MR. THE DRAKE CHAIN.—This inimitable artiste in the art of arts, the sublime and divine art of music, has thrown upon our benighted inter-ocean isle like an angel of light, and is shedding upon the home of her brilliant genius she has accomplished that beyond which the purest and most exalted imagination cannot out, the lasting labor of conferring happiness. What rank Miss Clara may hold among living vocalists is not for us to decide, but that her skill on the most aerial, the most delicate, the most expressive of instruments is superb we are prepared to vouch. We judge of music by its effect upon us, and let's is of the kind that thrills every nerve, and renders one oblivious to everything else; enraptures, ministrates the soul with its heavenly harmonies. She has given two concerts since her arrival, the first, on Thursday evening last, and the second on Monday evening; both at the Hawaiian Theatre. In the first, she was assisted by Mrs. Kaneko, Mr. Schmidt and the Hawaiian Band, and on the occasion of the last by Miss Carrie Castle, Dr. Hoffmann and Mr. Schmidt. At these concerts she has delighted critical audiences with choice selections from Leonard, Seligmann, Vieuxtemps, Mendelssohn and Alard. The "Grand Concerto" on Monday evening from Mendelssohn was inimitable to the exclusively delightful effects. The genius displayed in its execution was worthy of the exalted genius of the composer. The violin duett from Leonard, in which Mons. Ferrat contributed his talent, which is of a remarkable high order for an amateur, was one of the most enjoyable treats of the evening. Miss Castle, whose skill on the piano is well known in this community, especially distinguished herself on this occasion in "Home, sweet Home" from Thalberg. To her and Dr. Hoffman is due no small share of credit for the success of the concert. We understand that Miss Castle expects to leave shortly in company with her brother for the States and Europe, for the purpose of perfecting herself in the vocalism for which she evinces such a decided talent. Mr. Schmidt's performances on the cornet, of which he is an undoubted master, were very fine and were thoroughly appreciated. We are sorry to learn that Mr. de Clow will give another concert during the latter part of the week in which she will be assisted by a lady amateur recently from San Francisco, who is a prodigious opera singer and lady. No true lover of music will fail to be present.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

☞ As we go to press the steamer from the South is telegraphed.

☞ Rev. Charles Clark, the lecturer, may be expected to-day by the mail steamer from Sydney.

☞ Among the passengers expected by the City of San Francisco, next week Thursday, are, Rev. Dr. Damon, Rev. W. Frear, John Thomas Waterhouse and wife, and S. F. Dillingham and wife.

☞ Send files of the Gazette and also the Hawaiian Guide Book, to the friends at home. They serve as well as letters, and don't cost so much. Can be had ready for mailing at our counter.

A SINGULAR MANIA.—The mania for rabbits exists in Japan. Some time since it was apparently suppressed by the Government heartily taking rabbits, but it seems to have again come up, a native paper mentioning the price of one lately for sale as $450.

☞ The steamer City of New York was due here last night, but this being the whaler season in the South Pacific, when hurricanes prevail around the Fijis, and on the New Zealand coast, the steamers may not have connected promptly at Kanakaea. She will be along to-day or to-morrow.

UNCURRENT COINS.—The value of the Chilean, Peruvian and Bolivian dollar pieces of new coinage is now 85 cents only, halves of the same coins being worth only 42 cts. Persons residing in country districts should bear this in mind. The five franc silver piece is of the same value as two American halves—one dollar.

☞ Death has taken off another of our old residents the present week—Mrs. E. O. Hall, who with her husband came out from Boston in the year 1835, and has resided here ever since that date, a period of 41 years. Mr. H. is at present absent on a visit to the United States. Mrs. H. died yesterday morning at the residence of her son-in-law and was buried in the family lot in Nuuanu Cemetery.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—The land of Honokahee was exposed for sale at public auction on Saturday last at the upset price of $2,000. It was knocked down to Mr. Greenwell for the sum of $2,700. This land comprising about 2,000 acres, is situated in Kona, Hawaii, in a country admirably adapted for coffee culture. The purchaser has made a bargain.

FIRE AT HILO.—At daybreak on the morning of the 8th inst., the trash houses on the Spencer plantation at Hilo were totally consumed by fire. They were four in number, and the loss, including fuel, is estimated at about $2,000. A native employee of the plantation, who is supposed to have started the fire, has been arrested and brought to Honolulu to await his trial.

LITTLE NATIVE.—On Sunday night a litter of seven pigs were born at Halawa, one of which (so our informant tell us,) has a pig's body, but a human head. The likeness to human features in every detail is said to be very striking. Time do we have received illustrations of the truth of Darwin's theories. We know several men who there is reason to think are the distant results of freaks similar to that recorded above.

