New Directories on File in The Bulletin Office.

New directories of the following cities have recently been placed in the business directory file of The Bulletin company: Baltimore, Cincinnati, Rochester, Omaha, City, Sioux City, Helena, New York City, Providence, Bristol, New Britain, Orange, Winsted, Ansonia, Derby, Shelton and Danbury.

Today's Bill at the Auditorium.

The management of this popular theater promises a very pleasing vaudeville bill for the first half of this week with the Whitmans as a special feature. These clever people present a contortion act which is as far above the average contortion turn as the stars are above the earth. It is original, spectacular and away from all others, appearing in a special setting of a very weird nature, but very pretty and well titted out with electrical effects, these loose jointed acrobats start things, working in the guise of snakes, alligators, etc., which makes the act very interesting as well as an exceptionally good spectacular novelty. The Harcourt Sisters will present a very neat singing and dancing turn which will please all and with the others on the bill the entire show should be a very pleasing one. The management will offer a very attractive programme for Christmas week, opening on Monday, the 26th, of which more will be said later. The photoplays today will be very interesting.

About the Poli Players.

Beginning this afternoon, and continuing all week, with daily matinees, the Poli Players will offer for the second week of their engagement in this city a complete production of Edwin Milton Royle's The Squaw Man. This play is one of the most virile, tense and dramatic western plays that has been given the stage in recent years, and in the hands of the splendid company that Mr. Poli has organized for this city should be a tremendous success. The mounting of the play, the scenery, properties and effects are deserving of special notice and will be sure to attract the attention of the public to Scenic Artist Roemer and Stage Director Selley, under whose personal direction the entire production has been made. The leading role that was played by William Faversham and Dustin Farnum at different times to great success in New York and on the road will be in the hands of Robert LeSueur, while the opposite feminine character will be played by Gertrude Perry. All who saw these clever artists in The Lion and the Mouse will want to see them again in other roles, and the same is true of S. E. Cairns, whose portrayal of the character of John Burkett Ryder during the past week has been the talk of the town. Mr. Cairns will have an excellent part in The Squaw Man, that of Big Bill, the foreman of the cow punchers on Jim Carstone's ranch. The part of Little Hal, Jim's son, will present a little girl of exceptional talent from Norwich, Rosana Morris. The balance of the members of the company will be seen in strong character roles, while a number of extra persons secured from New York city for this one production will be necessary to complete the cast.

For Christmas day Monday, Dec. 26, and entire week following, the company will present the play that gave Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott one of their greatest successes when they were starring jointly, When We Were Twenty-One. The Christmas matinee will be the same as a regular night performance and the seats will be reserved. Tickets can now be secured for either the matinee or night performance, but telephone orders will not be held later than Saturday night.

BREED THEATER.

The Little Station Agent is the title of the thrilling feature picture at the Breed theater today and tells the sensational story of a pretty little miss who is the station agent of a country village and her two brakemen admirers. They become angered during a discussion of her on the top of a rapidly moving freight car and the stronger one fells the other, and to conceal his guilt cuts loose the cars with the body on it, permitting it to run away. The victim recovers consciousness during the flight and signals to a station agent while passing and he in turn telegraphs ahead to the little station agent, who mounts a high speed track auto and dashes to the oncoming car and sidetracks it just in time to save the Overland Limited and the life of her favored suitor. Miss Mabel Gilman, soprano, will be heard in illustrated songs.

Help the Slater School!

The trustees of the Slater Industrial school for negroes at Winston-Salem, N. C., have written me that the state has offered to give the school $12,000 if they would raise the same amount. The negroes say if the $24,000 is raised and put into material they will do the labor free.

The leading white people of the town have engineered the school from the beginning and have taxed themselves to the extreme limit to bring the institution up to its present capacity of 462 students. They cannot possibly raise the $12,000 without outside aid.

It is a sad sight to see the negro boys and girls turned away daily for lack of accommodations. The salutary effect of the school has eliminated every vestige of race friction in the vicinity. This industrial institution has solved the knotty race problem completely for this community at least. It would be a calamity, and a great one, to the negroes to fail to double the capacity of the plant by the above plan.

