INDIANA STATE SENTINEL.

The Crowded Street.

BY W. C. BRYANT.

Let me move slowly through the street,
Filled with an evershifting train,
Amid the noiseless throng of feet
The murmuring walks like autumn rain.

How fast the flitting figures come!
The mild, the fierce, the sinny face!
Some bright with thoughtless smiles, and some
Where secret tears have left their trace.

They pass—to toil, to strife, to rest,
To halls in which the feast is spread,
To chambers where the funeral guest
In silence sits beside the dead.

And some to happy homes repair,
Where children prattling round to check,
With mute caresses still declare
The tenderness they cannot speak.

And some, who walk in calmness here,
Shall shudder as they reach the door
Where one who made their dwelling dear,
Its flower, its light, is seen no more.

Youth, with pale cheek and slender frame,
And dreams of greatness in thine eye!
Go not thou to build an early name,
Or early in thy task to die!

Keen son of trade, with eager brow,
Who is now plotting in thy chamber?
Thy golden fortunes, tower they now,
Or melts the glittering shape in air?

Who of this crowd, to-night shall tread
The dance till daylight gleams again?
Who sorrow over the untimely dead?
Who wrathe, themselves, in mortal pain?

Some, fairest-fated, shall think how long
The still dark hours, how slow the light,
And some who flaunt among the throng,
Shall wake in dens of shame to-night.

Even, where his tasks or pleasure call,
They pass and heed each other not.
There is who heeds, who holds them all
In His large love and boundless thought.

These struggling tides of life that seem
In shifting, aimless course to tend,
Are eddies of the mighty stream
That rolls to its predestined end.

The Dying Child.

The night-shade had crept o'er the distant hill,
'Twas Spring, and the eve was cold and still,
The lone winds whistled o'er mount and steep,
And the day-bird lay in his nest asleep,
When a female young mother, with accent mild,
Wept as she gazed on her dying child.

With an eye too bright for a form of clay,
In its mother's arms the infant lay,
With its head on her bosom pillowed, where
Streamed its long tresses of golden hair,
Like straggling sunbeams of softest glow
Tinging the splendor of stainless snow.

Not a thing in that lonesome chamber stirred—
Not a whisper rose, not a voice was heard—
Not a sound, save a gasp of the panting breath,
And the struggling sigh that heralds death,
The spell of that painful stillness broke,
The startling and sudden the doomed one spoke.

"You remember a quiet green spot of ground,
Where the moss and the wild rose grow thickly round?
And a tall broad oak in its grandeur throws
Its cool shade alike o'er the moss and the rose,
Away from the hot sun's scorching glare;
Oh! when I am dead let me slumber there!

Mother! O mother! my eye grows dim,—
Dost thou not hear you distant hymn?
Earth knows not the sound—'twas an angel's tongue
Those kind words spoke, those soft strains sung:
Calm and commanding, I see him now,
With the stamp of love on his dazzling brow.

How beautiful! mother—his form divine!
How glistening and bright his white robes shine!
O sweet is the smile of his deep blue eye;
Kiss me, dear mother, before I die!"
From a cloud at that moment the star came peeping,
And the soul of the child with its God was sleeping.

Loss in Delays.

Slum delays, they breed remorse,
Take thy time while time is lent thee;
Creeping snails have weakest force,
Fly their fault lest thou repent thee;
Good is past when sooncst wrought,
Lingering labors come to nought.

Hoist up sail while gale doth last,
Tide and wind stay no man's pleasure;
Seek not time when time is past,
Sober speed is wisdom's leisure.
After-wits are dearly bought,
Let thy fore-wit guide thy thought.

Time wears all his locks before,
Take thou hold upon his forehead;
When he flies he turns no more,
And behind his scalp is naked.
Works adjourned have many stays,
Long demurs breed new delays.

HOMICIDE IN ILLINOIS.—The Illinois Free Trader published at Ottawa, described the following outrage, committed at Indian Creek, 16 miles from that place. Two farmers, James Phillips and Lowell Morse owned farms side by side, and had been for some time engaged in a bitter controversy, arising from conflicting claims to a piece of land. Phillips's cattle, on a certain morning, were found in Morse's wheat. The latter went with a large mastiff dog to drive them out, and was passing through Phillips's land. Phillips thereupon took his rifle, and taking aim either at the dog or his master, shot Morse through the heart. The act was unobserved by any one, and Phillips, after returning to his house and putting up his rifle, proceeded to the house of a neighbor, to whom he communicated what he had done and afterwards to a justice of the peace, by whom, after examination, he was committed for trial. Morse has left a wife and family in Vermont, and Pillips has a family in Illinois.