☞ By notice in the official column it will be seen that the Rev. T. Hascall has received the appointment of Vice-Consul for this port. He has been compelled by poor health to retire temporarily from the duties of the pulpit, and has entered upon the position for the sake of employment. Although he was educated for the ministry he has also studied law, having been at one time a fellow student in the law office of his father, in company with William A. Wheeler, Vice President of the United States for 1876.

NEW CONSULS TO SAMOA.—The Queen of Great Britain and Ireland has been graciously pleased to appoint Lieutenant Edward Albert Liardet, R. N., to be Her Majesty's Consul in the Navigator Islands. The U. S. government has appointed Gilsbroy W. Griffin late U. S. Consul at Copenhagen, Denmark, to be consul at the same place. The promulgation of these governments is sending to Samoa men of experience to represent them, betokens an intention to watch and sustain their respective interests in those islands.

☞ Williams, Blanchard & Co, the well known and popular firm of shipping and commission merchants, prominent in the Hawaiian and China trade, who were already acting as agents for the Panama Railroad Company's steamers, have been appointed agents for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. No house in the city stands higher than William Blanchard & Co. as active, straightforward and capable men of business, with which reputation they combine the advantage of exceptional personal popularity on the part of the individual members of the firm. All the business part of the town, which has personal relations with the steam lines, is more than gratified at the new agency arrangements.—Sac. Union.

THE PACIFIC OCEAN CABLE COMPANY.—At this time it may be interesting to give the names of the Pacific Coast incorporators, who, associated with sturdy citizens of New York and New Jersey, are: Abram Hayward, James C. Flood, Leland Stanford, Mark Hopkins, Isaac Friedlander, Louis Stow, William Norris, John F. Miller, William Irwin, James McM. Shafter, O. H. La Grange, William Alvord, Eugene L. Sullivan, John P. Jackson, John B. Felton, Andrew J. Bryant, Philip A. Roach, Nat. W. Spaulding, Frank M. Pixley and J. Craig, of San Francisco, and Henry Failing and Julius Friedman, of Oregon. This array of names combines the material resources of the Merchant's Exchange Bank, Nevada Bank of San Francisco and Bank of California, the political influence of the Democratic Governor of California and the Mayor of San Francisco, with the Republican Superintendent of the Mint, besides representative leaders not in office of both parties, the commercial representatives of the Hawaiian Kingdom, not neglecting the important Oregon interest.

European Correspondence—No. 14.

DEAR GAZETTE:—Geneva is pleasantly situated on both sides of the Rhone, at the foot of the lake. Our pension was on the left bank of the lake, that is to the south-east side. Its front rooms faced the lake, the back rooms looked away to mountain ranges, with Mont Blanc the monarch above all. The beautiful avenue passing our door led on and on to the east, I know not how far; skirting the water and shaded by noble plane trees. I walked out on it three miles to the village of Vessenaz which attracts one from a distance by its pretty situation on a point jutting into the lake.

Returning to Geneva by a road a little inland, one passes among instead of in front of the elegant villas which cover all those shores. There is the villa Diodati, once the home of Lord Byron. From underneath the great trees which overshadow the sloping lawn he looked out upon exactly the lovely prospect he describes in the 3d Canto of Childe Harold. The place looks deserted now. It is kept in passable order by a porter who exhibits it to strangers. These visitors sometimes possess the relic-collecting hobby to a degree that becomes almost a mania. Some friends of mine related an incident of their visits among these chateaux. "The guide was showing us about, and mentioned that the grave he was pointing out was of such and such a great man. Quick as a wink, we each had a leaf, to his inconsolable grief. We offered him money, we even sold pleadingly 'take the leaves, then, take these,' but he only mourned out, broken-hearted, 'why, they will not grow again!' It was almost impossible to believe that a brave would not comfort him."

In the gardens of all these villas I saw most beautiful plants, many of them new to me, some of them old friends, such as Indian shot, and Kalo. They grew as thriftily in those grounds as in their native home.

The residences of other famous people, now dead, are to be seen in the villages neighboring Geneva, or in the town itself. Necker and his daughters, Madamede Staël and Rousseau were born in Geneva.

Of course every one goes to the cathedral to see where Calvin preached reform. There are still to be seen the massive arches under which he stood and the chair in which he sat. We attended an organ concert there. I then heard for the first time the imitation of a storm upon the organ. It was natural enough to make one shiver. But it is not every one who enjoys the changing of the dignified use of that noble instrument into a mechanical trickery of this sort to tickle the fancy, or create a short-lived wonder.

These organ concerts are common in cathedrals, and are free, so far as I know.

There are concerts of the same sort in American cities for which there is usually a small charge. One is pretty sure of hearing good music at these rehearsals. The programme, at any rate, is seldom poor, whatever the execution may be. The Lucerne and Fribourg organs are two famous ones of Switzerland, and there are weekly rehearsals upon them which every one may attend.

