The Night After Christmas.

The following amusing Parody upon Clement Moore's unequalled "Night before Christmas," was sent us by a friend for publication last year. It did not reach us however until January, and we reserved it for publication to-day.—N. Y. Cour. & Eng.

'Twas the night after Christmas, when all through the house,
Every soul was abed, and as still as a mouse,
Those stockings so lately St. Nicholas' care,
Where emptied of all that was eatable there.
The Darlings had duly been tucked in their beds—
With very full stomachs and pain in their heads.

I was dozing away in my new cotton cap,
And Nancy was rather far gone in a nap,
When out in the Nurs'ry arose such a clatter,
I sprang from my sleep—crying—"What is the matter?"
I flew to each bedside—still half in a doze,
Tore open the curtains and threw off the clothes.
While the light of the taper served clearly to show
The piteous plight of those objects below
For what to the fond father's eyes should appear,
But the little pale face of each sick little dear,
For each pet that had crammed itself full as a tick,
I knew in a moment now felt like old Nick.

Their pulses were rapid, their breathings the same,
What their stomachs rejected I'll mention by name—
Now Turkey, now Stuffing, Plum Pudding of course,
And Custards, and Crullers, and Cranberry sauce,
Before outraged nature, all went to the wall,
Yea—Lollypops, Flapdoodle, Dinner and all,
Like points, which urchins from pop-guns let fly,
Went figs, nuts and raisins, jam, jelly and pie,
Till each error of diet was brought to my view,
To the shame of Mamma and of Santa Claus too.

I turned from the sight, to my bed-room stepped back,
And brought out a phial marked "Pulv. Ipecac,"
When my Nancy exclaimed—for their suffering shocked her—
Don't you think you had better, love, run for the Doctor?
I ran—and was scarcely under my roof,
When I heard the sharp clatter of old Jalap's hoof
I might say that I hardly had turned myself round,
When the Doctor came into the room with a bound,
He was covered with mud from his head to his foot,
And the suit he had on was his very worst suit;
He hardly had time to put that on his back,
And he looked like a Falstaff half finished with sack.
His eyes how they twinkled! Had the Doctor got merry?
His cheeks looked like Port and his breath smelt of Sherry.
He hadn't been shaved for a fortnight or so,
And the beard on his chin wasn't white as the snow.

But inspecting their tongues in despite of their teeth,
And drawing his watch from his waistcoat beneath—
He felt of each pulse,—saying—"each little belly
Must get rid"—here he laughed—"of the rest of that jelly."
I gazed on each chubby, plump, sleek little elf,
And groaned when he said so,—in spite of myself,
But a wink of his eye when he physicked our Fred,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread.
He didn't prescribe—but went straightway to work,
And dosed all the rest—gave his trowsers a jerk,
And adding directions while blowing his nose—
He buttoned his coat:—from his chair he arose,
Then jumped in his gig—gave old Jalap a switch,
And Jalap dashed off as if pricked by a thistle.
But the Doctor exclaimed ere he drove out of sight,
They'll be well by to-morrow—good night! Jones—good night

Down Hill—A True Life Picture.

Not long since I had occasion to visit one of our Courts, and while conversing with a legal friend I heard the name of John Anderson called.

"There is a hard case," remarked my friend.

I looked upon the man in the prisoner's dock. He was standing up, and plead guilty to the crime of theft. He was a tall man, but bent and infirm, though not old. His garb was torn, sparse and filthy; his face was bloodshot; his hair was matted with dirt, and his bowed form quivered with delirium. Certainly, I never saw a more pitiable object. Surely that man was not born a villain. I moved my place to obtain a nearer view of his face. He gazed upon me a single instant, and then, covering his face with his hands, he sank powerless into the seat.

"Good God!" involuntarily exclaimed, starting forward. "Will—"

"I had half spoken his name when he quickly raised his head and cast upon me a look of such imploring agony that my tongue was tied at once. Then he covered his face again.

I asked my legal companion if the prisoner had counsel. He said no. I told him to do all in his power for the poor fellow's benefit, and I would pay him. He promised, and I left. I could not remain and see that man tried: tears came to my eyes as I looked upon him, and it was not until I had gained the street, and walked some distance that I could breath freely.

John Anderson! Alas! he was ashamed to be known as his mother's son. That was not his real name, but you shall know him by no other. I will call him by the name that stands upon the record of the court.

John Anderson was my schoolmate, and it was not many years ago—not over twenty—that we left our academy together; he to sit down for a few years in the dingy sanctum of a newspaper office, and then wander off across the ocean. I was gone some four years, and when I returned I found John a married man. His father was dead and had left his only son a princely fortune.

"And, C——," he said to me as he met me at the railroad station, "you shall see what a bird I have caged. My Ellen is a lark, a princess of all birds that ever looked beautiful or sang sweetly."

He was enthusiastic, but not mistaken; for I found his wife all that he had said simply omitting the poetry. And so good, too—so loving and kind. Aye, she so loved John that she really loved all his friends. What a lucky fellow to find such a wife, and what a lucky woman to find such a husband. John Anderson was as handsome as she—tall, straight, manly, high browed, with rich chestnut curls, and a face as faultlessly noble and beautiful as artist ever copied. And he was good, too; and kind, generous and true.

I spent a week with them, and I was happy all the while. John's mother lived with them, a fine old lady, as ever lived, and making herself constant joy by doting on her "darling boy," as she always called him. I gave her an account of my adventures by sea and land, in foreign climes, and she kissed me, because I loved her darling.

I did not see John again for four years. I reached his house in the evening. He was not in; but his wife and mother were there to receive me, and two curly-headed boys were playing about Ellen's chair. I knew at once they were my friend's children. Everything seemed pleasant until the little ones were in bed and asleep
