

The Weekly Chronicle.

THE DALLES, OREGON

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

From the Daily Chronicle, Tuesday. Capt. McNulty expects to leave for his farm in a few days to be with his invalid son George.

Kent & Bories entertainment company will be here for the first time on Thanksgiving eve.

Mrs. G. L. Manns and son Roy, who have been visiting friends in Umatilla for the past week, returned last evening.

Mr. F. D. Eshelman, county clerk of Yakima county, Wash., is on a visit in The Dalles to his brother, Dr. Eshelman.

The teachers and pupils of the Wasco Independent Academy will give the annual costume party tomorrow evening in the academy hall.

The store of Pease & Mays will close at 6 o'clock to night so as to give them time to get ready for the great sale that commences tomorrow.

L. Bories, the advance agent of the Kent & Bories entertainment company, has arrived and is making preparations at the Armory hall for Thanksgiving eve entertainment of "Little Nell."

W. H. Putts has provided forty fine, fat and well-flavored turkeys for Thanksgiving, which will be raffled at the Snug to night. Call and see the finest turkeys in the country.

The greatest of Chas. Dickens works of Little Nell in the Old Curiosity Shop will be produced for the first time at the Armory hall Thanksgiving eve. Don't miss the opportunity in seeing this great production.

The Christian Endeavor society will give a social next Friday eve, Nov. 25th, at the hall on Union street next door to Floyd & Shown's drug store. A short programme will be rendered and an old fashioned lunch served. Admission 25 cents.

A rascal known here for two years past by the name of D. S. Allison, but who is wanted east under the name of Lamb; skipped The Dalles last week with $500 belonging to W. H. Sharp, on account of sales of wheat. Mr. Sharp hopes to capture the fellow and send him to the Salem brick yard.

The jury in the case of the State v. Henry McNulty, brought in a verdict of not guilty this morning, and the young man was discharged and his bondsman exonerated. A great many people conversant with this case from the first, have felt positive of the innocence of the young man, who bears a good name in the community, and will now congratulate him upon his successful vindication of the charges preferred against him.

From the Daily Chronicle, Wednesday.

Mr. Smith French is in Portland.

Mr. Wm Weigle of Omaha, is visiting friends in the city.

No mail at the postoffice today up to the hour of going to press.

Mrs. Durbin, daughter of Hon. Geo. A. Young, arrived from Montana yesterday morning.

The Democratic ratification at Dufur was an excellent one. About 500 people participated.

The jury in the case of the State v. Seivner, indicted for larceny, brought in a verdict of not guilty.

Judge Bradshaw expects to hold court for Judge Stearns, in Multnomah county, on the 5th of next month.

The past two trips the steamer Regulator took 234 head of beef cattle besides her other freight and passengers.

For the best oysters in any style, tea, coffee, chocolate and cake, go to A. Keller's Oregon Bakery, 122 Second street.

Pigeon shooting, with clay birds, will be an amusement for tomorrow on the beach, above the Regulator landing, foot of Washington street.

Mrs. A. McCormick, mother of John E., of this vicinity, met with an accident at Albany on Tuesday which resulted in breaking an arm.

The Columbia is getting its back up at this port. It raised 22 inches in 24 hours ended at 9:30 a. m. today, and is now six feet above low water.

No one need be misled by a false and specious fairness of the weather into returning the umbrella he is carrying. Today's sunshine is probably only a cruel decoy.

The ladies of St. Paul's guild desire to thank Mr. John Booth for his kindness in loaning the arc light for his store for the chrysanthemum festival last week.

The circuit court has taken up the case of the State v. Wm. Bergfeld today, and at noon six jurors had been empanelled. This will be about the last of the criminal actions for the term.

Mrs. Judge Bradshaw was in Lafayette to attend the funeral of her brother-in-law. It was impossible for Judge B. to accompany her, on account of the business in the circuit court, of which he is judge.

Miss Iva Brooks and Miss Bertha Ehlen were passengers to Portland by the steamer Regulator yesterday. Miss Brooks will be the guest of Mrs. Frank Dekum in Portland. Miss Ehlen is returning to her home in Aurora.

Thanksgiving service at Congregational church at 11 a. m. Sermon by Rev. J. Whialer, who has sufficiently recovered from his recent physical indisposition so as to perform the duty assigned him. All are cordially invited to attend the service.