Among the attractions of Geneva are the well built quais which make fine promenades along the banks of the lake. The quai de Leman is the place from which to watch the sunset changes on Mont Blanc, which lies away off in the eastern distance and catches the reflected glories of the western skies.

The finest buildings front the lake, in the older part of the town the streets are narrow and the houses inferior.

There was a brilliant display of jewelry in the shop windows. I was told that such a display was reserved always till rather late in the season when the crowds of eager-buying tourists had departed. Then the windows were made especially attractive to tempt customers.

We went one Sunday morning to hear Pere Hyacinthe. He has no church, no followers, he stands nowhere in religious matters but by himself. But he has a crowd of curious listeners every Sunday, and the few francs he obtains by passing around the plate after the service, is all the remuneration he gets for his ministrations. Any one familiar with the gorgeous display of a Roman Catholic Sunday morning mass, or with the ceremonials of an English ritualistic service, even, would be surprised and saddened to see to what straits this reverend father has come to, to get assistance in carrying through his morning duties. He has no choir, no acolytes, no show of altar cloth and flowing vestments, but he is waited upon in a plain, dim room, on a bare platform, by four young men in business suits, who have an air of being bored by the whole business. They yawn and make communications to each other, are very slow in getting on to their knees, and very quick in getting off. The altar is a small stand on the platform, the organ, a melodeon behind a screen, the choir, one man who perhaps also plays the melodeon.

After Pere Hyacinthe had gone through with the mass, partaking alone of the communion, for, as may be imagined, neither catholic nor protestant would commune with him, he came to the front of the platform before the stand to preach.

His unwilling assistants got the corner and communion service out of sight and settled themselves in easy positions, glad of release from the kneeling and posturings which they were conscious, no doubt, of doing ungracefully without the customary shrouding of legs and boots in the flowing sweep of white robes.

Pere Hyacinthe is a little portly, and reminds one slightly in face and carriage of Mr. Beecher as he was about twelve years ago. Mr. Beecher is gray now, and grows to look venerable with his full figure and long white hair.

The speaker began slowly with his hands folded before him, and I wondered if he would warm into life at all.

It was impossible that he should not, for his theme, or I may say themes, were of profound interest to him—the unhappiness of marriage for the clergy, and the falseness of the dogma of the infallibility of the Pope. It was not long that his tones dragged and his hands hung folded. He painted in glowing words the joys of married life, he asserted the freedom of the clergy in former times, and in present times, to partake of these "divine joys," he boldly attacked the modern dogma of papal infallibility, and he reiterated what he so often says, that he is a true catholic at heart.

He loves the mother church and her communion, and he still clings to her forms although she casts him out. But he holds those two opinions contrary to her doctrines, and acts upon them, and battle for them he must and will, though it brings him to poverty and reproach. The man is said to have been in real pinching want at times. I understand that he is able now to support himself and family by writing and lecturing.

I heard also that day, Rev. Leonard Bacon jr., formerly of Baltimore. He is now living in Geneva to educate his family, and he edits a little paper in the English language called the Swiss Chronicle. His services are held in the salon of a hotel, in a pleasant informal way. He is his own organist and chorister, and his choir is his congregation. He has a fine musical taste, and has, I believe, taken a great interest in our Baltimore bird, Miss Montague.

He gives entertaining lectures on week days, and once a week he holds an evening reception where may be met a charming and intelligent company of visitors. He is a wide awake man, and knows equally well how to speak, and how to attract and entertain a pleasant social gathering.

During my stay in Geneva occurred one of the Saturday morning markets. The market square facing the Rhone, and all the adjacent streets and squares were lively with wares and bustle. As at the Swiss sow fairs, every article usually sold in shops was to be bought in the open air, or under booths gay with ribbons and flowers.

One finds in the Saturday markets of European cities, not only everything that is good to eat, but everything else besides. The scene is lively, animated, full of color and motion, and of not unmusical sounds of laughter and gay with talk. The stalls are arranged with an eye to the picturesque, and all one's senses are pleased, and he cannot feel dull, no matter how alone he may be in the crowd.

One of our days in Geneva was spent in an excursion to the Salève, a ridge to the S. E. of Geneva, between that canton and Savoy, or French Switzerland. The scene to the S. E. of this ridge is an ideal a Swiss view as those we admired so much in the lake region farther north. On the Alpine side lay the monarch Mt. Blanc, with his stately attendants, all displaying their white robed splendors against a perfect sky, just distant and dim enough to give the touch of tenderness one loves to see nestling about such grand beauty. Between us and them the valley of the Arve stretched back, filled with villages, smiling with harvests, a sunny land of bright, warm life in sharp contrast with the calm, stately grandeur beyond. But icy exteriors sometimes cover generous hearts, from that pale, cold snow, rushed down the warm life blood that vivified all the sweet valley below.

I left Geneva with regrets. It is so pretty, and so surrounded with charming environs that one could spend months there with unflagging interest.
