DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES and Measures.

A strict construction of the Constitution, and no assumption of doubtful powers.

A Diplomacy, asking for nothing but what is clearly right and submitting to nothing wrong.

No connexion between the government and banks.

An ad valorem revenue tariff.

No public debt, either by the General Government or by the States, except for objects of urgent necessity.

No assumption by the General Government of the debts of the States, either directly or indirectly, by a distribution of the proceeds of the public lands.

No extensive system of Internal Improvement by the General Government, or by the States.

A constitutional barrier against improvident State loans.

The honest payment of our debts and the sacred preservation of the public faith.

A gradual return from a paper credit system.

No grants of exclusive charters and privileges by special legislation, to banks.

No swindling corporations.

No connexion between Church and State.

A preference for democrats over whigs for every office.

Acquiescence in the rule of the majority in all cases of party discipline.

No proscription for honest opinions.

Fostering aid to public education.

A "progressive" reformation of all abuses.

A Lady's Stratagem.

The Boston Atlas translates the following story from the Paris Siecle. It is a good story enough, but we would not advise the reader to be very pertinacious in believing it:

One of the dangers at Ostend most to be guarded against are the professed gamblers. During the seasons of the Carnival and Lent these knights of the green cloth keep themselves at Paris: but when summer comes they scatter themselves all over Europe. They follow the fashion, and tread in the foot-steps of its gilded votaries; they navigate, at full sail, in all the maritime and mineral waters of Europe. This year these birds of prey have spread in large numbers over Belgium. They have already made some great strokes; they speak of a Russian who was pillaged, in a single night, of two hundred thousand francs, and who paid it the next day, apologising for having made them wait. At these watering places, where the bells are under no regulations, the inexperienced are necessarily exposed to being plundered by sharpers. Two or three have been taken this year in the very act. They have been driven away, but there are enough left to hover over the shipwrecked in the stormy nights of lansquenet. One of these Greeks has recently been the hero, or rather the instrument, in a recent adventure at Ostend. Just at the commencement of the bathing season, there arrived an English lady, mature in age, and possessed of a great fortune.

Her wealth had came to her late, and that explains how it chanced she was not married. But she sought to make up for lost time by marrying according to the wishes of her heart, which had inclined towards a young gentleman of twenty-five. All the other aspirants had been discarded—thanked, but dismissed.—The mature young lady was only willing to listen to the youthful and handsome Sir Edward. But unfortunately, the youthful and handsome Sir Edward would have nothing to say to her, and little suspected the flame he had kindled. How could he suppose that a miss of forty-five wished to have him for a husband!

The fortune of the lady did not tempt him, for he had recently inherited ten thousand pounds sterling, and he felt himself rich enough to pass his youth in gaity and freedom, prepared to enlist only under the banners of Hymen when he reached the age of reason, or the end of his ten thousand pounds. His frugal and economical habits drove the aged Miss Anna to despair—for she would have been glad to see him ruined and poor, as in that case he would be more likely to be tempted by her wealth. She had came to Ostend because she knew that Sir Edward was there. Her attacks, however, met with no more success than they had at London, Bath, Newmarket, Brighton, and all the other places where she had followed the indifferent youth. She could obtain from him nothing but cold politeness. She in vain displayed before his eyes the riches she possessed. His manner seemed to say, "what do I care—I am satisfied with my present ease."

Seeing that ordinary means met with no success, Miss Anna resolved to have recourse to a somewhat excentric expedient. She was a lady of spirit; she was possessed both of audacity and imagination. The expedient could not fail.

These things took place a month ago. There chauced then to be a Greek here in Ostend, one of the heroes of that nation—a clever chief of the Hellenic confederation. He was a master of masters, an irresistable player, winning whenever and whatever he choose. Nothing had occurred to betray his true character, and Ostend considerd him as an honest player, when our English lady found him and said to him:—"I know who you are; I have received positive letters in regard to you. Here are copies of them. You see I can ruin you."

The blackleg turned pale—he saw that he was at the mercy of the lady, but at the same time the cunning knave saw that she had something to demand of him, and was only trying to frighten him into granting it. "I can ruin you," resumed the marrying lady, "but I will spare you if you will consent to do me a service." The fellow had expected this, but he was delighted with the commencement. "Speak madame," said he, "I await your orders." "Do you know Sir Edward?" "Yes, madame." "He does not often play, but he does not dislike it. You must make him play." "I should like nothing better." "Will you then go to the Hotel des Bains, where he dines; there get up a discussion wherein you shall be in the wrong; propose a wager of some bottles of champagne, which you shall lose; make Sir Edward drink, and when his head is heated, you shall lead him off to a game." "That is our usual way of proceeding," replied the sharper. You must then win all his money; you must induce him to play upon his word of honor, and lead him on until he has lost his whole fortune, ten thousand pounds."

