WASHINGTON, D. C., NOV. 16, 1885

DISTRICT DAYS IN THE HOUSE.

It is of the utmost importance to the people of Washington, and to the interests of the District of Columbia, that the former rule of the House of Representatives, assigning one day in each month for the consideration of District legislation, should be revived. The necessity for such a rule is so apparent, and the demand for it so just and proper, that we feel certain that with prompt and united action on the part of our citizens, their request will be granted.

In the absence of any Citizens' organization, not even a Board of Trade, to reflect the needs or wishes of our community, it devolves upon every citizen to constitute himself a committee of one, and present to members of Congress as they arrive in the city for the approaching session, this reasonable request which is of such importance to the progressive welfare of our beautiful city.

The lack of much needed legislation for the District in the past four or five years was owing to the almost certain failure of every attempt to get District of Columbia matters before the House. Previous to that time, when the rules of the House assigned certain days for the consideration of District business, our community interests had somewhat of a fair show, but since the rule was abolished the District affairs have been neglected in Congress—have been "marooned," so to speak.

There are now domiciled within the District of Columbia nearly a quarter of a million of free American tax-paying citizens whose municipal rights and privileges are solely dependent upon the legislation of Congress. All their prayers for relief from unjust enactments and all requests for new laws more in accordance with their advanced prosperity and development are made to Congress, which exercises exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over the affairs of the District. It is but fair and just for the House to grant the District one day in each month for the consideration of its legislative requirements, and we feel confident it will readopt its former rule if our citizens will but exhibit united and active interest in the matter.

BUSINESS AND REFORM.

"Had it not been for the Civil-Service law," says a correspondent who is a Republican in politics, "the Democratic party would by this time have been in full possession of the Government and the business of the country on a settled basis."

We do not know that we can fully subscribe to this statement of the case, but so far as business in Washington is concerned, there is no sort of question but what the uncertainty and suspense and general feeling of insecurity, occasioned throughout the various departments by reason of the pending statutory reform in the public service, have been a great drawback to local trade.

As to its effects elsewhere, they may not have been appreciably injurious; but we cannot help thinking that the law is to some extent an unenviable burden for the Administration to be shouldered with. It involves responsibilities which no administration, however strong and honest or whatever its politics, could carry with any great degree of comfort, satisfaction or success, simply for the reason that it is inherently defective in principle and thoroughly repugnant to the theory of self-government by popular majorities.

A civil-service commission, such as now exists, has no more business to be than would a commission have to define and regulate the eligibility of voters at a Presidential election, or to examine into the qualifications of Presidential candidates, or to prescribe competitive examinations for the chairmanships of the several committees of Congress.

This may seem to be a very plain, blunt way of putting the question, and will no doubt grate harshly upon the feelings of the truly orthodox; but the better way of stating a disagreeable truth is always the plainer way.

We might make the further disagreeable remark that it is quite as impracticable to effect permanent and radical reforms in the Civil Service by arbitrary regulations as it would be to reconstruct a man's character or inject a soul into a corporation or authorize a millennium by act of Congress.

In this matter each department should be supreme. The only competition should be as to which department—which of the great business branches of the Government—should secure the best service by its own individual sagacity and circumspection.

Returning from our digression, we have only to repeat what we said at the outset in answer to our correspondent that the Civil-Service Law is responsible in a greater or less measure for the depression of trade during the past season in this District, and to add that while the business of the country at large may have experienced no perceptible harm from the same cause, an unwise, crude and injudicious law is never a benefit to any people. A reform which is set about in the wrong way seldom becomes an accomplished fact.

IT APPEARS that by the statutes of Yale College, the young lady from Wisconsin, who is studying law in the law school of that institution, cannot receive a graduate's degree. The statutes are supposed to resemble those of the Medes and and Persians in the respect of immutability; therefore, as President Porter says, the student in question must remain content with reciting with her class, and cannot be "officially recognized by the officers of the college," although they have no hesitation in taking her tuition money. But there is not entire unanimity on the part of the college faculty in this action. Dean Wayland of the law school, on whose recommendation the young lady was admitted, declares that there is nothing in the statutes prohibiting the admission of women. There is said to have been a most interesting scene at the faculty meeting when President Porter inquired of the Dean why co-education of the sexes had been inaugurated at Yale College. The matter was compromised by allowing the young lady to continue her studies, but omitting her name from the catalogue. No more of her sex will be admitted.

