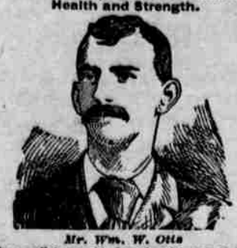
After Pneumonia

Catarrh, Abscesses, and Dyspepsia

Hood's Sarsaparilla Gave Robust Health and Strength.



Mr. Wm. W. Otis

Is a well known blacksmith of Trenton, N. J. He writes illustrating the great building up, blood purifying powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla after serious illness:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I am pleased to make a statement of my experience with Hood's Sarsaparilla. I am a blacksmith and contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia. Before I got over the illness, two large abscesses gathered on my limbs. Different medicines failed to do me any good. Catarrh and dyspepsia

Made Me Very Weak

and I lost flesh. I was advised to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before I had used a bottle I began to feel better. I continued and have taken five bottles and it has cured me of all my troubles and made me perfectly well. I now have a good appetite and weigh five pounds heavier than ever before. I cannot recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla too highly." WM. W. OTIS, 802 Roebling Street, Trenton, New Jersey.

GOOD RACES.

Satisfactory Meeting on the 17th at the Park.

The STAR of Friday published the results of the first four races at Kapiolani. These were, the mile handicap, won by George Angus; the juvenile handicap in which Fred Iaukea had a walkover; the five mile bicycle lap, won by Giles; and the running half-mile and repeat horse race, won by Billy C.

The next race was one of the most interesting and surprised many people. Macfarlane's Salvator, Patterson's colt Judah and Unknown were the favorites in the race of four. Considerable time was spent in getting a start, and the race was finally begun with Judah in the rear. From the start, however, the mare got down to her metal, gradually gained on her leaders, successfully passed them and was an easy winner at the end. Time, 2:41¾. The second heat was also won by Judah in 2:40½, giving her the Hawaiian record for 3 minute horses.

In the 2:40 class race Quinn's 290 had an easy victory, after getting the best of some jockeying. The first heat was won in 2:41½ and the third in 2:40. This record could have been broken. 290 stood a good show to win the second race also, but met with a slight accident. It goes without saying that Mr. Quinn is now ready to back 290 against the country for horses in the same class.

The final race was the hottest and most exciting of all. Billy C. and Confederate entered. Both horses were pushed to their limits and each quarter was fought for. Billy C. made every quarter and the wire. The purse was $25 for each quarter. The backers of Confederate are not satisfied and are aching for another chance at Billy C. They have put up a forfeit at the Criterion Saloon where a challenge will hold open until Monday evening.

Go to the Woman's Exchange for a noon lunch. Home made provisions of all kinds, bread, cake, pie, doughnuts, rolls, poi, hot tea, etc. 111 King street. Lunch from 11:30 to 1:30.

ZAMLOCH.

Has Good Houses—Farewell Show To night.

Zamloch had a large house last night. A number of passengers by the Alameda were present. The program had been carefully revised, as is the case each evening, and a number of exceedingly clean feats were performed. Applause greeted each number, and enthusiasm frequently burst forth amid acts. None were more charmed with the evening's entertainment than those who had attended regularly.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon Zamloch will give a matinee for ladies and children. The program for this occasion will be modified so that the little fellows may comprehend it. This evening the final entertainment of the season will be given. Reserved seats are on sale. The performance will begin at 8 sharp. Prof. Zamloch goes to Hawaii on Tussday and will not have the opportunity of appearing again before an audience in the city.

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act a time, but finally injure the system.

A Set of Rogues.

It is a tale of life in old England, with adventures in Spain and Algiers that will stir the blood and please the fancy.

GENERAL DEBILITY and Indigestion

Made Her Life Miserable, but She is Cured by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Read the testimony of Mrs. E. G. Monro, Coburg, Victoria, whose portrait is also given:

"Some few years ago I suffered terribly with indigestion and general debility. I could not sleep, and my condition was such as to make my life miserable. None of the many remedies I tried did me any good, and I despaired of ever getting better. One of my friends told me of the blood-purifying and strength-giving properties of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and I began taking it. Before I had finished the first bottle I felt better, and was thus encouraged to give the medicine a thorough trial. In all I used four bottles, and then was perfectly cured of the grievous trouble which had afflicted me. I now recommend, to anyone suffering as I did.

An Old Soldier's Recommendation.

In the late war I was a soldier in the First Maryland Volunteers, Company G. During my term of service I contracted chronic diarrhœa. Since then I have used a great amount of medicine, but when I found any that would give me relief it would injure my stomach, until Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhœa Remedy was brought to my notice. I used it and will say it is the only remedy that gave me permanent relief and so bad results follow. I take pleasure in recommending this preparation to all of my old comrades, who, while given their services to their country, contracted this dreadful disease as I did, from eating unwholesome and uncooked food. Yours truly, A. E. BENDING, Halsey, Oregon. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers—BENSON, SMITH & Co., Agents, for H. I.

Yale's Hair Tonic

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: It affords me great pleasure to call the attention of the public to my Yale's Hair Tonic, which is the first and only remedy known to chemistry which positively turns gray hair back to its original color without dye. I personally indorse its action and give the public my solemn guarantee that it has been tested in every conceivable way, and has proved itself to be the ONLY Hair Specific. It STOPS HAIR FALLING immediately and creates a luxurious growth. Contains no injurious ingredient. It is not sticky or greasy; on the contrary, it makes the hair soft, youthful, fluffy, keeps it in curl and removes dandruff. For gentlemen and ladies with hair a little gray, streaked gray, entirely gray, and with BALD HEADS, it is specially recommended

A SET OF ROGUES
BY FRANK BARRETT

[Copyright, 1895, by Macmillan & Co.]

