here's many a gem unpolished,
And many a star unknown—
Many a bright bud perished,
Neglected and alone—

When, had a word been spoken,
In a kindly, gentle tone,
The bud had bloom'd unbroken—
The gem had graced a throne!

Then oh, scorn not the lowly,
Nor do him any wrong,
Lest thou crush an impulse holy,
Or blight a soul of song!

VISIT
Of the Sloop of War St. Mary's at Apia Navigator's Islands.

We have been permitted to make the following extracts from a letter written by one of the officers of the U. S. Sloop St. Mary's, giving an account of her cruise in the South Pacific, received by the corvette Embuscade:

"Leaving Tahiti, Sept. 6th, 1855, we arrived at Apia (Navigator Islands) on the 14th. We were cordially welcomed, because the U. S. Consul, (one Van Camp) had been abusing his office, as well as abusing the natives. Capt. Bailey formed himself and his officers into a court, on shore, at the house of one of the principal chiefs, and collected together all the complaints between the Consul and the natives, and we rendered our judgments, according to our legal learning and the evidence. Capt. B. was the Judge, Jones the prosecuting Attorney, and we were the jurymen. In almost every case, we decided against the Consul; and in the end, found him a man devoid of all honor and principle. He has since been removed from his office, and a Mr. Jenkins (I think) appointed in his place. These meetings, called fono, gave great satisfaction to the natives, and for many reasons. It was, for instance, the first fono, since the time of Capt. Wilkes, that was held on shore. The usual custom adopted by Captains of men-of-war, among the Navigators and Feejees, has been to order the chiefs and natives on board the vessel. It too often happened that some of these chiefs were detained as prisoners, and all the good that a fono was likely to effect was undone by the act, which too frequently savored of treachery, and perhaps, of timidity. Bailey's course was different. He went boldly on shore, and this very act inspired confidence, and enabled him to dispense justice. All of our decisions, however, were not made in favor of the natives. In many cases they had done wrong. Once they robbed a wrecked schooner, thereby breaking their treaty with Capt. Wilkes. The proofs were conclusive, and we made them pay up the value of the theft, and inflicted a fine, as an exemplary damage which should be appropriated to some public benefit. Our object was to place the amount of this fine ($50) at the disposition of Mr. Murray (the resident missionary). But he refused it, and it was subsequently used for the purpose of building a bridge across a small stream which intercepted the communication between two portions of the harbor-town. This bridge the natives call the "St. Mary's bridge." I relate these things to show how friendly was our intercourse, and how pleasant was the visit to Apia. * * * * *

"I cannot dismiss this short history of our island-cruise without making some general, although personal, reflections that I hope will be interesting to you. The most interesting portions of the South Sea Islands I regard to be the Samoan, or Navigator, group. Their advancement in civilization however is retarded by the neglect of the British Government, and the absence of that zeal, wealth, and political energy, which have always characterised the missionary enterprises of the United States. Had the Samoans a central government, or any government at all, beyond the feudal establishment, which is illustrated by the supposed history of the Hawaiian Islands prior to the wars of Kamehameha I,—had they a code even of written laws, they would now advance as rapidly as the Hawaiian Islanders have done. It seems to me that they are just prepared—ripe for the reception of a government. As well as I can understand the mean of the harvest being ready, I know not where it may be so well illustrated as in Samoa. But they want law—civil law—more than anything else. There is no guide to the native like the Bible. It is a written law; the only one he possesses; and that fact alone is capable of making him yield his life to obey it. Instances are known where the foreigners have imposed upon some ignorant native by quoting some falsely-construed Biblical law, for the purpose of effecting a wicked end. Does the written law command or sanction it? He obeys at once. In fact, the influence of the missionary may be attributable, especially in the first instances, to the eagerness with which the natives received the Bible as a written code. It is thus that the Samoan to-day is in a transition state, which gives to his present history a peculiar interest. What public benefactor will strike now while the iron is hot? * *

"From Apia to Talcahuano—what a change. From the savage Feejee to the polite Spaniard—from what little religion there was in Polynesia, to the religion of forms, ceremonies, and the hey-day of processions, religious bull-fights, Virgin Mary, and holy-water, with consecrated candlesticks. But then, if there was but little religion in Polynesia, still that religion was the Protestant, whose prayer-forms and duties I had been taught in childhood. There was something pleasant, however, in getting back upon the coast of South America, and from the fact that I had acquired a little Spanish, I felt at home at once."

MR. EDITOR,—I take the liberty to send you the enclosed paragraph taken from a late newspaper. If you think that the perusal of the same might exert some beneficial influence in stimulating the exertions of our Agricultural Society for the introduction of insectiverous birds on these islands, you will confer, undoubtedly, a favor on the agricultural community by inserting the enclosed in your next issue.

You perceive that I have now come down to stimulating, which is, after the 30th of July, the milder course of treatment, the more so when a poor devil unaccustomed to the mashine has happened to turn a wrong crank, in lending a hand at galvanizing, and producing a blow—a regular stunner—as almost to upset some irritable and unlogical minds.

BIRDS AS INSECT DESTROYERS.—The activity of birds when they have young is most surprising. Dr. Macgillivray records the observations made by a friend on a pair of blue tit-mice when rearing their young. The parent birds began their labor of love at half-past three o'clock in the morning, and did not leave off till after eight o'clock in the evening, after being almost incessantly engaged for nearly seventeen hours. Mr. Weir counted their various returns to the nest, and found them to be 475. Up to four o'clock, as a breakfast, they were fed twelve times; between five and six, forty times, flying to and from a plantation more than 150 yards from their nest; between nine and ten o'clock, they fed them forty-six times, and they continued at their work till the time specified, sometimes bringing in a single large caterpillar, and at times two or three small ones. The number of destructive insects removed by birds when feeding their young must be astonishing, if they are in any degree as active as the two blue tit-mice so patiently observed by Mr. Weir on the 4th of July, 1837. Great as the number of returns to the nest seems to be, it certainly does not exceed that of the common swallow.—Adam White.