OUT in the West the average newspaper never allows a suit for libel to disturb the even tenor of its way. Some of them do not feel at home unless they have a libel suit or two on the premises. The Portland Oregonian seems to be one of that kind. Ex-Senator Mitchell is a candidate for United States Senator from Oregon and the Oregonian has a very savage attack on him. It prints letters said to have been written by Mr. Mitchell in 1870 and 1871 to Miss Carry Price, the sister of his wife, making ardent love to her and promising that if she remained true to him he would get a divorce from his wife and marry her. The Oregonian also alleges other things against Mr. Mitchell, and in a beseeching manner asks that gentleman to sue it for libel that it may have an opportunity of proving the truthfulness of its statements.

THE fortune of the late Ex-Senator Sharon is estimated at about $30,000,000. By his will he leaves $50,000 for the improvement of Golden Gate Park, in San Francisco, and $50,000 to public charities. Country covers a multitude of sins, but the late ex-Senator did not bequeath anything to Miss Sarah Althea Hill. He probably did not think that she was either a fit subject upon which to expend money in improving or that she was an object of charity.

THE first act of the war between Burmah and England is the capture of King Theebaw's naval vessels by armed steam launches from a couple of British steamers. Theebaw will find out before many moons that instead of undertaking to thrash the British Government and getting thrashed himself, he should have devoted his time to getting sober and permitting his best wife a peaceful accouchement.

ARRANGEMENTS for the American exhibition in London, which is to open on the 1st of May next, have so far progressed that President Cleveland, by special invitation, will be designated to start the exposition, as Mr. Arthur set the big wheels at New Orleans in motion by electric wire from the East Room of the White House.

GOVERNOR ABBETT of New Jersey is not to have a walk-over to the United States Senate if the friends of Chancellor Runyon can help it. The contest promises to be an interesting one.

A Plea for the Daddy Dollar.

EDITOR CRITIC: Says the Rev. Sam Jones: "I gave the hungry, ragged woman a silver dollar, and the eagle on it became a nightingale and it sang for me as sweetly as God's minstrels through the live-long night."

Print this and defy the Secretary of the Treasury and Wall street. The old silver dollar will never be stricken down.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16. ALABAMA.

Something About Reporters.

The reporter who is very ignorant always begins his articles, "We are well informed."

When the reporter relies on a mere rumor, he writes, "We learn from a perfectly reliable source."

When he is uncertain, he writes, "As is well known."

If he has written all that can be written on a subject, he adds, "We might continue this subject for columns."

If he does not hear anything at all he writes, "It has come to our ears."

If he does not know how an affair started, he writes, "As all our readers are well aware."

If nobody has said a word to him on a subject he writes, "We have just been assured."

Why They Never Go Crazy.

They do not have any hospitals for the insane in China, and they have very little need for them. What wits a Chinaman has he keeps about him. His brain substance is probably not any tougher than that of European races, but he is not given to fret or worry. His politics and his religion are ready-made for him. He can therefore give himself up to carnal and temporal pursuits with cheerful abandon.—[Philadelphia Record.

A STORY OF FREDERICKSBURG.

It was after the battle of Fredericksburg:
The ground was strewn with the fallen foe.
They lay in ranks on the side of the hill
With their front to us; and a boy could throw
A stone to the nearest rank, so close
Had they pushed their way to the frowning edge
Of our rifle pits in the last mad charge,
When they struck our lines like an angry sledge;
And fought up under the very guns
Till the blue line wavered, and turned, and broke,
And the stragglers sullenly disappeared
Behind the mantle of pitying smoke.

There was one tall man in the nearest rank,
So tall he had towered above the rest
As we watched him bearing the tattered flag,
He lay with a rifle ball through his breast.
We thought him dead, but he turned at last,
And raised himself on his elbow there,
And looked down over the bloody field,
Then back at us in a fierce despair.
We saw him fumble beneath his coat,
And feebly draw with a shaking hand
A little package of letters stained
With use and tied with a faded band.