An excellent quality of fire clay has been discovered on the ranch of J. P. Hillstrom, near Tuckers, sample of which has reached THE CHRONICLE. A test of it is displayed in a brick two inches thick, which has been under fire in a large fire-place for seven years past. The wood outside of this brick was not even charred by the heat. Another card for Wasco county.

Old man Chaney cast a horoscope for President Harrison which was published in the Chicago Record June 20th, and was filled in THE CHRONICLE office June 25th. No further attention was paid to it until a few days since when it was dug up, and read last night. Chaney may be the "old fraud" which a great many accuse him of being, but his predictions respecting Hayes, Blaine and Harrison have turned out correct, at most to a letter.

The Regulator Line.

What is generally known as the Regulator line of steamboats, on the Columbia river, will sooner or later become famous. The incorporation is The Dalles, Portland and Astoria Navigation company. At present there are but two steamers in the scheme, the Regulator leaves The Dalles daily connecting at Cascade Locks with the Oregon, Portage Railway, and the steamer Dalles City for Portland. The Regulator is manned as follows: Capt. Fred H. Sherman; First Officer, Richard Fisher; Chief Engineer, McCully; Purser, John Hampshire; Steward, D. H. Merrill. The time of the Regulator over the route traversed by her, has never been beaten. Round trip five hours.

The steamer Dalles City, plying below the locks to Portland, has made some of the most remarkable trips ever made by a steamer of her dimensions in Pacific coast waters. Her captain is S. V. Short; First Officer, John Delmar; Chief Engineer, Jas. Gilbraith; Asst. Engineer, Chas. Granlund; Purser, Truman Butler; Steward, H. Person.

Now that it may be reasonably stated the contract for the completion of the cascade locks is let, and an open river is assured, we expect to see the fleet of Regulator steamers increase in a ratio corresponding to the development of the country, and it is earnestly hoped that they may secure the lion's share of the business of the Inland Empire. They need not necessarily all belong to one corporation, but they may all be considered Regulators.

The Annual Holidays.

No paper will be issued from THE CHRONICLE office tomorrow, as it is a national and state holiday. The Printers will not be able to get a day off on Christmas and New Year this season as their recurrence is on Sunday. We sometimes think, with all the new annual holidays getting on to the American calendar: "What shall we do with them?" It is becoming a question more serious than humorous. It is much discussed just now, as it is at the recurrence of every American holiday, Christmas excepted. Heaven be praised, there's one holiday that withstands the modern aversion to celebration. Present and future generations are tolerably sure of their Christmas; partly because it is rooted in the church, but chiefly because it is the crown of the year for the children, and until children go out of fashion and everybody is born old and mean, Christmas shall not vanish from the earth.

The Parting of the Ways.

Wilkins and Watkins were college chums and close friends. They had been hard students and had taken little out-door exercise. When they shook hands and said good-bye at the end of their college career, they were in impaired health. Both had dyspepsia, liver troubles and troublesome coughs. Wilkins had plenty of money, and decided to travel for his health. Watkins was poor. "I must go to work for my living," said he, "but I'll try the remedy that Robinson talks so much about—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

In less than two years Wilkins came home in his coffin. Watkins, now in the prime of life, is a bank president, rich and respected, and weighs 200 pounds. "The 'Golden Medical Discovery' saved my life at a critical time," he often says. "Oh, if poor Wilkins had only tried it!" For weak lungs, spitting of blood, all lingering coughs, and consumption in its early stages, it is an unequalled remedy.

Please Report.

Subscribers will oblige THE CHRONICLE by promptly reporting if their papers are not delivered, or the delivery boys do not place them in a safe place. The distribution of the papers is one of the most perplexing questions to be solved by a newspaper. If you do not get your paper, kick. We are endeavoring to keep things straight.

HIGHLY PRIZED RELICS.

Valuables And Keepsakes on Deposit in The Dalles.

"In the days of old, the days of gold; the days of '49," it was not considered anything unusual for a miner to "deposit his sack" with a friend or acquaintance who happened to have a safe, in California anywhere. Many interesting incidents of this nature have been reported from time to time, and we remember having reported an occasional incident of this kind in Oregon, years ago; but the most notable one that has come under our observation occurred in this city Saturday evening, when Louie Davenport, who was the retail banker at The Dalles in 1862-63, applied to Pease & Mays for a sack deposited 20 years ago with their predecessors French & McFarland. In a few moments the sack was brought out, Louie asked the charges on it, which amounted to nothing, thanked the gentlemen for their kindness and put the sack into his pocket and went his way.

