THE TRIBUNE.

A SONG FOR THE SEASON.

BY ROBERT P. GREELEY.

I.

EVENING shadows fall around us,
Bidding toil and trouble flee;
Comes, at length, the hour that gives us
Peace and calm tranquillity.—
Take the plow share from the mould,
Place the sheep within the fold,
Pile the faggot on the hearth—
Banish care, and welcome mirth!

II.

'Tis the hour when spirits roam
O'er the scenes they loved of yore,
And one slight and childlike form
Hovers new our hearthstone o'er,
Pointing with her airy hand
Upward to the Spirit-Land,—
Then, like mist at break of day,
Fading silently away!

III.

Sister! oh! my bosom yearneth
Side by side to roam with thee,
And my heart in sadness mourneth,
Vainly longing to be free!
In the grave-yard, mouldering, lie
Forms once dear to you and I;—
But, though friends with me are few,
Thou, at least, wert always true!

IV.

Autumn winds are sadly tolling
Knells for the departing year,
And without the leaves are falling—
All is desolate and sere.
Where have gone the bright hued flowers—
Where those sunny Summer hours!—
Sad the true, though stern, reply—
Earthly things were born to die!

V.

Then, while mindful of our fate,
Let us get by heart the task
They, alone, are truly great,
Who can toil, nor reason ask!
Humble though our lot may be,
Let us live contentedly;
And our star will ne'er grow dim,
If we put our trust in HIM!

Principal and Proprietor.
TARRYTOWN, Sept. 29, 1845.
The undersigned having been requested by Wm. P. Lyon, Esq. to attend the examination of the pupils of the Irving Institute, over which he presides, take pleasure in stating the high gratification they have derived from observing the remarkable proficiency of the pupils and the evidences they have exhibited of a thorough, systematic and eminently successful course of instruction in all the branches of solid and polite education. While the minds of the pupils give such evidence of careful nurture, some of the undersigned have had occasion through successive years to observe that their morals and manners are equally subject to a careful and judicious training, and to a system of discipline at once inflexibly rigid, yet paternal and just.
In addition to the advantages which the Irving Institute possesses for the education of youth, on account of its eminently salubrious situation, the health of the pupils is systematically promoted by active exercises within the ample grounds of the Institute, part of which is fitted up as a gymnasium, by swimming or skating as the season invites, and by more extended rambles among the attractive scenery of the neighborhood.
With a confidence in the Irving Institute strengthened in most of the undersigned by prolonged observation, they are at once prompted by their feelings and by a sense of duty to commend it strongly to public consideration. Signed,

FIRE-PROOF Salamander Safes.—It is a well-known fact that no Safe previous to the great fire of December, 1835, had been invented capable of resisting the heat usually produced in the burning of a single storehouse—but since which, however, the great and valuable discovery of the Salamander Safe was made, and has been patented by Wilder, and the right to manufacture and sell in this State, purchased by the subscriber.
The recent triumphant results in the burning of the Tribune Buildings, and in the great conflagration of July, 1845, in this city, and others equally satisfactory, has induced others to make and offer for sale an article called improved Salamander Safes, in violation of the patent law, and for which suits have been commenced against the manufactors and agents, and should they fail to respond to the injury done to the Patentee, suits will be extended to the purchasers and those having them in use, they being equally liable. (See Phillips on Patents.) A word to the wise is sufficient.