He spread them out, and he picked up one,
The smallest letter of all the store.
We knew that his eyes were filled with tears
That blurred the thing he read over.
He tried to read, but its head dropped low
On his breast, and his hand fell nervelessly;
But the stiffening fingers still held their grasp
On the words that his eyes could no longer see.

A murmur ran through the rifle pits;
We had watched him there from our sheltered stand;
We fell to wondering whose hand had traced
The letter he held in his big brown hand.
His wife?—said one: "No, his sweetheart, hope!"
Said another. "His mother!" said one whose face
Was fresh and fair as a girl's; he dropped
His gun and clambered from out the place.

He ran to the dead man's side and raised
The hand, and there in a childish scrawl
Was written, "I love you, papa dear."
The hand had closed over the reef, and all
That had cheered his soul in that lonely place
Was the simple note of a little child.
And yet, it had sweetened the taste of death,
For it seemed to me that the dead man smiled.

PEOPLE IN GENERAL.

SENATOR DAWES is to speak at Lowell tomorrow on the Indian question.

SENATOR SYMTROUM has subscribed $5,000 to the Zion Wesleyan College of North Carolina.

GENERAL FRANCIS A. WALKER is to deliver twelve lectures on political economy in Boston during the winter.

DIO LEWIS says that wearing large, thick, heavy boots and blue hand-knit stockings will improve a woman's complexion.

EX-SENATOR THURMAN of Ohio has lately removed from his old house on High street, Columbus, to an elegant new residence on East Rich street.

M. DE BLOWITZ, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, is just now contributing a story of provincial life in France to La Petite Journal.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR will deliver his positively last lecture in this country at the New York Academy of Music, December 3, and will sail for England two days later.

MR. W. W. ASTOR, late American Minister to Italy, has written a novel of Italian life in the Middle Ages, which is shortly to be published by the Scribner's. It is called "Valentino."

EDWARD E. O'BRIEN of Thomaston, Maine, is the largest individual ship-owner in the United States, owning all of ten large vessels, aggregating 20,000 tons, and engaged in the California and Callao trade.

BISHOP MCMAHON sent his check for $50 to the Parnell fund meeting in New Haven and closed his letter by saying: "I am willing to stand on the same platform as the venerable Hierarchy of Ireland and to follow where they lead."

SAYS THE Two Republics, published at the City of Mexico: "Mr. Manuel Caballero, the well-known journalist, has gone with his family to New York, where he will reside for some time to complete his book on the late editorial excursion to the United States."

REV. HENRY E. COOKE, son of Jay Cooke, who has regularly returned half his salary to the church of which he was pastor, has resigned the rectorship of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, near Frankford. It is said that his sermons were too classical and polished for his parishioners.—[Philadelphia News.

W. J. ARKELL of the Albany Journal has no doubt that Mr. Conant, the missing editor of Harper's Weekly, was knocked down, robbed and thrown into the river. He was on his way to call upon Mr. Arkell the last night he was seen, and was in the habit of carrying a couple of hundred dollars or so about his person.

THE DEATH is announced at Pueblo, Colorado, of Judge Henry William Jones, formerly of Westminster, Md. He went West in early life and was about 65 years of age at the time of his death. He was a grandson of Judge Thomas Jones of the first Court of Appeals of Maryland and his wife was a granddaughter of Daniel Boone.

REV. MR. HAWRIS of England, who is delivering a course of lectures at Boston on "Music and Morals," is a very small man and quite lame. He is perpetually in motion while lecturing, moving hands and feet alike, and he has a way of rolling up his white handkerchief into a solid ball and tossing it from hand to hand, when he gets specially worked up.

MME. HENRI GREVILLE, the French novelist, who will spend a portion of the winter in this country, resided formerly and for a number of years, in Russia, her father, M. Jean Fleury, being a professor in the University of St. Petersburgh and her husband, M. Durand, also a professor in the same institution. "Greville" is her nom de plume. Miss Clare Waters is now engaged in translating her last novel for Tichnor & Co., the Boston publishers.

