My Home.

I have a beautiful home
Beside the freshest sea,
And angels too, want to come
On neighborly visits to me.

They come in the morning grey;
They come in the morning red;
They walk with me by day,
And at night sit round my bed.

I've an orchard smoothly limbed,
And earth soft and clean—
A garden neatly trimmed,
And a lawn forever green.

And the house within is sweet
As milk yet warm in the pail;
There's the sound of children's feet,
But never of children's wail.

And the chamber where I sleep
Is a perfect eastward room;
There the mornings earliest peep
With an odor of clover-bloom;

My study the daintiest nook—
On the wall no idle mark;
And if I want a book
I can find it in the dark.

When neighbors of heat complain
There is coolness in my hall;
And no matter how hard the rain,
A sunbeam on my wall.

I've nothing to do but enjoy:
Work does itself in my plan:
I live like a heedless boy,
And dream to be a man.

I see the night draw on,
And the sweet stars open their eyes:
I see the morning dawn
Without a thought of surprise.

I see my cattle fed
In the pastures dewy green;
I see men mowing the mead,
And believe that I have seen.

Such is my beautiful home,
Beside a beautiful sea,
Where angels are wont to come,
On daily visits to me. —Century.

VARIETY.

Big heads often belong to big fools.

Always look up—God looks down.

When you dispute with a fool, he is very certain to be similarly employed.

Spendthrifts economise in what they give, the charitable in what they spend.

A man's good fortune often turns his head; his bad fortune as often averts the heads of his friends.

Every man complains of his memory, but no man complains of his judgment.

Every argument in favor of liquor drinking is like the liquor-drinker himself—it fails to the ground.

It has been found by oculists that when a person has only one eye, it is invariably the left one.

Wealth does not always improve us. A man, as he gets to be worth mere, may become worth*less*.

A man who marries a frivolous, showy woman, fancies he has hung a trinket round his neck, but he soon finds it a mill-stone.

Perhaps Dr. Johnson was not the best judge of a well dressed woman, but in his opinion, "a woman was well dressed, when, after seeing her, one could not remember what she had on."

The first of all virtues is innocence; the second is modesty; and neither departs without being quickly followed by the other.

Do injury to no man, though never so mean; for once in seven years he may have an opportunity to do the greatest man much good or harm.

Women can easily preserve their youth; for she who has power to captivate the heart and understanding, never grows old.

Tom Hood says nothing spoils a holiday like a Sunday coat or a new pair of boots. To have time set easy, your garments must set the example.

"I live in Julia's eyes," said a dandy. "Very likely," was the reply, "for she has a stye in one of them."

When the panic came in '57, we thought it a A Less, but now in '60, it turns up A Gain!—Vanity Fair.

One of the most preposterous things possible would be a man, on board a rocking ship, in a gale of wind, with a fever and ague, trying to shave himself with a bent razor. We don't believe it would be a clean job.

A disappointed candidate for office was speaking of men who would sell their votes, when Mrs. Partington observed, with a sigh, "Ah, they are as base as Æsop of old who sold his birthright for a mess of potash!"

BOYS OUT AT NIGHT.—The practice of allowing boys to spend their evenings on the streets is one of the most ruinous, dangerous and mischievous things possible. Nothing so speedily and surely marks their course downward. They acquire, under the cover of the night, an unhealthy state of mind, vulgar and profane language, obscene practices, criminal sentiments, and riotous bearing. Indeed, it is in the streets after nightfall, that the boys generally acquire the education of the bad, and capacity for becoming rowdy, dissolute, criminal men.

NOBODY INDEPENDENT OF OTHERS.—We talk a great deal in this country about independence, and men boast proudly that they are independent, and ask favors of nobody. But the truth is, that no man is wholly independent of others. No one is so rich or so great as to be above needing at some time the sympathy of his fellow creatures. No man has a right to think that in showing kindness to his neighbors he performs a gratuitous service, for which he receives no return. Exposed to the same adversity which falls on others, he may soon have to ask the assistance which it is now his privilege to bestow. He who is generous in the day of prosperity finds others to render kindness to him in turn, when overwhelmed with disaster. It is, therefore, a matter of common prudence, if there were no higher motive, looking out for the dark days which may come, to show kindness to those in trouble.—Evangelist.

A SENTIMENTAL FOOSH.—"What is your name?" "My name is Norval, on the Grampian Hills." "Where did you come from?" "I came from a happy land where care is unknown." "Where are you lodging now?" "I dreamt that I dwelt in marble halls." "Where are you going to?" "Far, far o'er hill and dell." "What is your occupation?" "Some love to roam." "Are you married?" "Long time ago." "How many children have you?" "There's Doll and Bet, and Kate and—" "What is your wife's name?" "Oh, no, we never mention her." "Did your wife oppose your leaving her?" "She wept not when we parted." "In what condition did you leave her?" "A rose tree in full bearing." "Is your family well provided or not?" "A little farm well tilled." "Did your wife drive you off?" "Oh, sublime was the warning." "What did your wife say to you that induced you to go?" "Come rest in this bosom." "Was your wife very good looking?" "She wore a wreath of roses." "Did your wife treat you badly?" "Oft in the stilly night." "When you announced your intention of emigrating, what did she say to you?" "Oh dear, what can the matter be?" "And what did you reply?" "Sweet Kitty Clover, you bother me so." "Where did you see her last?" "Near the Lake, where drooped the willow." "What did she say to you when you left?" "A place in thy memory, dearest!" "Did you love her?" "'Tis said that absence conquers love." "What are possessions?" "The harp that once through Tara's halls." "What do you propose to do with it?" "I'll hang my harp on a willow tree," "Where do you expect to make a living?" "Over the water with Charley."

SANFORD'S
LIVER INVIGORATOR,
NEVER DEBILITATES.
THIS compounded entirely from Gums, and has been prepared by a Physician, who has devoted his whole time to the study of Diseases of the Liver, and the best means for curing them.
It has cured thousands who had given up in despair, and who had taken Mercury in every form, and yet it never salivates nor leaves the system in a worse state than before taking it, and is the only medicine of which this can be said.
We do not wish to your use of the LIVER INVIGORATOR unless you find it the most powerful and effectual medicine you ever used for the complaints it is recommended for, and that it does not cure more easily and quickly than any other medicine you ever used.
While the last ten years have proved as the numerous testimonials in our possession attest, the unprecedented success of the LIVER INVIGORATOR, and it plaints, Bilious Attacks, Chronic Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Stomach, Habitual Costiveness, Dropsy, Sour Stomach, Habitual Costiveness, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, Flatulence, Female Weakness, Jaundice, &c., may be taken as an Ordinary Family Medicine, Headache, Biliousness SICK HEADACHE, in twenty minutes, if two or three Teaspoonfuls are taken at commencement of attack.
All those who use it are giving their testimony to its virtues.
MIX WATER IN THE MOUTH WITH THE INVIGORATOR, AND SWALLOW BOTH TOGETHER.
Price One Dollar per Bottle.
ALSO—
SANFORD'S
FAMILY