AN OLD ONE.—We learn from the Pottsville Emporium, says the Pennsylvanian, that Venus Coggins—Phebus, what a name!—an aged colored woman, said to be 103 years of age, died in this place a few days since. She retained her mental and physical faculties to a very extraordinary degree, and was able to walk about town till within five days of her death. The Venus "Cogginses," however, and other elderly ladies of the same complexion, like Joyce Heth, are very apt to think themselves older than they are; but if really centenarians, the King of England's remark to old Parr applies with equal force to them: "your life has been prolonged far beyond the ordinary lot of humanity—pray, what have you done more than other people?" Old Parr naively replied, "please your majesty, I did penance at the age of one hundred and five," the punishment being inflicted on the score of an illicit amour, as Parr was quite a Lothario at that period of his existence, the young rascal.

Jacob Barker, now a practising lawyer in New Orleans, appeared in his own defence in a suit on the 10th, and obtained a verdict, after a long personal address to the jury, which appears to have made also a vivid impression upon a numerous auditory. In reciting the chequered history of his life—his unrivalled commercial enterprise—"that the canvass of his ships whitened every sea, and that the star spangled banner of his country had floated from the masthead of his ships in every clime"—his aid in procuring a loan of $500,000 for the government during the last war, &c.—he said he came to New Orleans poor, and in debt; that he had since made a great deal of money, and spent it in the support of his family and the payment of debts outstanding in New York; that all these debts were now settled, as was proved; and that he owed nothing in the world at present but one amount (on a note he believed,) of about $1000. The Tropic says, "his vindication of his reputation for benevolence and veracity was manly and exceedingly eloquent and fully sustained by the evidence."

A TRYING SITUATION.—Mrs. Susan Gardner and her her sister, Maria Demiker, were buried by the avalanche in the same room and within a few feet of each other. But, wonderful to tell, by some fortunate falling of the timbers of the crushed dwellings, they were neither of them killed. After they had been dug out, they described their situation and feelings. One hearing the other groan, asked her sister's condition, and was assured that she was hurt only in her limbs. The other stated that she was doing very well, only that a plank or stick of timber was pressing upon her head! They heard the digging over their heads and consoled theselves with the hope that they would be found in time to save their lives.—Troy Budget.

THE SECRETS OF TRADE.—We observe in the report of cases tried in the Court of Common Pleas in Boston, an action brought by certain plaintiff in New York, against James Lee and others, soap manufacturers in Cambridge, to recover a sum of $115.88, payment for 4300 pounds of ground flint stones. The defendant resisted payment on the ground that in his order he did not mention any specific quantity of the article, but only wanted a sample. It appeared in evidence that the only effect of the ground flint upon the soap with which it was mixed, was to increase its weight by intermingling an article of considerably less value than the soap itself. The jury rendered a verdict for the whole amount claimed.

MORE RASCALITY.—Great frauds have just been discovered in the Canadian Custom House. It is asserted that three quarters of the revenue has never reached the Government. One collector returned less revenue for one quarter than was known to have been received in a single importation, within the knowledge of the Inspector.

A letter from Havana, in the New Orleans Bee, says that great fears are entertained at the former port, respecting the French brig of war Dunois, which sailed for France on the 2d of September, and has not since been heard of. She is supposed to have foundered in the terrible gale of Sept. 4.

The Arkansas State Gazette of the 15th says: "It becomes our painful duty this week to record the death of Mr. Waters, the member from Jackson, whose fate it was to receive on his way home from the Legislature, a stab from a butcher knife by one of the Pilots of the Ferry-boat. The hopes, which were entertained of his recovery during the early part of last week, proved delusive, and he expired on Wednesday evening last at the house of Mr. Hooper, across the river."

A day or two since, one of our subscribers, a farmer of Oxford County, came into our office, and after paying two years' subscription for his paper, entered into a brief conversation about the whig promises of 1840. He said he got the roast beef but had not seen the "two dollars a day". He must, however, acknowledge, he said, that his whig neighbors "told him one truth." He had bought his farm, and partly paid for it, and they told him, "if General Harrison was elected, it would make $500 difference in its value, and his ability to pay for it," and it had. He was $500 worse off, than he should have been if Mr Van Buren had been elected.—Maine Argus.

GALT HOUSE.
Corner Main and Sixth Street's, Cincinnati,

THE most central position in the city, being half way from the River to the Canal.

This establishment is now in successful operation, and, with the late improvements, offers greater inducements (when economy and convenience are consulted) than any house in the city. The proprietor, feeling very grateful for the very liberal and increased patronage hitherto extended, begs leave to state that he hopes by strict attention to the comforts of his patrons to merit a continuance of those favors so liberally bestowed. The table will be furnished with the choice of the markets. Experienced and attentive attendants in all the various departments of the house. A good and convenient stable attached to the house, with experienced ostlers always in readiness, so that arrivals and departures at any hour which may be desired, will always receive the attention which tends to contribute much to the comfort of the traveller. Seats to be had at the Bar for all the stage lines leaving the city.