The blackleg was stupified. He reflected a moment, and said: "I understand, I will win his ten thousand and then share them with you." The haughty Englishwoman repressed a motion of indignation, and replied in a disdainful tone: "No, you will keep it yourself." "And is this the condition upon which you consent not to ruin me!" Yes, but reflect well upon it. I insist that Sir Enward shall be completely stripped. If you leave him the smallest ballance, these letters concerning you shall be made public." "You shall have no reason to complain of me."

On the following day the dinner came off. The champagne was drunk; the parties engaged in the game; and before the night was over, Sir Edward had lost everything. It was then that our English lady appeared to advantage; the young man, now ruined, opened both eyes and ears. The first, it is true, were not charmed by the personal attraction of Miss Anna, but he listened with complaisance to the detail and amount of her wealth, which she offered with her hand. It was an affair of three millions. The age of the bride disappeared, and the absence of personal charms was amply atoned for by such a fortune. Sir Edward accepted, and the wedding has just been celebrated.

A Border Lay, after Pope.

Now is the early hour of fragant morn,
When children howl, and sing their matin psalm;
And now the youngest—only six months born,
Begins to cry, and sound his loud alarm.

The father wakes and d——s the little boy,
And loudly calls for housemaid or for nurse:
They both rush in, with horror and with joy:—
Joy for the infant—horror for the curse!

The mother takes the infant to her breast,
And tries to calm him with some baby-talk.
The father seeks to mend his broken rest,
And leaves the mother on her cold night walk.

The babe asleep is quickly put to bed,—
The mother tries to snatch some short repose,
While papa, buried in the bed-clothes to his head,
Is snoring like a Stentor through his nose.

ECONOMY.—"Dick, where were you yesterday?" "Oh, moving." "What, moving again?" "Yes, I find it cheaper to pay a hand-cartman for moving than it is to pay rent."

☞"Dear father, I am sick—confined by a billious fever!" wrote a son to a father, lately. He was in jail for debt at the time.

KENDALL OF THE PICAYUNE, AND "MUSTANG" OF THE DELTA.—"Mustang," the army corespondent of th New Orleans Delta, thus humorously explains the manner in which himself and Kendall were "horribly wounded."

"Among others of the unfortunate wounded who are doing remarkably well, is Mr. Kendall, of the Picayune, volunteer aid-de-camp to Gen. Worth, and your modest but humble servant. Mr. Kendall you will find in the list of wounded slightly. I do not think his wound was considered dangerous from the first, as the ball struck him 'right plump in his horse's ear!' and at the present time he looks to be in as fine health and spirits as I have ever seen him, and as well as a "war-worn soldier" might expect to be. I was so unfortunate myself as to be struck right in my horse's saddle; but the ball was spent and did not go through the saddle-skirt; therefore, as yet, "I have not suffered any inconvenience from it." I also happened to be caught in bad company at the garita, and, with several others, was knocked head-over-heels by the explosion of a shell, but being in a hurry to pick myself up, I trod upon an officer, who pettishly said I had "no business there anyhow!" therefore I don't count that as anything, as I hurt somebody else worse than I was hurt myself; now, having "taken a bath, brushed off the smoke and dust of battle," and between good liquor, good cigars, and a moderate share of the balance of the good things of this world, "am as comfortable as might be expected under the existing circumstances." Having neglected to have my name put down on the list of wounded until after it had been made out, that all the world, and "my numerous friends in particular," might know that "I, too, was hurt," will excuse this paragraph from your modest correspondent."

HORRIBLE!—'Twas night—darkness had spread her sable mantle o'er hill and valley, and nought was to be heard but the melancholy wail of the night owl as he sent forth his lonely vesper from the deserted castle; thick clouds hung ominously over the land, not permitting a single star to peep through the peerless gloom—all nature seemed as though in silent expectation of some direful event; twas an hour in which disembodied spirits roam about silently visiting the deserted habitations of men; an hour suited to the black designs of the assassin! who hesitates not to imbrue his hands in the blood of his fellow man. Pistonel sat by his fire-side, thinking on the gloom of the night; his heart filled with the melancholy forebodings which naturally suggest themselves to one's mind in an hour like this! But hark! he hears a sound!—as though it were the expiring groan of some poor victim of the midnight assassin. Pistonel draws his sword and rushes towards the door—he halts, and cautiously raises the latch, and listens—the sound is repeated—he grasps his sword tighter, and rushes out—and, the little pig carried up his tail and ran like the d—l!