Traveling together the next day Louie told us of the circumstance, produced the sack, which was one of those long buckskin styles used here in the days of gold dust, tied with a thong, and bearing his name. "I haven't seen a thing there is in that sack for 20 years," said Louie, "but I can name almost everything it contains." At our suggestion we both adjourned to the purser's office, we were on the steamer Regulator, and Louie opened the sack.

There was a Spanish dollar, new when it was put away, which was given to Mrs. Davenport on their marriage in 1865, by Mr. Krouse.

A pair of elegant baby bracelets, a present to Rosa Davenport from Mrs. Jos. Ten, when Rosa reached her first birthday. They were made to order by Goldbaum, the popular jeweler of those days. Next week they go to Rosa's baby, now Mrs. P. H. Robinson, of Portland.

Spanish dollar 1871; Guatemala dollar 1871; gold quartz sleeve buttons, made from samples from the Ruckel mine, and presented to Mr. Davenport by Col. Ruckel, when he was president of the Oregon Steam Navigation company. Mr. Davenport also has the $300 watch with magic cases, and rich quartz fobs, and gold buckel, worn by Col. Ruckel in the sixties.

Among other things were numerous keepsakes, including notes given in 1862 and 1867, payable in United States gold coin, with interest till paid. Among those old signers appears the name of Jose Maria Lopez, one of the most noted and daring packers of those early times. His L. O. U. is a sort of reminder to Mr. Davenport that although it seems high in these days the per cent. of interest in 1862 was not too large for a safe business.

There was also a solid gold ring made to order, worth about $50, and a $5.00 button of gold, dug by Louie in his younger days, in 1853, in the mines of Althouse, Southern Oregon. And a gold chain, saved from a wreck at Crescent city in 1856. And last but not least his tax receipt, for $17.00 taxes paid to Sheriff Schutz and received by Will S. Bahr, deputy. Louie remembers that that was about the last act he did before depositing the sack with French & Gilman in 1872.

Dissolution of Co-partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the firm of Abrams & Stewart has been dissolved by mutual consent.

W. R. ABRAMS is authorized to collect all amounts due the firm of Abrams & Stewart, and will pay all demands against said firm.

W. R. ABRAMS, WM. STEWART, THE DALLES, Or., Aug. 16th, 1892.

Notice is hereby given to all persons indebted to the late firm of Abrams & Stewart, of The Dalles, or W. R. Abrams, either by note or account, to make payment of the same immediately at the bank of French & Co. All notes and accounts remaining unpaid November 15th, 1892, will be placed in attorneys' hands with instructions to collect. Any claims against the late firm must be presented at the same place, with proper vouchers, on or before above date. The business of the firm must be closed up without further delay. Respectfully, W. R. ABRAMS, s.25d4w3m

A Cure for Cholera.

There is no use of any one suffering with the cholera when Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy can be procured. It will give relief in a few minutes and cure in a short time. I have tried it and know.—W. H. Clinton, Helmetta, N. J. The epidemic at Helmetta was at first believed to be cholera, but subsequent investigation proved it to be a violent form of dysentery, almost as dangerous as cholera. This remedy was used there with great success. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton.

Too Much of a Risk.

It is not unusual for colds contracted in the fall to hang on all winter. In such cases catarrh or chronic bronchitis are almost sure to result. A fifty cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will cure any cold. Can you afford to risk so much for so small an amount? This remedy is intended especially for bad colds and croup and can always be depended upon. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists.

NOTICE.

All Dalles City warrants registered prior to January 6, 1891, will be paid if presented at my office. Interest ceases from and after this date. Dated October 13th, 1892. L. RORDEX, Treas. Dalles City.

Auron Burr's Eyes.

The late Miss Theodosia Burr Davis, of New York was a dear friend of mine in the long, long ago days. The niece and ward of Matthew L. Davis, the intimate associate and biographer of Burr, she had a store of anecdotes of men who figured prominently in national affairs seventy or eighty years since, but this one—which I shall repeat as nearly as possible in her own words—interested me most of all:

"I was a schoolgirl of fourteen, spending a short vacation at Uncle Matthew's house in the city, when one day I heard him calling to me from the hall below and went to the head of the stairs. 'Come down,' he said. 'There is a gentleman here who wishes to see you.' I hesitated, held back by some undefinable fear. Again he said, 'Come down,' and in such tones that I dared not disobey. He led me into the parlor, and there on the sofa sat an old man whom I had never before seen. Very old he looked, dressed in the costume of the last century, with his snow white hair drawn back and tied in a cue behind. But his eyes—they were not old. Large, dark and deep, they flashed with all the fire of youth. I never saw such eyes in man or woman. They fascinated while they frightened me.