READ! PONDER!

MAKE A NOTE OF IT!

IF YOU HAVE BOYS IT WILL PAY YOU.

We are daily selling more Boys' and Children's Clothing than any house in Washington. The question arises, Why is this? We will tell you: Simply because we sell better goods for less money than has ever before been offered in the District of Columbia. We do not ask you to take our statement alone; but we refer you to the hundreds of ladies who have already patronized us for their Boys' and Children's Clothing.

We ask you to use your judgment in your own interest. Make inquiries, look around, examine goods and prices elsewhere, then pay us a visit of inspection, and if we do not agreeably surprise you we are much mistaken.

We are compelled to replenish our Boys' and Children's Stock almost every other day. The supply is inexhaustible. We are prepared to meet the heaviest demands on our resources. The prices are way down, down, down—lower than you have ever seen them. The material, cut, finish and make of the highest standard of excellence. Do not be misled by high-sounding bluster, but consult your own interest. We state the naked facts and back our statement up by deeds. Our stock is too large to enumerate here, but for ANYTHING in the Clothing line for man, youth, boy or child, whether it be for labor, business, school or dress, visit

ELEGANT CITY INTERIORS.

The Improvement Making in Three Noted Washington Mansions.

The raw material in the shape of bricks, mortar, lumber and other ingredients necessary to construction, lumped in front of the old, staid and severe Frelinghuysen mansion on I street, indicate decided changes in the interior of that ultra respectable home. Mr. Whitney evidently intends to make his abiding place not only comfortable, but luxurious.

The Angel of the House may perhaps frown a trifle at this destruction of ancient landmarks, but when her new temple is completed, when the masons, plasterers, painters, decorators and upholsterers have done their perfect work, she will flit from room to room and sweetly smile at the becoming change.

And when the neighboring Aulick house is occupied by the witty Senator from New York—as it promises to be shortly—the sounds of revelry by night will be frequent.

These distinguished gentlemen, although widely separated politically, are each experts in the art of entertaining, and will undoubtedly do much toward making Washington even more than ever the City of the Cultivated and the Resort of the Refined.

Artisans are also at work in Dr. Bruen's house, on Farragut Square. When done it will be occupied by the Hon. W. L. Scott, Member-elect from the Erie district of Pennsylvania. Mr. Scott's home in Western Pennsylvania and his daughters' house in Philadelphia are models of taste and domestic luxury, and as Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Strong, Mr. Scott's daughters, will direct the arrangement of the Farragut Square mansion, it will be one more addition to the delightful interiors of our city.

Notes of New Books.

"Railroad Transportation—Its History and Its Laws," is the title of a well-printed and substantial-looking volume, just published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, and for sale in Washington by Robert Beall. It contains a vast fund of information, carefully collated and concisely stated, concerning one of the great questions of the day which is year by year acquiring more urgent importance. The author is Mr. Arthur T. Hadley, Commissioner of Labor Statistics for the State of Connecticut and Instructor in Political Science at Yale College, whose effort is to present and explain the principles involved in the railroad business of the United States and also the railroad legislation of different countries, in order to clearly understand the comparative results obtained, and make application of them in our determination of the problem. It is a book that legislators may consult with much profit, not only for the value of its references, but for the practical nature of its suggestions.

"High Lights" is a story of American country life of more than common interest. The plot of the story is simple but interesting. The descriptions of the dairy at 6 o'clock on a June morning, of the drives over the picturesque hills and vales of New Hampshire and of the little church where Robina played the organ are exquisite in detail, and the Yankee dialect of the rural people is characteristically presented. The book is from the press of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, and will be found at Beall's.

General Adam Badeau's venture into the realm of fiction entitled "Conspiracy—a Cuban Romance," is at hand from the New York publisher, R. Worthington, through the Brentanos, and is said to possess features of considerable local interest.

THE CRITIC is also in receipt of "Breakfast Dainties," a suggestive little work by Thomas J. Murrey, author of "Fifty Soups and Fifty Salads," which is commended to the perusal of good housekeepers, who are anxious to enlarge their repertory of mutinal appetizers. It is published by White, Stokes & Allen, and for sale at Brentano's.
