THE BEST TO BUSINESS.—A few years ago, a lame boy in this city advertised for a boy. Next day the store was thronged by applicants, among the number a queer looking little fellow accompanied by a woman, who proved to be his aunt, in lieu of faithless parents, by whom he had been abandoned. Looking at this little waif, the merchant in the store promptly said: "I don't take size, given all this trouble to be too small." "I know he is small, but he is willing and faithful," said the woman. There was a twinkle in the boy's eyes which made the merchant think again. A partner in the firm volunteered to remark that he did not see what they wanted of such a boy—he wasn't bigger than a pint of cider. Just after a consultation the boy was set to work. A few days later a call was made for some one to stay all night. The prompt response of the little fellow contrasted well with the reluctance of the others. In the middle of the night the merchant looked in to see if all was right in the store, and presently discovered his youthful protege busy scissoring labels. "What are you doing? I did not tell you to work nights," said he. "I know you did not tell me so, but I thought I might as well be doing something." In the morning the cashier got orders to "double that boy's wages, for he is willing." Only a few weeks elapsed before a show of will boards passed through the streets, and very naturally all hands in the store rushed to see the spectacle.—A thief saw his opportunity, and entered at the rear door to seize something, but in a twinkling found himself clutched by the diminutive clerk aforesaid, and, after a struggle, was captured.—Not only was a robbery prevented, but valuable articles taken from other stores were recovered. When asked by the merchant why he did behest to watch when all others quit their work, the reply was, "You told me never to leave the store when others are absent, and I thought I'd stay." Orders were immediately given once more: "Double that boy's wages; he is willing and faithful." To-day that boy is getting a salary of two thousand five hundred dollars, and next January will become a member of the firm. Young men, imitate that example.

WOMEN'S RIGHT TO SHAVE.—It has long been conceded that women had a right to shave if they wanted to, though it has not been deemed desirable or proper. The onward march of events, however, has changed the public sentiment, and now it is considered a very good thing for ladies to learn to shave—other people. That is just what she is doing in Chicago, where a saloon is opened, in which the pretty owners handle the razor. A Chicago paper says:—The enterprise has proved a success from the start, and the place is thronged with beard growing fellows anxious to submit their faces to the soft and really skillful manipulations of the barberesses.—The girls wear their binding honors bravely and only once in a while draw a little blood. But the character of the customers is not of the highest order, consisting principally of swells and rowdies and fellows who never have a pure thought about a woman. Men at all fastidious would not care to be lathered by the same brush that had stroked the cheek of a rowdy backman. Still, women should make very excellent handlers of the razor and shears, and when their employment becomes sufficiently common to be the rule rather than the exception, the present objections will be largely removed. It would be a pleasant thing to see the hundreds of soap-locked, empty headed young men who now claim the title of barber turned out into the field to give place to the neat-handed, clever, honest girls anxious to earn an honorable living.

NEWSPAPER INFLUENCE.—Ralph Waldo Emerson says: "Show us an intelligent family of boys and girls, and we will show you a family where newspapers and periodicals are plenty. Nobody who has been without these private tutors can know their educating power for good or evil. Have you ever thought of the innumerable topics of discussion which they suggest at the breakfast table, the important public measures with which thus early our children become acquainted;—great philanthropic questions of the day, to which, unconsciously, their attention is awakened, and the general spirit of intelligence which is evoked by these quiet visitors? Anything that makes home pleasant, cheerful and chatty, thins the haunts of vice and the thousand and one avenues of temptation, should certainly be regarded, when we consider its influence on the minds of the young, as a great social and moral light."

ECHO-MEN.—There is no greater bore than an echo that repeats, assentingly, whatever one suggests or asserts. A man of sense likes to argue his points and prove his positions. The wholesome of opposition sharpens his wits; but if he is met with a continual affirmative iteration of his own words his game is blocked, and he is, so to speak, dumfounded. On the contrary a sententious "No, I don't think so," puts a man on his mettle. If wrong, he has a chance of being set right; if right, of enjoying an honest triumph. To be in company with one who has no opinion but your own is as bad as being caged with a jackdaw. If you ask an individual in the habit of agreeing with everybody the reason of compliance, he may tell you, perhaps, that he hates controversy. Hates controversy! He might as well say that he hates truth, for disputation is the crucible in which the gold of truth is separated from the alloy of error. How many things were taken for granted in former ages that modern argument has shown to be mere fallacies. The grand object of a man of mind is to acquire knowledge; but he can learn nothing from those who are always ready to pin their faith on his sleeve without taking the trouble to out it for themselves. We detest the anarchy that is too full of to doubt, and the indifference that is too philosophic to argue.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—To all thoughtful young women everywhere we commend the following, clipped from the Vermont Chronicle. The example it gives ought to be followed by all girls, in reference to all young men of any evil practices whatsoever. "Why did you not take the arm of my lovely friend last night?" said a young lady to her friend, a very intelligent girl, about nineteen, in a large town near Lake Ontario. She replied: "Because I know him to be a licentious young man." "Someone I" was the answer of the sister. "If you refuse the attentions of all licentious young men, you will have none, I can assure you." "Very well," said her friend, "then I can dispense with them altogether, for my reputation is unblemished." How long would it take to revolutionize society—and for the better—were all young ladies to adopt this resolution?

THE TALENTED TOPED MAN.—In persons the talented young man is tall and generally thin, with fair and generally long hair, brushed behind his ears, and he looks as close to be an English island young man, when one is approaching. In conversation fluency commands of a large share of side slinkers. Talent of young men is to be Europe, on the other hand, are usually bearded like a card, and quite as severe to a stranger's treatment. Red and white wear thinner—which are so burning, their body acquaintances tell them in pretty raptures—and are all intensely excited, with sharpness, steamy eyes, high brows, gently spread over with a coat of thought. They all smoke a great deal and drink as much as they can, being easily fuddled, whereby they gain the reputation among their female friends of being very wild fellows indeed, and are sometimes, in moments of sweet confidence, greatly reproved for their excesses, when they smile sadly, and shake a drooping head, as much as to say it is the fate of genius. The talented young man is not often a dandy; he rather affects a certain disorder in his apparel, which shall single him out from the common herd, and so gain him the proud distinction which is the chief aim of his ambition—to be inquired after and pointed out as the talented Mr. Brooks.

Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glow and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Anson M. Canfield's Estate.

STATE OF VERMONT, } At a Probate Court holden
Manchester District, ss. } in the Probate Office in Manchester, in and for said District, on the 4th day of May, 1870.

Present, Hon. E. B. BURTON, Judge.

The administrator on the estate of Anson M. Canfield, late of Arlington, in said District, deceased, presented an application in writing to said Court representing that the estate of said deceased consists of real estate held in common with said administrator, and that the only heir-at-law of said estate is a minor less than one year old, and that it would be most beneficial to the estate and those interested therein that all said real estate except the widow's dower, be sold, and the proceeds invested in stocks, or put at interest for the benefit of said heir-at-law; and praying said Court for the reasons aforesaid to grant him a license to sell of said real estate.

Whereupon it was ordered that said application be heard at a Probate Court to be holden at the Probate Office in Manchester, in said District, on the last Wednesday of May, 1870, and that notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing a certified copy of this order three weeks successively in the Manchester Journal, a newspaper printed at said Manchester, previous to said time of hearing.
