Col. Benton Dictating.

We publish the following lines which recently appeared in the National Intelligencer. They were written by Mrs. L. H. Sigourney:

He lay upon his couch. Disease had sapp'd
The noble column of his frame, and pain
Gnaw'd at the life-strings. Yet the unblenching heart
Still labor'd for his country, to complete
The work he promised her, though inch by inch,
The fell destroyer at the fortress-gate
Demanded entrance.
O'er the pillow bent
His daughter, treasuring, with attentive ear,
The faintest whisper of his fervent thought,
Trusting each murmur to her husband's pen,
That traced it on a page for future years,
And statesmen cradled now in mother's arms
To read and ponder.
But his judging mind
Scann'd every sentence, ere it took the form
Of permanence, with critical resolve,
Making the flow of classic eloquence
Clear for posterity.
And then he paused,
And gathered up his wasted strength, and told
A friend from his own green Missourian vales
How he had loved his country, and had toil'd
To lull her troubled elements to peace
And unity; and how within his breast
All animosity had died away
Against those compeers who had sought her good,
Although the shadow of a differing creed
Had sometimes stolen between them to eclipse
Their Senatorial concord. 'Twas sublime
To see the grandeur of that lofty mind
Down-treading all decay, all ills of time.

Rome in her better days had hailed the man
Who kept such ardent glow of patriotism
Pure 'mid the ice of death. Yes, more than this,
True love of country hath the smile of Heaven
And homage from embalming History.

So, in his armor braced, he dared to meet
The latest foe, if foe he may be called,
Who comes with silent ministry to bear
The upright soul home to a God of truth.

Colossal Credulity.

Somebody has been experimenting upon the gullibility of the editor of the Plaquemine Pilot. Read the following fearful chapter:

HAUNTED HOUSE—And Astounding Revelations at Chenière Ronquillo or Bayou Torillon.—On the place now occupied by Mr. Landsman alias Fite is the scene of strange and unearthly performances. We have been told that it is now haunted and visited by supernatural beings; strange noises and unnatural sounds have been heard by gentlemen of our parish. Many persons have gone there to visit the house and have asked questions concerning various matters and they were answered promptly by supernatural voices, and strange to say when you ask a question you cannot tell from what part of the house the answer proceeds. Imagine yourselves in this desolate house, and when you are about to leave it, you are caught in the arms of a monster and held so tight that it is impossible to get away until it thinks proper to release you. It has not yet been ascertained whether this monster is mortal or spiritual as it takes different forms—to-day it is one form and to-morrow it is another.

And now comes the most remarkable of all. On the tomb of a gentleman lately deceased, there is placed every day a clean plate with a dressed chicken on it, when from behind the tomb comes a large creature in the form of a snake, nine or ten feet long, with a head something akin to an alligator, and commences leisurely to devour the delicately prepared fowl. As soon as it finishes, it disappears, no one knows whither, and you see nothing but the plate and the bones, and every day the same thing is renewed; you see a clean plate and a nice dressed chicken, but who or what places it there is yet to be found out. What are we to think of these strange rumors? Who knows but what it may be the great sea serpent there has been so much talk of, and who, tired of his native element, has found his way into the Gulf and up the bayou into the quiet grave yard of Ronquillo, there to live on the dainties that is placed in his way.

For ourselves, we intend to visit the scene of action, after which we may say more on the subject. For the present it remains a mystery.

Fun with the F's.

A famous fisher found himself father of five flirting females—Fanny, Florence, Fernando, Francesca and Fenella. The first four were flat-featured, ill-favored, forbidden-faced, freckled, frumps, fretful, flippant, foolish and flaunting. Fenella was a fine-featured, fresh, fleet-footed fairy, frank, free and full of fun. The fisher failed, and was forced by fickle fortune to forego his footman, forfeit his forefather's fine field, and find a forlorn farm-house in a forsaken forest. The four fretful females, fond of figuring at feasts in feathers and fashionable finery, fumed at their fugitive father. Forsaken by fulsome, flattering fortune-hunters, who followed them when they first flourished, Fenella fondled her father, flavored their food, forgot her flattering followers, and frolicked in frieze without flounces. The father finding himself forced to forage in foreign parts for a fortune, found he could afford a farthing to his five fondlings.

