The Love-Knot.

BY NORA PERRY.

Tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied her raven ringlets in,
But not alone in the silken snare,
Did she catch her lovely floating hair,
For, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.

They were strolling together up the hill,
Where the wind comes blowing merry and chill;
And it blew the curls a frolicksome race,
All over the happy, peach-colored face,
Till, scolding and laughing, she tied them in,
Under her beautiful, dimpled chin.

And it blew a color, bright as the bloom
Of the pinkest fuschia's teasing plume,
All over the cheeks of the prettiest girl
That ever imprisoned a romping curl,
Or, in tying her bonnet under her chin,
Tied a young man's heart within.

Steeper and steeper grew the hill—
Madder, merrier, chillier, still,
The western wind blew down and played
The wildest tricks with the little maid,
As, tying her bonnet under her chin,
Tied a young man's heart within.

Oh, western wind, do you think it was fair
To play such tricks with her floating hair?
To gladly, gleefully, do your best,
To blow her against the young man's breast,
Where he as gladly folded her in,
And kissed her mouth and her dimpled chin?

Go, Ellery Vane, you little thought,
An hour ago, when you besought
This country lass to walk with you,
After the sun had dried the dew,
What perilous danger you'd be in,
As she tied her bonnet under her chin.

VARIETY.

You had better find out one of your own weaknesses, than ten of your neighbors.

When we record our angry feelings, let it be done on the snow, that the first beam of sunshine may obliterate them forever.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE MERCENARY.—Before you marry a lady for her money, consider what an incumbrance you will find your wife, in the event of having lost or spent all she was worth.—Punch.

THE DIFFERENCE.—Sidney Smith says, that "people often imagine themselves pious when they are only bilious."

Kroutslaut, whose liver is out of order, says, "that he thinks Sidney ought to have known the difference between a Serious Disposition and a Serious Indisposition."

"Sal," said one girl to another, "I am so glad I have no beaux, now."

"Why?" asked the other.

"'Cause, I can eat as many onions as I please."

"Much remains unsung," as the tom-cat remarked to the brick bat when it abruptly cut short his serenade.

A young gentleman, the other day, asked a young lady what she thought of the married state in general. "Not knowing, I cannot tell," was the reply; "but if you and I would put our heads together, I could soon give you a definite answer."

Are a man and his wife both one? asked the wife of a certain gentleman, in a state of stupefaction as she was holding his aching head in both hands. "Yes, I suppose so," was the reply. "Well, then," said she, "I came home drunk last night, and I ought to be ashamed of myself."

The conclusion of a six days' sulk.* Outside the house a cat is heard to mew. Husband to the dear one of his bosom.—"Did you speak, dear?" The tea table is suddenly overturned, and broomsticks are prevalent in the domestic atmosphere.

PREFERENCE.—To a fond mother, whose children were at the time making themselves disagreeable, a gentleman observed, "I have a decided preference for bad children, madam." "How strange! And, pray, for what reason?" said she. "Because they are always sent out of the room."

It was Cobbett who said—and he told the truth, too—that woman is never so amiable as when she is useful; and as for beauty, though man may fall in love with girls at play, there is nothing to make them stand in their love like seeing them at work, engaged in the useful offices of the home and family.

The last words of the Old Testament are a fearful threatening:—"Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."

The last words of the New Testament are a benediction:—"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

IRON TOES.—A man who can endure to have his corns mashed without grumbling, is undoubtedly possessed of a heavenly disposition. One of those true Christians being once at a political meeting, he said in a pleasant manner to a big burly fellow who was standing upon his toes:

"My dear sir, are you not a miller?"

"No sir; why did you ask?"

"Why, sir, the fact is, I thought you were a miller, and a very honest one, too, because you have been grinding my corn this half hour without taking toll."

KEEN REJOINDER.—Mr. Buffum of Lynn, Mass., was under cross-examination by an attorney named Lord, who did his best to perplex and browbeat him so as to overthrow the testimony he had given against his client. The question was something relating to machinery, and Mr. Buffum had used the word "philosophical" in his evidence. The Lord continually harped upon this phrase, and endeavored to make the witness ridiculous in the eyes of the jury. At last he inquired: "Pray, Mr. Witness, as you seem to be a great philosopher, can you tell me philosophically what the consequence would be if the air should be exhausted from a hogshead?" "Yes, sir," replied Buffum; "the head would fall in." "Indeed, sir," pursued the counsel, "can you tell me philosophically, why the head should fall in?" "Yes sir," returned Buffum; "it is because hogsheads are like some lawyers—their heads are the weakest parts." The roar of the court room acknowledged the victory of the witness over the counsel.

"What does Satan pay you for swearing?" said Deacon Todd to one whom he heard using profane language. "He don't pay me anything," was the reply. "Well, you work cheap, to lay aside the character of a gentleman; to inflict so much pain upon your friends, and all civil people; to suffer such pains of conscience as you must suffer; and, lastly, to risk losing your own precious soul, and (gradually rising in emphasis,) all for nothing! You certainly do work cheap—very cheap, indeed!"

FROM THE MINING DISTRICTS.—(Young Curate finds a Miner sitting on a gate smoking.)

Curate (desirous to ingratiate himself with one of his flock.)—"A fine morning, my friend."

One of his flock gives the slightest nod, and a grunt, and spits.

Curate (supposing that he had not heard.)—"A fine morning, my friend."

One of his flock—"Did I say it warn't? Do youant to argue, you beggar?"—Punch.

RICHES NOT HAPPINESS.—Stephen Girard, of Philadelphia, when surrounded with immense wealth, and supposed to be taking supreme delight in its accumulation, wrote the following to a friend:

"As to myself, I live like a galley slave, constantly occupied, and often passing the night without sleeping. I am wrapped up in a labyrinth of affairs, and worn out with cares. I do not value fortune. The love of labor is my higher emotion. When I rise in the morning, my only effort is to labor so hard during the day, that when night comes, I may be enabled to sleep soundly."

COAL-DUST AND GUNPOWDER.—Surely it must be a canard. Yet we are gravely told that a French officer has invented a plan for preventing powder-magazines from exploding. He mixes coal dust with the gun powder, and then it will not ignite. When you want the powder, all that you have to do is to sift it! Really, if the tale be true, this must be just the sort of powder and of process that would please our authorities. Lord Canning would have given the inventor a pension. Powder that can't, by any possibility, be ready at need. Circumlocution Powder, warranted not to be heard until it has passed through several departments. The coal, of course, must be from Newcastle, the Duke whereof was so ready in Crimean times. This scheme was proposed to a personage so remarkably interest at the Emperor of the French. The story sounds stifling as much as the dust.—Punch.
