Scene in a House on the Avenue.

Charlie—Hello, Jim, what have you been doing the past three or four days? Thought you had "moved out" to spend the holidays.

Jim—No, I haven't; wish I had. I would have gotten rid of a job which, although a pleasure, is bothersome. I have been trying to find something suitable to give the girls for Christmas. They will expect something from a fellow, and my pocket is weak this year. I wish I knew what to get for them.

Charlie—Well, I did not trouble myself to go hunting all over the city to find something. I am as bad off as you in pocket, and not wanting to offend the girls by a cheap, flashy gift, I concluded that a pair of gloves was always acceptable to a lady, so I went to the "Bon Marche," purchased a glove voucher for Mary, Julia, Emma, and the old lady. I will give each a voucher, and they can go to the store, 316, 318 Seventh street, and select such color as may be desired, as the voucher specifies the name and not the price. It does not give away a fellow's pocket. You can see that I have saved myself the trouble which you have had, and believe my girls (or vouchers) will be highly appreciated.

Jim—Well I declare; you have beat me. But I heard mother and sisters Helen and Fannie wishing they had a new pair of gloves, and I believe I will get some of those vouchers for sisters, as well as the other girls. Do you think they have any more?

Charlie—Oh, yes, they have plenty of the vouchers, although disposing of them very rapidly, and I would suggest that you go there as soon as you can.

Jim—I will at once. Excuse me. Good by. See you at the club to-night.

Miss Pixley at the National.

On Monday evening next Annie Pixley appears for the first time this season before a Washington audience, presenting Bret Harte's poetic drama, "M'liss." Miss Pixley has achieved much success elsewhere, and is unquestionably an established favorite. The following is taken from the New York Journal of October 20: "After an absence of two years from this city Miss Annie Pixley, the charming young soubrette, last night made her reappearance before a New York audience at the Grand Opera-House in the piece which she has made familiar to theatre-goers all over the country for the past six or seven years—'M'liss.' Her impersonation of this mischievous though large-hearted girl has not materially changed since she was last seen here, but retains all the old joyous and devil-may-care manner, the same light-hearted freedom and the same tenderness which served to bring her to her present height of popularity. She has a more than average company for her support."

The Israelites' Fair.

The executive committee having in charge the perfecting of arrangements for the grand fair and bazar to be given by the Israelites of this city, at the National Rifles' Armory, from January 25 to February 6 next, held a meeting last night at 914 Seventh street. Mr. Wolf announced that the Sengerbund concert at the Rifles' Armory will be advanced one week in date, which will leave the armory free for the fair during the dates fixed upon. Mr. Abraham reported that answers had been received from Hon. Carl Schurz, Hon. Joseph Pulitzer and Rev. Henry Ward Beecher to the invitation to write for the fair paper. A letter was read from Mr. Busch of the Anheuser-Busch Company of St. Louis, stating that he had directed Mr. Abner, the agent here, to furnish gratis all the beer that might be wanted during the holding of the fair.

Two Deaths from Apoplexy.

On Sunday evening Mrs. McCall, a colored woman living on Fourteenth street northwest, between P and Sampson streets, died suddenly of apoplexy. This morning Mrs. Caroline Lucas, a colored woman aged about 50 years, living at No. 1512 Fourteenth street northwest, was sent for to prepare Mrs. McCall's body for burial. Upon the completion of her task she returned to her own home and in a few moments was attacked with what was supposed a fainting spell. The usual restoratives were applied without avail. Dr. Lockett of Corcoran street was summoned, but in twenty minutes Mrs. Lucas was dead. The doctor pronounced the cause of death to be due to apoplexy. The two sudden deaths have created considerable excitement among the colored people of that section of the city.

IF the gentleman whose lips pressed the lady's snowy brow and thus caught a severe cold had but used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, no doctors' bills would have been necessary.

Secretary King to Explain.

A meeting of the Eleventh Building Association will be held to-morrow evening at Goldard's Hall, West Washington, when the stockholders will consider the financial condition of the association. Drama By a Colored Lady.

An event of more than ordinary interest will be the first presentation of the play "Zillah, the Gypsey," written by Miss Louise Smith (colored), to-morrow evening at Willard Hall. This young lady's talent as a playwright has been highly spoken of by competent critics. Great curiosity will be felt to see her production. Her former efforts have been highly praised.

THE MISSING MILLER.

Some False Impressions Concerning P. H. Haviland Corrected.

The sudden disappearance of Mr. P. H. Haviland, the miller, near Norbeck, Md., still continues to be the theme of conversation among the residents of that part of the county and also in this city.

Mr. William R. Muncaster, who owns the mill operated by Haviland, stated to a Critic reporter to-day that he wanted to correct some false impressions about the circumstances of the disappearance, and particularly the statement that it is suspected that Haviland ran away to escape the payment of debts. He states that Haviland left home Wednesday evening to have a spindle for the mill repaired. He expected to return Thursday.

On Thursday morning about 10 o'clock he inspected Tenney's mill in Georgetown and had a conversation with the miller. He told the miller that he would not be able to have his spindle repaired until Thursday afternoon. About 9 o'clock Thursday night he paid his toll at Sligo on his way home. The team came to the place of Thomas J. Quinter between 11 and 12 o'clock, and Mr. Quinter took the team up and cared for them. Saturday morning Howard Boetelor found Mr. Haviland's overcoat lying on the ground about ten feet from the fence and about twenty feet from the point where the ladies saw the wagon standing. In the pockets of the coat were found some crackers and a pair of wooden mittens. He stopped a short distance beyond the toll-gate, where he got something to eat at Graves' store and fed his horses. About an hour later than this his horse and wagon came to Thos. Bean's without a driver. This is about one and a-half miles above the toll-gate.

About half an hour later than this the team was seen by some ladies returning from a festival standing near where the coat was found. The ladies said there was no person with the team. The statement that there were stains of blood on the coat is untrue, but there were two small drops of blood on the wagon. As to the statement that there were evidences of a scuffle on the ground where the coat was found, nothing of the kind was found to indicate that any struggle or scuffle too place.

Mr. Muncaster said that in regard to the statement that Haviland owed a great deal of money, that he is the only creditor of Haviland's and that his bill against Haviland was only $290 for rent. As to his ability to pay this, Mr. Muncaster has no doubt. He states further that a morning paper of this city does an injustice to Mr. Haviland of Baltimore, a brother of the missing man, by intimating that he has no real interest in the finding of his brother, but only seems desirous of selling the stock on his brother's place.

Bought at Bates, Reed & Cooley's of New York city. We secured from their four days' closing-out sale goods consisting of

Silks, SATINS, Velvets,

Shawls and Cloaks,

Dress Goods, White Goods, Hosiery, Silk and Linen Handkerchiefs, Notions, Furs,

Gent's, Ladies' and Children's Underwear

Cloths, Flannels, Blankets, and a Full Line of Domestics.

We were the only merchants of this city who bought at the Great Slaughter Sale, and will venture to say that we bought more goods than any house "this side of Philadelphia." The benefit of the bargains we shall give to our customers.