"So, old Dr. Quill is dead," said Mrs. Partington, as she put an extra piece of butter to her bread, "they do say that he died of information on the brain—but they mustn't try to make me believe sich an improbable story as that—information on the brain, truly! why, he was the greatest fool I know on—I can't help laughing at his presumptuous ignorance; why, didn't he, at one of his lectures one cold night last winter, try to make me believe, together with the rest of a large and spectable ordinance, that the Sun was then nearer the earth than it would be in the hottest day in summer! and didn't he try to suppress on my mind, when he called on me, that time was money! Oh, the dolt! Why there's cousin Slow—he has his whole time—he never was known to do anything but loaf—and the Lord knows how poor he is. Oh, you can't make me believe sich stuff. I wonder what will carry me off, if he died of information!" and she arose from the table flushed with excitement.—Boston Post.

"Breeches of faith!" screamed Mrs. Partington, as she heard that term applied to Mexican violations of the armistice. "Well, I wonder what they will have next. I have heard tell of cloaks of hypocrisy, and robes of purity, but I never heard of breeches of faith before. I hope they're made of something that wont change and ware out as old Deacon Gudgeon's faith did, for his was always changing. He went from believing that nobody would be saved to believing that all would be, and at last turned out a phrenologer and did'nt believe in nothing! Wonder if it is as strong as cassimere!" and she bit off her thread, and prepared a new needle full.—Boston Post.

THE CREDIT SYSTEM.—The most remarkable case of a failure to appreciate the services of a man to the public has recently come under our notice. The individual alluded to called at a bar and ordered a lunch with a glass of old rye to wash it down. The bar attendant asked for the pic or a half dime, but the man said he must have advocated in hundreds of speeches, and in the columns of newspapers: namely, the credit system. It was a no go—credit was refused him. The dimeless philosopher exclaimed: "who could have believed, after all the mental labor which I have bestowed towards the advancement of credit and confidence among men, that credit should be refused me for a creature comfort costing FIVE cents; but so it is."—N. O. National.

THE ODDS AGAINST CHARITY.—A correspondent of the St. Louis Reveille realtes the following story of an Irishman, who, while in Canada, went to church, and after the sermon a collection was taken up. The narrator says:

"Well, round comes a box wid a hole in it—not a plate, you understand—and the priest kept lookin' at me, hard, and I had nothing in my vest pocket but eight sovereigns and one English shillin'—the same sized coin, d'ye mind—and I had not the face to take all out before him and give him the shillin'; I'd a blushed to have done it, my boy—besides, you know, it was'nt a plate, had I wished to make change; so here goes, says I, and I put my fingers on the first coin, without feelin', and see now the vilyan's luck: there was eight to one against him, and by the Lord, he got the shillin'!"

JEWISH POETRY.—The first rabbi of the synagogue of Rome, M. Moses Israel Kazzan, who has recently entered on his new office, composed on the occasion, a hymn, which is pronounced by connoisuers a piece of poetry almost worthy to take place beside the psalms of David. Poetical creations in the sacred language are not at all rare among the Israelites of the present day, but what is especially remarkable in the work of M. Kazzan is the subject, which is the Pope, the civic guard, and the present state of affairs in Rome. Some stanzas, expressing a touching gratitude, are consecrated to the head of the Catholic church, who sees only sons in the children of Israel.

REFORMATION IN GERMANY.—Rev. Mr. Herschell, the converted Jew, who several years ago visited this country from England, has recently made a visit to Germany, to gain satisfactory information respecting the true nature of the German Catholic movement. He writes to the Jewish Chronicle—"I have also visited Czerski and Ronge. The former is a sincere man—the latter an inflated fool; he is a decided socialist and infidel, and his idea is, that his system is destined to flourish in the United States of America.

☞"Jacob kissed Rachel, and he lifted up his voice and wept."—Scripture.

If Rachel was a pretty girl, and kept her face clean, we can't see that Jacob had much to cry about.