The first four were fain to foster their frivolity with fine frills and fans, fit to finish their father's finances. Fenella, fearful of flooring him, formed a fancy for a full fresh flower. Fate favored the fish doctor for a few days, when he fell in with a fog; his filly's footsteps faltered, and food failed. He found himself in front of a fortified fortress. Finding it forsaken, and feeling himself feeble and forlorn with fasting, he fed on the fish, flesh and fowl he found, fricasseed and fried, and when full fell flat on the floor. Fresh in the forenoon, he forthwith flew to the fruitful fields, and not forgetting Fenella, filched a fair flower, when a foul, frightful, fiendish figure flashed forth: "Felonious fellow, fingering my flowers, I'll finish you! Go say farewell to your fine felicitous family and face me in a fortnight!"

The faint-hearted fisher fumed and faltered, and fast was far in his flight. His five daughters flew to fall at his feet, and fervently felicitate him. Frantically and fluently he unfolded his fate. Fenella, forthwith fortified by her filial fondness, followed her father's footsteps, and flung her faultless form at the foot of the frightful figure, who forgave the father, and fell flat on his face, for he had fervently fallen in a fiery fit of love for the fair Fenella. He feasted her fill; fascinated by his faithfulness, she forgot the ferocity of his face, form and features, and frankly and fondly fixed Friday, 5th of February, for the affair to come off. There was festivity, fragrance, finery, fireworks, fricasseed frogs, fritters, fish, flesh, fowl and fermentary, frontignac, flip and fare fit for the fastidious; fruit, fuss, flambeaux, four fat fiddlers and fifers; and the frightful form of the fortunate and frumpish fiend fell from him, and he fell at Fenella's feet a fair, favored, fine, frank, freeman of the forest. Behold the fruits of filial affection.

PHOTOGRAPHY APPLIED TO THE ORNAMENTING OF SILK STUFFS.—A very interesting discovery has been made, by which photography may be applied to the ornamenting of silk stuffs. The silk, when prepared, if exposed to the rays of light penetrating through the fissures of the window-blinds in a close room, the points where the stuff has received these rays of light will assume a peculiar reddish tint. Now, suppose a piece of metal or of strong paper to be cut out after a given pattern, and to be laid upon a piece of silk prepared as before; if exposed to the sun, or, better still, to simple daylight, the pattern will be reproduced in a few instants. The pale red which the parts acted upon by the light assume is so permanent that nothing can destroy it; nay, it will fix other colors, such as madder, campeachy, etc., just like a mordant, and in that case it will modify the color of those substances in absorbing it. The experiment may be varied as follows: Let a fern leaf be laid upon a piece of prepared silk, and kept flat upon it by a pane of glass; then that part of the silk which is protected by the leaf will retain its original color, while all the rest will receive the impression of light, as above described, forming the ground on which the figure of the leaf will appear in white, gray, or whatever other color the silk may have had before the operation. The richest patterns may thus be obtained on plain silks, and at a comparatively small expense.

A love-smitten gentleman, after conversing awhile with his dulcinea on the interesting topic of matrimony, concluded at last with a declaration, and put the very emphatic question of, "Will you have me?" "I am very sorry to disappoint you," replied the lady, "and hope my refusal will not give you pain; but I must answer—no!" "Well, well, that will do, madam," said her philosophical lover, "and now suppose we change the subject!"

NON CONDUCTORS.—Colonel Jones is a gentleman and a wit. The other day he was showing the town to some ladies from the steeple of the court-house. One of these asking him why the lightning rod, where it was attached to the building for support, was encased in a piece of horn, the Colonel replied that horn was a non-conductor. "Oh, indeed!" says the lady; "I never knew that before." "To be sure," says the Colonel. "Have you never observed that when the boys have had a horn or two they can't conduct themselves properly?" The great height from the ground prevented the ladies from fainting.

