The Blind Man's Orison.

The following lines were written by a lady, Miss Lloyd, now Mrs. Howell, and received the high compliment of being published among the poems of the great Milton, as having been recently discovered.

I am old and blind!
Men point at me as smitten by God's frown,
Afflicted and deserted of my kind,
Yet I am not cast down.

I am weak, yet strong;
I murmur not that I no longer see;
Poor, old, and helpless, I the more belong,
Father Supreme, to Thee.

O merciful One!
When men are farthest, then Thou art most near;
When friends pass by, my weakness to shun,
Thy chariot I hear.

Thy glorious face
Is leaning toward me, and its holy light
Shines in upon my lonely dwelling place
And there is no more night.

On my bended knee,
I recognize Thy purpose, clearly shown:
My vision Thou hast dimmed that I may see
Thyself, Thyself alone.

I have nought to fear;
This darkness is the shadow of Thy wing;
Beneath it I am almost sacred—here
Can come no evil thing.

O! I seem to stand
Trembling, where foot of mortal ne'er hath been,
Wrapped in the radiance from Thy sinless land,
Which eye hath never seen.

Visions come and go;
Shapes of resplendent beauty round me throng,
From angel lips I seem to hear the flow
Of soft and holy song.

It is nothing now,
When heaven is opening on my sightless eyes—
When airs from Paradise refresh my brow;
The earth in darkness lies.

In a purer clime,
My being fills with rapture—waves of thought
Roll in upon my spirit—strains sublime
Break over me unsought.

Give me now my lyre,
I feel the stirrings of a gift divine,
Within my bosom lows unearthly fire
Lit by no skill of mine. —Gospel Banner.

VARIETY.

The remembrance of a well spent life is sweet.

Words are but wind, but seeing is believing.

You cannot make a whistle of a pig's tail.

Travelers are entitled to courtesy and politeness. The man who undertakes to conduct a rail-road train should have learned to conduct himself.

The happiest thing in life is to deserve and obtain the love of valuable men; and the next felicity is to get rid of fools and villains.

We don't know that any person would be forgiven by God for killing himself, but certainly a good many would be freely forgiven by mankind.

"I fear you are about sewed up," said a croaking friend to a cheerful invalid. "Oh, no, I have only one little stitch in my side."

It was said of an exquisite portrait that, to judge by the eye, it did not want speech; for this could be detected only by the ear.

It is the part of wisdom to do great things without a fuss. When Solomon, the wisest of men, built his wondrous temple, no sound of saw or hammer was heard therein.

An Englishman is never happy but when he is miserable; a Scotchman is never at home but when he is abroad; and an Irishman never at peace but when he is at war.

"I am sure I cannot live long," said a very dirty-looking patient to his physician. "Is that any reason, sir, why you should carry dirt enought to bury you?"

Slyness or cunning is a characteristic of a pretty large proportion of the better of the sexes. Many a woman, like the Spartan boy, carries a fox in her bosom.

What is the difference between a butcher and a young lady? Ans.—The former kills to dress while the latter dresses to kill.

AFFECTATION.—Affectation in anypart of our carriage, is lighting up a candle to our defects, and never fails to make us taken notice of, either as wanting sense, or sincerity.

AFFECTIONS.—The affections, like the conscience, are rather to be led than driven; and it is to be feared that they who marry where they do not love, will love where they do not marry.

"I am afraid, dear wife, that, while I am gone, absence will conquer love." "Never fear, dear, the longer you stay away the better I shall like you."

A patent medicine agent, named Carr, committed suicide at Marietta, Ohio, last Friday, by hanging himself. Pity the rest of his brethren would not follow his example.

A popular writer says that a woman "should be won by degrees." Certainly—win first her ears and eyes, then her heart, then her lips, and then her hands.

A penny-a-liner, recording the career of a mad dog, says, "We are sorry to say that the rabid animal, before it could be killed, severely bit his master and several other dogs."

"I mean to abandon my habits of life," said a dissipated gentleman. "Are you sure sir, they are not abandoned enough already?" asked his friend.

Some one was telling an Irishman that some body had eaten ten saucers of ice cream; whereupon Pat shook his head. "So you don't believe it?" With a shrewd nod, Pat answered, "I believe in the crame, but not in the saucers."

Bulwer says that "death often changes aversion into love." Certainly it does. We may have an antipathy to swine, and yet love pork and sausage.—Prentice.

It is a blessed thing for a poor man to have a contented wife; one who will not wish to live in a style beyond her husband's income, just because her next door neighbor does; one who can be happy in the love of her husband, her home, and its beautiful duties, without asking the world for smiles or its favor.

A contemporary don't like the sentimental termination to Fannie, Susie, Addie, Hattie, etc., and thinks it would be just as sensible to stick the ie to the end of the family name also, as, for instance, Annie Jonesie, Susie Snooksie, etc.

A SHOWMAN "SOLD."—Showmen as a general rule, are tolerably "sharp," and it is no easy matter to overreach them; but when they are fooled, it is a matter of great amusement to those present. I was a witness to one of the best "sells" of the kind I have ever heard of. Last summer, there was an exhibition in a tent, on one of our public lots—a sort of a menagerie on a small scale. Before the entrance to the tent the proprietor was boasting of the innumerable wonders to be seen for a shilling, to a considerable crowd. While in the midst of a speech overflowing with large words, he was summarily interrupted by the following exclamation from a man near him, who had a boy with him.

"I'll bet you a "five" that you can not let me see that lion!"

"Done," said the showman, eagerly, "put up your money."

The man placed a five dollar bill in the hands of a by-stander, and the showman counting out the change, did the same.

"Now walk this way," said the showman; "and I'll convince you."

The man and his little boy followed him into the tent, the whole crowd following.

"There," said the showman triumphantly. "Look in that corner at that beautiful Numidian lion!"

"Where?" asked the man, looking in every direction but the right.

"Why, there!" was the astonished reply.

"I don't see any," responded the other.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the showman, who began to "smell a very large mice."

"I'm blind!" was the grinning reply.

That showman was very industriously employed in turning out the crowd, for the next few minutes, while the blind man pocketed the stake and went his way.