Laboratory of Thomsonian Botanic Medicine,

No. 20, South Calvert Street—BALTIMORE.

THE first mill erected in the United States for the special purpose of preparing Thomsonian Botanic Medicines.

The subscriber has the largest and most complete assortment of Botanic Medicines in the United States, comprising all the various Compounds and other articles recommended by Dr. S. Thomson. Besides an extensive variety of other approved Botanic Medicines. Having erected his Steam Mills expressly for the above Medicines, he is enabled to sell on the most favorable terms, and warrants his Medicines to be genuine and pure, prepared in the best manner, and clear of any deleterious or poisonous qualities, as he does not admit any thing of that nature about his establishment.

An experience of more than twenty years, in the practice, preparation and compounding of Botanic Medicines, from the very best and purest materials in the market, has afforded him just grounds to flatter himself, that his medicines, after a fair trial, will compete with any which may be offered to the friends of the Botanic cause, within the whole range of our country.

☞It is of great importance, that Practitioners, and others, using Botanic Medicines, should be apprized, that all the articles manufactured at his establishment are pulverized, gum ground,—between an upper and nether mill stone; as the latter process heats, and consequently injures, if it does not destroy, the medical virtues of all articles submitted to such an operation.

On hand all the various Medical Works on the Botanic System, together with a general assortment of Glassware, Syringes, and all the articles connected with the Botanic Cause. Terms Botanic Medicines can be supplied on the most reasonable terms by

MORE PROOF THAT

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP

Will effectually cure the Fever and Ague.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 10th, 1847.

Having used in my own family, Smith's Tonic Syrup or Vegetable Febrifuge for the cure of Ague and Fever, Chills and Fever, as well as having sold on my neighborhood agent cards of it, for the within the last two months, I take pleasure in stating that in no case has it failed to cure, and only cure either in Ague and Fever or Chills and Fever, and I sincerely recommend it to my friends and the public as one of the most valuable and important remedies that I have ever known of. R. BATES, P. M.

JEFFERSON CO., KY., August 1, 1847.

This is to certify that I was afflicted last summer with Ague and Fever, and had then had it for three years, and during that time used every remedy that I could hear of without effect, and despairing of ever getting well, I was induced to try Smith's Tonic Syrup or Vegetable Febrifuge, and by using two bottles, I was entirely restored to my usual good health, and I continue well up to this time. I therefore do not hesitate to recommend it to my friends and the public, as the most effectual and innocent remedy that has ever come to my knowledge. NEWTON STIVERS

PROSPECTUS

For the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfillment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the Capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependent on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its result, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning the vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX.

The CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this form are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the APPENDIX. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to revel his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The APPENDIX is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, and all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE, and usually makes about the same number of pages during a session.

During the last month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and one of the APPENDIX; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three numbers of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete Indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original subscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS

For one copy of the Congressional Globe - - -	$2 00
For one copy of the Appendix - - - -	2 00
For six copies of either, or part of both - - -	10 00

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked around with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books for one copy of the Congressional Globe and Appendix during the session.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out. Therefore, no person need consume time in writing for them, unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 13th of December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

Prospectus of the CONGRESSIONAL REGISTER.

WITH the commencement of the 30th Congress, we propose to continue the Congressional Register on the same plan as published during the last session. It will contain a full and accurate report of the business proceedings of Congress, together with sketches of the debates which take place in each house. The next Congress will be one of the most important which has assembled for years, and it is our determination to give to the people a complete history of their proceedings, and at such a low price that every person who takes an interest in the acts of that body can procure a copy. It is believed that the 1st session of the 30th Congress will continue at least eight months; and we therefore propose to issue weekly, on a mammoth sheet, octavo form, their proceedings at the unprecedenced low rate of

One Dollar per copy for the Session.

The Weekly Union for the Session.

This publication is not only the cheapest, but it contains more valuable reading matter than is to be found in any other Weekly published at the same price in the country. Besides the politics of the day, it contains all the late and important news, both foreign and domestic; and its commercial articles are not equalled. It will also contain a complete synoptical summary of the proceedings of both Houses of Congress, and be furnished to subscribers at the low rate of

One Dollar and twenty-five cents per copy for the Session.

Clubs will be furnished with ten copies for ten dollars.

All subscriptions must be paid in advance.

Postmasters by sending us five subscribers for either of the above publications, will be entitled to one copy gratis.

