts and the liberal patronage extended the "Maltby" in the past, I deem it but a matter of justice that some discrimination should be made in their favor. I have therefore concluded to Reduce the Price of Board to $2.00 per Day, feeling confident that the same will be fully appreciated by them, and at the same time merit and secure an increased share of their patronage. Assuring them that nothing will be left undone that can add to their comfort during their stay.