It is not, however, a local affair, but a national one, and every patriotic citizen who slips a dollar or more in an envelope and mails it to the treasurer of the school, William A. Blair, vice president of the People's National bank, Winston-Salem, N. C., can feel that he is aiding in a work of great importance. If the trustees are enabled to embrace the state's offer the capacity of the school will be doubled.—J. P. Hawley, in New York Tribune.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Some Pictures in Water Colors.

Mr. Editor: Now while we are drinking Mohegan water, has anybody seen old Uncas' face mirrored in the water, saddened over the palefaces' folly?

And, furthermore, has anyone seen him, while thus mirrored, holding out the necessary wampum to pay for the palefaces's indiscretion?

His kindly nature towards our ancestors might suggest as much; so let's take the camera of imagination and catch the picture, if we can. It may give us satisfaction, till the tax collector comes along. He is a paleface, you know, that we fear more than "Injune."

If our old and well-tried friend Uncas will do all that, let's take him, as soon as we can lay hold on him, into our water-impoverished wigwams and treat him, as soon as we get it, to the best "New England run," or "Adam's ale," that was ever brought in pipes (or, perhaps, in bottles) from his favorite old resort, Trading cove.

Yes, let's give the old sachem a drink and smoke the calumet, to keep on good terms with him, while we make merry in downing and drowning our water troubles.

C. H. TALCOTT.

Norwich, Dec. 17, 1910.

A Grateful Community.

Mr. Editor: Will you kindly allow me space in your paper to say that during this dry spell, when there is no water for drinking purposes in our houses, an exceedingly kind and gracious act has been performed by Mr. Henry F. Ulmer, secretary and treasurer of the Ulmer Leather company, in allowing people to obtain fine pure spring water at the tannery; further than that, he has been to the expense of putting in a pipe so that the water can easily be obtained. The people of the West Side are very grateful to him for his kindness.

Sincerely,

JOSEPH F. COBB.

Norwich, Dec. 17, 1910.

Another "Plant System."

That term "Plant system" has a familiar sound, by the way. The Plants, father and son, to a large extent identified with Connecticut, have had their railroad and steamship systems in the south, and have developed them to great enterprises. We have not, until recently, however, had a Plant system in this part of the country.

It is now announced that the connection at Stony Creek between the lines of the Connecticut company and the Shore Line Electric railway is practically completed, and that cars will be running for the public by Christmas, probably. This will give a continuous Shore Line trolley connection between New Haven and the group of communities ten miles or so up from the mouth of the Connecticut river, of which Ivoryton is the center. Meanwhile work will progress in completing the line from Guilford through North Branford and the lower part of North Haven, connecting thence with New Haven, and constituting the main Guilford-New Haven line of the Shore Line Electric railway.

This will then be the most important part of the "Plant system" of electric railways. It will then include besides this the New London-Niantic, the New London-Westerly, the Norwich-Westerly and the Westerly lines. This same interest has, presumably, the charter for connection with the Shore Line from Middletown and Meriden. Before long, it is likely, it will be completing the unfilled links between Niantic and the Connecticut river and between Westerly and Providence. It is expected, moreover, to ask of the incoming legislature many charter rights which will be revelatory of its plans.

Here is a system with possibilities of remarkable reach and backed by ample capital. It may not look very large now, but it has potentialities which may make it an important, though perhaps never a dangerous, rival of the Consolidated railroad's system of trolleys.—New Haven Register.

Governor Baldwin at Washington.