INDIANAPOLIS STEAM FACTORY.

THE subscribers having leased for a term of years the building well known by the name of the Old Steam Mill, situated in front of White River bridge, Indianapolis, which they have fitted up for a Woollen Factory, where they purpose manufacturing woollen goods of various kinds. All those who wish to get their wool spun into yarn, or manufactured into cloth or woollen goods of any kind, can be accommodated on good terms by giving them a call. They would also inform the public that they have three sets of carding machines for carding wools, they being all new and in good order. Therefore they will warrant satisfaction to all who may favor them with their work. Persons living at a distance, by calling at this factory, can have their wool carded without delay, by giving a few hours' notice. They will also be prepared to full and finish cloths of any kind, or color, in good style. They will keep on hand woollen goods of their own manufacture, such as Cloths, Satinetts, Tweeds, Jeans, Blankets, plaid and plain Flannels; all of which they will exchange for Wool or good Country Produce of any kind. They will give the highest market price for wool and produce, and sell goods of their manufacture as low as any goods of the same quality can be bought for in Indianapolis. All those who may have full Wood Saxony and Merino wool to card or manufacture, can have it done in good order at this factory, as they have machinery expressly for such wool. Good wood and produce of all kinds will be taken in exchange for work.

To all whom it may concern.

Dr. M'Lane's Liver Pills.

MESSRS. J. KIDD & Co.—This is to certify that my wife has been afflicted for several years, with the following pains at periods more or less:—Pain in the right side, about the edge of the ribs, extending to the right shoulder; pain in the back part of the head, and above the right eye, accompanied by weakness, loss of appetite, and almost constantly confined to her bed. Since August she has used three boxes of "M'Lane's Liver Pills," and I have now to state, that by the use of these Pills, she has been benefitted in no ordinary degree. Under the Providence of God she now enjoys good health, and is now able to attend to the domestic concerns of my family. JAMES STEWART.

DR. M'LANE'S VERMIFUGE!

PARIS, Ky., March 3, 1847.

MESSRS. J. KIDD & Co.—Gents.—In the month of July last a Mr. F. Mastin, of this place, requested me to act as his agent for the sale for selling Dr. M'Lane's highly approved Medicine, and the motive that prompts me, an entire stranger, to write this letter to your house, is to inform you, that the inhabitants of this town and county, generally, have given the Vermifuge of Dr. M'Lane a fair trial in every possible, and pronounce it to be, without an exception, the best Worm Medicine they ever offered to those afflicted with worms.

The high estimation in which the Vermifuge is held in this community has induced me to purchase it in future from you, or your Agent, and you will oblige me greatly by writing, by return mail, your cash price for the Vermifuge by the gross.

Very respectfully yours, J. C. SNYDER.

The Graefenberg Vegetable Pills.

☞ 20,000 boxes sold each and every week!!!

THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY

HERE give notice, that their General Agent is fully prepared to appoint sub-Agents wherever there is no branch of the Company, either on personal application or by mail, post paid. The rapid sale of these celebrated pills, and the extraordinary cures they are constantly effecting, render them, by far, the most popular pill of the age. An Agency will consequently be very Valuable.

The Graefenberg Pills are inconceivably superior to any ever before discovered. In all bilious complaints, in a general derangement of the system, in all disorders which result from a bad state of the blood, these pills are a sovereign remedy.

In the class of diseases called chronic, the Graefenberg Pills achieve their highest triumphs. Here they defy all competition. Entering within the hidden recesses of the system, they quietly but surely purify the blood, root out disease, and give tone and vigor to the body.

Cures are Constantly Effected

By these Pills, in cases where every other means had utterly failed. The most abundant proof of this could be given, but a trial of one box is the best evidence in their favor. They can be ordered and sent by mail, at trifling expense. The price is 25 cents a box. Where two dollars worth are ordered and the money remitted the Company will pay the postage on the Pills. Remittances at the Company's risk. Wherever there is no Agency of the Company they can be ordered by mail.

These Pills are taking the place of all others, and no sick person should be without them.

All Bilious Complaints,

BOWEL COMPLAINTS CONSTIPATION, DYSPEPSIA, FEVER AND AGUE, HEADACHE, JAUNDICE, LIVER COMPLAINTS, RHEUMATISM, SLEEPLESSNESS, STOMACH COMPLAINTS, GREEN SICKNESS, &c. &c., yield at once to these Pills. They purge away offensive humors, arrest the