CHAPTER I.

There being no plays to be acted at the Red Bull, because of the plague, and the players all cast adrift for want of employment, certain of us, to wit, Jack Dawson and his daughter Moll, Red Herring, and myself, clubbed our moneys together to buy a store of dresses, painted cloths, and the like, with a cart and horse to carry them, and thus provided set forth to travel the country and turn an honest penny, in those parts where the terror of pestilence had not yet turned men's stomachs against the pleasures of life. And here, at our setting out, let me show what kind of company we were. First, then, for our master, Jack Dawson, who on no occasion was to be given a second place. He was a hale, jolly fellow, who would eat a pound of beef for his breakfast (when he could get it) and make nothing of half a gallon of ale therewith—a very masterful man, but kindly withal, and pleasant to look at when not contraried, with never a line of care in his face, though turned of 50. He played our humorous parts, but he had a sweet voice for singing of ditties and could fetch a tear as readily as a laugh, and he was also exceeding nimble at a dance, which was the strangest thing in the world, considering his great girth. Wife he had none, but Moll Dawson was his daughter, who was a most sprightly, merry little wench, but no miracle for beauty, being neither child nor woman at this time; surprisingly thin, as if her frame had grown out of proportion with her flesh, so that her body looked all arms and legs, and her head all mouth and eyes, with a great tousled mass of chestnut hair, which (off the stage) was as often as not half tumbled over her shoulder. But a quicker little baggage at mimicry (she woul1 play any part, from an urchin of 10 to a crone of fourscore), or a livelier at dancing of Brantles or the single Coranto never was, I do think, and as merry as a lark.

Of Red Herring I need only here say that he was the most tearing villain imaginable on the stage and off it the most civil spoken, honest seeing young gentleman. Nor need I trouble to give a very lengthy description of myself. What my character was will appear hereafter, and, as for my looks, the less I say about them the better. Being something of a scholar and a poet, I had nearly died of starvation, when Jack Dawson gave me a footing on the stage, where I would play the part of a hero in one act, a lackey in the second and a Merry Andrew in the third, scraping a tune on my fiddle to fill up the intermedios.

We had designed to return to London as soon as the plague abated, unless we were favored with extraordinary good fortune, and so, when we heard that the sickness was certainly past and the citizens recovering of their panic we, being by this time heartily sick of our venture, which at the best gave us but beggarly recompense, set about to retrace our steps with cheerful expectations of better times. But, coming to Oxford, we there learned that a prodigious fire had burned all London down, from the Tower to Ludgate, so that were we there we should find no house to play in. This laid us flat in our hopes and set us again to our vagabond enterprise, and so for six months more we scoured the country in a most miserable plight, the roads being exceedingly foul and folks more humored of nights to drowse in their chimneys than to sit in a draft barn and witness our performances, and then about the middle of February we in a kind of desperation got back again to London, only to find that we must go forth again, the town still lying in ruins and no one disposed to any kind of amusement except in high places, where such actors as we were held in contempt.

So we, with our hearts in our boots, as one may say, set out again to seek our fortunes on the Cambridge road, and here, with no better luck than elsewhere, for at Tottenham Cross we had the mischance to set fire to the barn wherein we were playing, by a candle falling in some loose straw, whereby we did injury to the extent of a shilling or two, for which the farmer would have us pay a pound, and Jack Dawson stoutly refusing to satisfy his demand he sends for the constable, who locks us all up in the cage that night, to take us before the magistrate in the morning. And we found to our cost that this magistrate had as little justice as mercy in his composition, for though he lent a patient ear to the farmer's case, he would not listen to Jack Dawson's argument, which was good enough, being to the effect that we had not as much as a pound among us, and that he would rather be hanged than pay it if he had, and when Red Herring (seeing the kind of Puritanical fellow he was) urged that, since the damage was not done by any design of ours, it must be regarded as a visitation of Providence, he says: "Very good. If it be the will of Providence that one should be scourged, I take it as the divine purpose that I should finish the business to scourge the other." And therewith he orders the constable to take what money we have from our pockets and clap us in the stocks till sundown for payment of the difference. So in the stocks we three poor men were stuck for six mortal hours, which was a wicked, cruel thing indeed, with the wind blowing a sort of rainy snow about our ears, and there I do think we must have perished of cold and vexation but that our little Moll brought us a sheet for a cover, and tired not in giving us kind words of comfort.

At 5 o'clock the constable unlocked us from our vile confinement, and I do believe we should have fallen upon him and done him a mischief for his pains there and then but that we were all frozen as stiff as stones with sitting in the cold so long, and indeed it was some time ere we could move our limbs at all. However, with much ado, we hobbled on at the tail of our cart, all three very bitter, but especially Red Herring, who cursed horridly and as I had never heard him curse off the stage, saying he would rather have staid in London to carry bricks for the gentry than join us again in this damnable adventure, etc. And that which incensed him the more was the merriment of our Moll, who, seated on the side of the cart, could do nothing better than make sport of our discontent. But there was no malice in her laughter, which, if it sprang not from sheer love of mischief, arose maybe from overflowing joy at our release.

Coming at dusk to Edmonton and finding a fine new inn there, called the Bell, Jack Dawson leads the cart into the yard, we following without a word of demur, and after putting up our trap, into the warm parlor we go and call for supper as boldly as you please. Then, when we had eaten and drunk till we could no more, all to bed like princes, which, after a night in the cage and a day in the stocks, did seem like a very paradise. But how we were to pay for this entertainment not one of us knew, nor did we greatly care, being made
