Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, suffering headache, sight from a coated tongue, sour breath, and stomach, have work, care, instead look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and the coils of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous germs, thus cleansing, freshening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It clears up all the poisonous gases, stops acid and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is troubled with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism, feel enthusiastic on the subject of internal cleanliness.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

Qualifies to Juggle Freight.

Private Claude R. Wilson writes the following letter to Station Agent Herman J. Gibbs at Yantic:

Oct. 4, 1918.

Dear Friend Herman: Quite a while since I have written you, but have been so busy that I have hardly had time to write my folks. But I have not forgotten you by any manner of means and I hope that you haven't had that idea. From now on I shall try to do better in keeping up my correspondence.

To give you a little idea of the conditions here we get up at 5.45 a. m. and send formation, have our breakfast at six, go to work at 7, get back for dinner about 12 noon, go back to work at 1 and quish at 4.30 or when we are done at some other hour. Often we have to work until nine or ten o'clock and I have worked even later than that but generally that is as late as we work. For a while now we have not had to work nights so I have caught up on my sleep and am able to get more time to myself. About my work, I can't say as the censor would not allow it to pass. However, if, when I get back, we should be caught short-handed in the freight house and should need someone to juggle freight, why, yours truly will be right there with bells on.

On the whole I am enjoying it immensely and would not miss the experience for a great deal. Guess the experience will make a man of me for the outside work will do wonders towards hardening a chap and putting him in condition. I sure ought to be some tough chick when I get back for I really don't know what it means to be sick now.

The first week we were here it rained almost continually from Monday until the following Sunday, often I would work the whole day, soaked to my feet to my hips, but did not know what it was to catch a cold. And I used to be the lad who would catch cold if I even got my feet damp. Say, don't you think I could stand an all-night coon hunt now? We sure will have to have a good hunting trip together when I get back to God's country again. What do you say?

Now for a little description of the country around here. A very pretty place, rather flat. Good roads, but rather badly chopped up by the heavy motor traffic. When we first came here the fields were practically a blaze of color from the middle of poppies and other flowers but now that it is growing colder they have nearly all disappeared. It sure was a pretty sight while they were in bloom. The fields are or rather were fairly alive with larks and other birds and when one had the time to listen he could hear some beautiful songs. The larks particularly are great songsters and one could listen to them for hours without tiring. Have never heard anything like it back home. The towns around here are small but are very interesting and there are a number of old historic places dating back to the time of Joan of Arc that are well worth visiting. The old Roman road built by Caesar is near here. It sure was some feat of engineering, the roadbed being of flint and so is remarkably well-preserved.

One thing that strikes me particularly is the peculiar weather here. We will go for probably a week or more with fine clear warm weather, then it will change and for nearly the same length of time we will have cold, rainy weather. Not rain all the time but during some part of the day we will have a heavy rain. And then talk about mud, oh, boy! Such mud! It is like clay and will stick to your shoes until you are about an inch or more off the ground from the deposit on your shoe taps. Then you kick it off and go a few feet and you are carting around five or ten pounds of mud again. At least, it seems as though it weighed that much.

SAY EPIDEMIC IS ON DECLINE

Health Officer R. J. Brophy and the doctors of the city agree that the Spanish influenza epidemic ravages in Norwich are on the wane inasmuch as the number of new cases of the disease reported is growing less each day. Several of the physicians have found it possible to resume office hours as the imperative calls for them to visit at homes have diminished, but the number of deaths in the last five days has borne out a prediction made last week by Dr. Brophy that there would be no limitation for a few days in the number of fatal cases because so many of those sick were undergoing the critical period of the disease with its attendant of pneumonia.

Indicating that Saturday and up to and including Wednesday of this week there had been 30 deaths from influenza and pneumonia. On Saturday there were six, on Sunday nine, on Monday six, on Tuesday five and on Wednesday four, which have already been reported to the town clerk's office. This number may be still further increased when the returns from the undertakers are all in. In a number of cases the undertakers have been unable to make returns on all the cases they have handled because they have been unable to find a time when the doctors could sign the death certificates.

All the undertakers in the city have received from Dr. John T. Blake of the state department of health the notice that they discourage promiscuous attendance at funerals and the holding of wakes.

The notice is as follows:

"To Undertakers of the State of Connecticut.

"In view of helping to check the spread of influenza, the state commissioner of health hereby declares that the funerals of those dead of influenza and its complications shall be limited to relatives only and those necessary to the conduct of the funeral. This does not limit church services.

