WICHITA MARKETS.

The Receipts of Stock at the Wichita Union Stock Yards for the past 24 Hours Were as Follows: 5 Cattle, 2176 Hogs. Shipments: None.

There were only a few cattle received at the yards today. The market was inactive for the want of something to work on, but it certainly would have been strong on good stock, as several buyers wanted such stuff. There is a lively demand for all kinds of good cattle at strong prices.

HOGS.

The run of hogs today exceeded expectations both as to numbers and quality. There were not, however, too many for the demand, nor were they too good to suit the buyers. There was a greater range in prices than usual, there being a greater difference in the quality of the various lots. A load averaging 315 pounds brought $5.12½, but they were very smooth hogs, and more like them would have sold at the same price. The early sales today were made at about steady prices, but reported eastern raises caused an advance here of 5 cents, and all hogs, except the first offerings, went over the scales at this advance. Tops today, $5.12½; bulk, $4.90@5.05. Light hogs sold 5 and 10 cents higher today. There were comparatively few lights among the offerings. The market closed about steady at the advance, some of the late arrivals not being sold.

There were several loads of fair packing hogs on today's market.

The local packing houses bought 1,841 hogs today.

A year ago today the receipts were 1,213, and the top price $4.05.

The big and smooth bunch of hogs that sold for $5.12½, were brought in by Crawford & Miller, from Garden Plain. They were an excellent lot, all smooth, and averaged nearly 316 pounds. Such hogs are in demand here all the time at the price.

Ingersoll on California.

In a recent magazine article, Mr. Ernest Ingersoll, the noted writer, says:

"The climate of Southern California in winter closely resembles that of Egypt. Its equability is constant, and its dryness is proverbial. The only complaint made is that it is too nearly perfect. Residents bred in the eastern states confess now and then that a rousing storm would give them a grateful sensation. But this sentiment meets with no favor from the man who has just fled from a superfluity of wetness and chilling gales. To him perpetual summer seems perpetual paradise, and to the invalid dreading the advance of disease, the still, arid atmosphere is as the breath of life."

The most comfortable way to reach the Pacific coast is via Santa Fe Route. Weekly excursions in Pullman tourist sleepers at low rates. Apply to G. T. Nicholson, G. P. & T. A., Topeka, Kan., for folder. 93

LEGENDARY WORLDS.

Expeditions Set Out from the Canary Islands to Discover Them.

Stories of legendary worlds have at all times possessed a fascination for most minds and formed the subject of much curious speculation. However childish such tales may seem at the present day, "they once wielded sufficient sway," says M. Flamarian in his "History of the Heavens," "over men's minds as to gain their belief in the veritable existence of the places described, and in this way to influence their astronomical and cosmographical ideas."

Many such legends originated when geography was in its infancy and the greater part of the world's surface still unknown. From that time, too, travelers like Sir John Mandeville excited curiosity by relating discoveries which they professed to have made in their distant journeying, and which those who received them readily accepted as facts.

In process of, time these mythical accounts were gradually circulated from one country to another and became interwoven with the traditions of the people among whom they were told. Hence, in one form or another, we find in most parts of the world numerous stories of legendary worlds still current, survivals of which may be traced to the literature of modern times. Thus, going back to early days, the poets and philosophers of Greece and Rome gave detailed accounts of the land whither mortals wend their way when this life is over, enumerating its rivers, its lakes, its woods and mountains.

Accordingly, Ulysses was said to reach the place of the dead by crossing the ocean to the Cimmerian land, Æneas to have entered it by the Lake Avernus, whereas Xenophon informs us that Hercules went there by the peninsula of Arechusade. In early times the Canary Islands were regarded as the neighborhood of the terrestrial home of the blessed dead, and many wonderful stories were told of this enchanted locality.

Thus, as Washington Irving writes: "Occasionally this enignatical spot would be visible from their shores, stretching far away in the clear bright west, to all appearance substantial like themselves and still more beautiful. Expeditions would launch forth from the Canaries to explore this land of promise. For a long time its sun gilt peaks and shadowy promontories would remain distinctly visible, but in proportion as the voyagers approached peak and promontory would gradually fade away until nothing would remain but blue sky above and deep blue water below."

This legendary land was, as the Portuguese and Spanish declared, an island which had sometimes been lighted upon by accident, but when sought for could not be found. But a king of Portugal is said to have made a conditional surrender of it to another when it should be discovered, and when the kingdom of Portugal ceded to the Castilian crown its rights over the Canaries the treaty included the island of Brandam, described as the island which had not yet been found.—London Standard.

Queer Filling.

There are numbers of dentists in New York who ought to be sawing wood. I had a friend tell me about a week ago of a severe pain in a tooth which he had only recently had filled. He argued that it could not be the tooth, because he had only a few days before sat in the dentist's chair. The dentist was unknown to him, and had been selected because his office was next the place where my friend boards. I advised him to go to a first class dental practitioner, which he did. Next day he said to me: "Do you know what was the matter with my tooth? That fellow up by my boarding house did not clean the tooth out before he filled it. He had left pieces of cotton in the cavity and had piled the gold in on top of it. No wonder it ached."—New York Press.

England's Early Coins.

When England was being made into mince meat and blocks of real estate by the Saxons and Danes silver and brass were in use as currency, but the Normans subsequently installed the aristocratic metal and left the democratic brass to take care of itself. Gold was first coined by Henry III, and copper made into British coin in 1672. Tin was used for coinage in 1680, and the national farthing was made of this Cambrian product, with a stud of copper set in the center. In 1690 and 1691 tin half pence were issued in considerable quantities. The only pure gold coins issued in English history were those of Henry III.—Age of Steel.

Cutting Behind.

When we charge a youngster with "cutting behind" we make a charge that cannot be proved. Every boy knows that the cutting behind is done by the man who sits in front with the whip. He cuts behind at the boy who hangs on behind, but the latter is used to it, and enjoys his ride as much as he does the jealousy of his companion afoot, who out of revenge yells, "Cut behind!" to the driver, and then maliciously informs the teacher that it was the boy who cut behind.—Harper's Young People.

She Never Had Seen It.

The other day a little girl was saying her commandments. "For in six days," she repeated rapidly, "the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and allthatinthemiz." Then she stopped. "Mamma," she said, "I've seen the heaven, and the earth, and the sea, but I never saw any allthatinthemiz. Where does God keep that?" The child had really believed that there was a certain separate creation called "allthatinthemiz" that she had never been able to find.—New York Evening Sun.

ATCHISON PHILOSOPHY.

Do not imagine that every man who says nothing approves of your conduct.

In the way of respect we owe others no more nor less than we owe ourselves.

Whenever you find a man who says that honesty does not pay it is a sign that he has never tried it.

It is never very easy to forgive an enemy; it is impossible to forgive him when he continues to prosper.

It usually happens that the private opinion a man has about any one is the opinion that he loses no time in making public.

The trouble with the men of thirty is that they are so occupied advising the men of twenty that they have no time to heed the men of forty.