"My uncle led me forward and said: 'Colonel Burr, this is the child of whom I spoke. I need not tell you whose name she bears. The old man rose, took my hand in his and held me out at arms length and looked at me—looked at me with those eyes which seemed to see into my very soul. Only a moment, but the moment was an hour. Then he dropped my hands and exclaimed in a voice trembling with emotion: 'Take her away, Matthew, take her away! I cannot bear it!' I saw him only once afterward: it was on Broadway, and I tried to slip by him unperceived. But when I turned to look back he was standing still, following me with those wonderful, wonderful eyes. They haunt me still, and will, I know, while memory lasts."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Macaulay as a Host.

Macaulay was a pattern host. On his own account, it is true, he was no epicure, and his nephew tells us that at any time he would have been amply satisfied with a dinner such as is served at a decent seaside lodging house. This was a sad moral defect, but happily his conscientious views of the obligations of hospitality prevented his guests from suffering by it. He generally selected by a half conscious preference dishes of established character and traditional fame. His dissenting friends he treated to a fillet of veal, "which he maintained to be the recognized Sunday dinner in good old Nonconformist families." On Michaelmas day he would have been wretched had no goose smoked on the board. At Christmas he never forgot the old historic turkey.

If he was entertaining a couple of schoolboys who could construe the fourth satire of Juvenal, he would reward them for their proficiency with a dish of mullet that might have passed muster on the table of an angler or an emperor's freedman. With regard to the contents of his cellar, Macaulay prided himself on being able to say with Mr. John Thorp, "Mine is famous good stuff, to be sure," and if he were taken to task for his extravagance he would reply, in the words used by another of his favorite characters in fiction, that there was a great deal of good eating and drinking in £700 a year, if people knew how to manage it.—All the Year Round.

The Seniors in War.

One marked difference divided the generals of Frederick William III from those of Napoleon. The Duke of Brunswick was seventy-one years old, France Hohenlohe, sixty, and among subaltern commanders were men of sixty-eight, seventy and seventy-four. Lefebvre, the oldest French general, was barely fifty-one. Augereau, forty-eight; Bernadotte, forty-two; Napoleon, Ney, Soult and Lannes, thirty-seven; Murat only thirty-five.

Excepting for the intervention in Holland in 1787, and the Duke of Brunswick's ill starred invasion of Champagne in 1792, the Prussian army—like that of Great Britain in 1854—had suffered from a long peace, one of the results in each case being a certain disbelief in young commanders. Von der Decken, writing in 1798 under the title "Is it necessary that we should only have young generals?" decided the question in the negative; and in the British army today an officer of the same age as that of Napoleon or Murat at Jena may find his energies confined to the command of a company, whatever his capacity.—Edinburgh Review.

Claims Before Congress.

Immediately after every change of administration, claims which were disallowed by the outgoing power pour in by thousands, to be considered and rejected again. Applicants imagine, evidently, that what one party will not grant the other may grant. Their persistence in many cases is astonishing. One citizen, who has not the shadow of a right to back him up, has written more than 1,000 letters to the treasury respecting his demand, and has expended more money in postage than the value of the claim. He has addressed his communications on the subject to every public official in Washington, from the president down, and even to the Chinese and other foreign ministers.—Washington Letter.

Went to Church Once.

A Maine woman who had an irreligious husband kept driving at him until she finally got him to go to church. Now mark how she was rewarded. Instead of following the service he looked at the congregation and noticed how much more handsomely the other women were dressed than his wife. This fact pricked him to the heart as no words of the minister could, and the next day he gave his wife $500 and told her to go and buy some clothes. Need we enlarge on the moral of this story? We think not.—New York Tribune.

A Cholera Scare.

A reported outbreak of cholera at Helmetta, N. J., created much excitement in that vicinity. Investigation showed that the disease was not cholera but a violent dysentery, which is almost as severe and dangerous as cholera. Mr. Walter Willard, a prominent merchant of Jamesburg, two miles from Helmetta, says Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has given great satisfaction in the most severe cases of dysentery. It is certainly one of the best things ever made. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists.