"To conform to the above regulation it is recommended that, during the present epidemic, you discourage wakes, and to this end no chairs should be provided at homes where persons are dead. Undertakers should inform relatives of persons who have died that wakes will not be held. This order does not, of course, prevent relatives and friends from calling at the residence of the deceased to extend their sympathy, but it is expected that they will not remain for a longer period than is necessary."

According to Dr. Buck, one of the most convenient ways to contract Spanish influenza is to shake hands with somebody who has the "bug." The other fellow to put it indirectly and, therefore, accurately, coughs or sneezes into his hand. Then he shakes hands with you, and the next time you brush your hand across your face you have an even chance of being infected. So do not avoid the glad hand to sneezers.

The emergency hospital, carried on by the selectmen at Bushnell chapel of the Central Baptist church, continues to do valuable work. On Thursday five persons who have been there as patients were discharged. Others received during the week, however, keep the registration of patients up to about 35. Since Sunday there have been two deaths at the hospital.

The smallest number of new influenza cases in the Second naval district since the epidemic started was reported Thursday night from Newport, there being only nine new cases. There were five deaths at New London and one at Newport.

The Connecticut state council of defense, after consultation with high medical authorities, and upon their advice, issues the following "Treatment for influenza without complications":

Influenza is rapid in its onset. It is usually preceded by a chill, a chilly sensation or dizziness. Sometimes a marked feeling of weakness is the first symptoms. Upon any of these symptoms, the first thing to do is to go to bed. Then take a saline cathartic (dose of Rochelle or Epsom salts), to be followed soon after by a drink of hot lemonade, in order to get the bowels and skin active. This is of paramount importance, as it helps to rid the system of many toxins. Should profuse perspiring occur, the body should be wiped dry with a soft towel. If the patient is restless, due to high fever, an ice cap placed at the head and kept there for one or two hours at a time will help reduce nervousness and make the patient more comfortable.

The room should be well ventilated by open windows, which will tend to allay irritation of the nose and throat. Cold air is not harmful, but close air acts as a poison.

It is necessary to maintain the body resistance by regular diet, which consists of milk every two hours for the first day. If the patient is unable to take milk, substitute broths or light gruels, and in either case give a plentiful supply of water. Too much stress cannot be placed on the necessity of giving the patient plenty of water during the course of the disease.

After the first or second day, cocoa and broths may be added as the fever subsides. Lightly cooked eggs, toast and cereals are permissible. Usually on the fourth or fifth day the patient's temperature subsides to practically normal, but it is at this time that the utmost care is needed to prevent the pneumonia complication and the surest way to do this is to remain in bed at least 48 hours after the fever has subsided.

If these suggestions are followed, especially by those unable to obtain the ready services of a physician, there will be fewer complications and deaths.

HOME IS READY TO RECEIVE WELL CHILDREN

Through the generosity of the former officers of the Second church the parsonage of that society has been utilized as a place of refuge for well children who are deprived of the care of their parents by the prevailing epidemic. The home is a branch of the Rock Nook Home and that committee desire to express their gratitude to the custodians of the Second church and to the other kind friends who so promptly realized the need of money and sent generous contributions and to those who have helped in furnishing the home with the necessary furnishings. A cook would be gratefully accepted and vegetables, fruit and other supplies for the table would not come amiss. More money will be needed and checks may be sent to the treasurer, Miss Adelaide H. Butts, 272 Washington street and made payable to the United Workers.

OBITUARY.

William F. Farrell.

Word was received here on Wednesday by Prof. Frank L. Farrell of the death of his younger brother, William F., in Derby that day.

The young man was organist of St. Mary's church at Derby. He was taken sick a week ago with what appeared to be a slight cold, which later developed into influenza. For a few days Mr. Farrell was quite ill but a decided change for the better appeared and it was felt that he was on the road to complete recovery. Tuesday night his condition was not so well and Wednesday there were symptoms of pneumonia. While some alarm was felt because of the complications, no real difficulty was expected to be experienced in the removal of the congestion. His condition became worse as the day progressed, however, and the end came at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Mr. Farrell was 29 years of age and was a native of Ansonia, where he lived all his life until a few months ago, when he took up his residence in Derby. He engaged in the study of music after graduating from St. Mary's school and 12 years ago was appointed organist of the church. He was well learned in music and while having given much attention to instruction in piano work, he specialized in church music. He was the son of Lawrence Farrell of Ansonia. CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

"CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS" CAN'T HARM TENDER STOMACH OR BOWELS.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."