Simeon Eben Baldwin, democratic governor-elect of Connecticut, was much pointed out in Washington yesterday, both at the Capitol and in his tavern. This for the reason that it is rather unusual to elect a democratic governor in the Nutmeg State and also because the career of Judge Baldwin has been very much worth while. Every Yale graduate in Washington, especially the lawyers, was glad to greet him and pay him honor, as he has been a great figure in the law school for 40 years. He served twenty years on the supreme bench of his state, and retired only because Connecticut has a law compelling retirement at the age of 70. He was the founder of the American Bar association, and known by reputation to every lawyer of the nation. Judge Baldwin has reason to be proud of his ancestors, who were famous as lawyers and statesmen, and while he is a little late in getting into the statesmanship class he is vigorous enough at three score and ten to do very well, thank you, in actual politics and state administration. His uncle, William M. Evarts, was senator and secretary of state, and more noted as a lawyer than all else. The great-grandfather of Gov. Baldwin was Roger Sherman, who had much to do with the writing of the Declaration of Independence and the Federal Constitution.

Gov. Baldwin's grandfather on the Baldwin side was a famous judge of the state, and the father was governor, also United States senator. Is it any wonder the coming chief executive of Connecticut is considered fitted for about every honor in the gift of the commonwealth? He was the only democrat elected, thanks in great part to the attack made on him by Colonel Roosevelt, who rather overdid it in calling Baldwin a foe to labor. There was a reaction in Baldwin's favor, and he can thank the labor vote for his election.—From the Washington Post, December 17, 1910.

Arizona's Constitution.

Arizona, one of the two new states that starts in business on New Year's day, has a constitution with the following progressive trimmings:

Initiative and referendum.

Amendment to the constitution by a majority vote of the people upon the initiative of fifteen per cent. of the voters.

Recall of all elective officers.

Direct primaries.

Direct advisory primary for United States senators.

Anti-lobbying clause.

Non-partisan election of the judiciary.

Juvenile court with the age of criminal responsibility at eighteen.

Rigid corporation regulation with a provision designed to abolish "wild-catting."

Physical valuation of railroads as a basis for rate regulation.

Corporation commission with wide powers.

Employers' liability provision abrogating the fellow servant doctrine.

Elimination of probate courts.

Arizona will be the governmental experiment garden of the American union. Several states are trying out one or more of these innovations but here they are all being put into force at once in a new sovereignty.

Will Arizona state politics thereby be pure and holy from the beginning? They will not unless the voters of Arizona are free from original sin and selfishness. The government of a community is after all and always what the voters make it or allow it to be made. Nevertheless, there is no reason to regret that all these experiments are to be tried at once. It will test out some new theories of statecraft with results that are bound to interest and instruct sister states.

Medical Inspection of Schools.

Further proof of the usefulness of medical inspection of the public schools may not be needed than we have right here in our own city of Ansonia, but if it were needed one would not have to go farther than Bridgeport to round out a very formidable argument in favor of the continuance and perfecting of this system throughout the state. Dr. Florence Sherman, medical inspector in the Park City, has just rendered a report in which she alleges that there are schools in that city whose floors are never washed, whose desks have never been cleansed, whose janitors sweep without opening the windows, whose school children use a common drinking cup, and whose buildings are thoroughly unsanitary and badly kept; and as if this were not enough, she reports that out of 9,463 pupils examined up to the present time, she found 2,709 defective and 876 suffering from some ailment which necessitated the pupil being excluded from school. Some of the data she gives relative to ailing pupils is as follows: Defective teeth, 1,779; enlarged tonsils, 1,553; adenoids, 960; pediculosis, 407; defective vision, 76; defective hearing, 54; lymph nodes, 23; chorea, 11; orthopedic defects, 29; defective palate, 8;

Why Aldrich's Change of Front?

The next house would not be inclined to follow the recommendations of a tariff commission created by the present congress, and it could do nothing with the tariff schedules, any way, without the concurrence of the republican senate. So the schedules would probably remain as they are during the two years to end with March 4, 1913, and the tariff commission meanwhile could do nothing but investigate and advise—but without any results at all. Neither of the two parties has even declared for a tariff commission. Both national platforms for 1908 are silent on the subject. Is Senator Aldrich's apparently sudden conversion to the idea really a move to get credit for the republican party for the creation of such a commission and to get another batch of good republicans onto the government payroll while there is yet a chance?—New York Commercial, independent republican.

POETRY.

WHEN THE WIVES COME HOME.

It's a different world from base to dome,
It's a sweeter land, when the wives come home.
The grind don't seem like it used to seem,
And the old home smiles in the arms of dream;
When the wives come home, when the wives come home.
It's a different world, from base to dome!

They're a lot of care and a heap of trouble,
But life's empty world and a bursted bubble
When they go away and they stay too long,
And the heart grows sick for the home-sure song;
It's a different world when we're all alone,
And the wives have flown, the wives have flown!

It's a sunnier place to spend our lives
When the old home shines with the sweet old wives
And our hearts know, through the froth and foam,
What a joy it is when the wives come home!
How the sunlight breaks, and we feel its cheer,
When we know that the lips we love lean near!

—Chicago Tribune.

STUDENT SONG.

Translated from the Latin and adapted to The Norwich Free Academy and the other schools of Norwich by Andrew J. Hetrick.

Tune—Gaudeamus.

Let's rejoice, while we are young
With the friends beside us—
For when youth has fled away,
And we're grown infirm and gray,
Then the ground will hide us.

Where are all who long ago
In the world resided?
Sail across the Stygian deep,
Seek Olympus' sunny steep,
There are homes provided.

Mortal life is short indeed,
Short and full of anguish;
Cruel Death comes on apace,
Crushes all in his embrace,
Leaving none to vanquish.

Health to our Academy,
School of classic learning!
Long may its professors grace,
Each his highly honored place,
Many plaudits earning!

Cheer we, too, the other schools,
Blessings on them ever!
Richly may their teachers fare,
With us people kindly bear,
Honor failing never!

Health to all the maidens fair;
Beautiful and charming;
Health to all the matrons, too,
Ever tender, kind and true,
Us with courage arming!

Let the Great Republic live,
And the men who guide it;
Let our state be always strong
In the fight against vice and wrong,
And no ill betide it!

Perish envy, perish hate,
Perish gloomy sadness;
Down with strife and scoffing, too,
Impish and Philistine crew,
That would mar our gladness!

Why this concourse here tonight
Of our friends and brothers?
Graduates from far and near
Gather here today
At their common mother's.

Alma Mater flourish long,
May thy graduates ever
Thine to gather in the youth,
Train them in the ways of truth,
Guarding them from sinning!

Canterbury, Conn.

Clever Sayings

Teacher—What is a short ton? Pupil—A ton of coal.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

First Child—Do you believe in a Santa Claus? Second Child—No, but I believe in my father's earning capacity.—Life.

"I don't believe there is an honest hair in his head." "That's right. I believe he'd even cheat at checkers."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"They're going to put Poe in the Hall of Fame at last." "Who are?" "Why—I forgot their names."—Cleveland Leader.

Mrs. Strong—John! Do you hear me? Mr. Strong (meekly)—Yes, love. Mrs. Strong—There is a little corner torn off your pay check this week. What did you spend it for?—Puck.

He—They say that the face is an index of the mind. She—I don't know. It doesn't follow because a woman's face is made up that her mind is.—Boston Transcript.

"The captain of that football team is an unusual man." "Is that so?" "Yes, he didn't shed tears when his team lost."—Detroit Free Press.

Beneath the moon he told his love
The color left her cheeks;
But on the shoulder of his coat
It showed up plain for weeks.
—Columbia Jester.

"Do you believe in Santa Claus, little boy?" "How long is it till Christmas?" "Only about three weeks." "Butcher life I do."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"Why did you shoot at me?" "Took you for a deer." "Didn't you see my red coat?" "Yes, and I thought it odd that a deer should be wearing a red coat."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Hotel Clerk—Beg pardon, sir, but what is your name? The Visitor—Why, you idiot, haven't I just put my signature on the register? The Hotel Clerk—Yes, that is what aroused my curiosity.—Sketch.

MUCH IN LITTLE

The city of Hartford, Conn., began this fall a systematic planting of trees on its public thoroughfares. The matter is in charge of the city forester, who will first inspect the streets to find out where trees are most needed. A city nursery will be opened later.—Boston Common.