LOOK OUT FOR THE NIGGER.—The following story is current in Virginia:

The Baptists were baptising some converts; they finished by baptising an old negro (a slave). The parson, not thinking as much of his soul as of the white portion of his converts, let him drop and made his own way to the shore. The negro, blowing and puffing, reached the shore, and sitting on a stump, remarked: "That some gentleman's nigger would get killed by sich foolishness yet."

So far as the Court Martial over the river has affected public opinion here, it has caused a general enlistment of feeling in favor of Gen. Twiggs, the old hero arraigned before the tribunal. The affair is generally looked upon as a farce, unworthy of the War Department. The facts indicate plainly that the Secretary of War deserved and still deserves a little Twigging. The Fakeers of India.

Amongst the religious practices by which the Hindoos expect to obtain favor of Heaven, bodily mortification, or self-inflicted torture, holds a high position. The class of devotees who make this horrible custom their peculiar profession, are termed fakirs, or fakeers. These repulsive fanatics signalize their piety by enduring the severest tortures, and with a constancy worthy of a better case. Bishop Heber describes the appearance of these, as he entered the holy city of Benares. "Fakeers' houses," he observes, "occur at every turn, adorned with idols, and sending forth an increasing tinkling and strumming of vinas, byals, and other discordant instruments; while religious mendicants of every Hindoo sect, offering every conceivable deformity which chalk, cow-dung, disease, matted locks, distorted limbs, and disgusting and hideous attitudes of penance can show, literally line the streets on both sides. Here I saw repeated instances of that penance of which I heard so much—of men with their legs and arms voluntarily stiffened by keeping them in one position, and their hands clenched till their nails grew out of the backs. Their pitiful exclamations as we passed, 'Agha Sahib,' 'Topee Sahib,'—the usual names in Hindostani for Europeans—'Khana ke waste kooch cheez do'—'Give me something to eat'—soon drew from me the few pence I had; but it was a drop of water in the ocean, and the importunities of the rest as we advanced into the city were almost drowned in the hubbub which surrounded us."

The tortures which these fanatics endure exceeds all belief. A penitent who went through the ceremony of sitting between five fires, is described by Frazer, who witnessed the penance at a public festival. Being seated on a quadrangular stage, after the sun began to have considerable power, he stood on one leg, gazing steadfastly on his scorching beams, whilst fires large enough to roast an ox were burning around the penitent counting his beads, and occasionally adding fuel to the flames. He stood upright on his head in the midst of these fires for three hours; and then seating himself with his legs across, he remained till the end of the day, exposed to the scorching heat of both the sun and fire. At one of the festivals of the goddess Kali, the spouse of Siva, Bishop Heber relates that one of these self-torturers had hooks thrust through the muscles of his side, which he endured without shrinking; and a broad bandage being fastened round his waist to prevent the hooks from being torn through the flesh by the weight of his body, he was fastened to a long pole, and by means of another pole fixed in the ground, he was swung aloft and whirled round in the air. On a motion being made to take him down, he made a sign for them to proceed, a mark of constancy received with shouts of applause by the admiring multitude.

Another traveler describes the same class of fanatics: "Amongst," says Bernier, "that vast number and great variety of fakeers, dervishes, or religious heathens of the Indies, there is abundance of them that have convents in which there are superiors, and wherein they make certain vows of chastity, poverty and obedience, leading so odd a life that I doubt whether you can give credit to it. These are commonly called faquirs, as if you should say, 'united to God.' You shall see many of them sit stark naked, or lie days and nights upon the ashes, and commonly enough, under some of those trees that are on the sides of the talabs or ponds, or else in those galleries that are about the idol temples. Some of them have their hair hanging down to the middle of their legs, and that wreathed into several parcels, as the large manes of our horses. Of these I have seen some in divers places who held one arm, and sometimes both, lifted up perpetually above their heads, and that had at the ends of their fingers wreathed nails that were longer by measure than half my little finger. Their arms were small and lean, as of herotical persons, because they took not sufficient nourishment in that forced posture; and they could not let them down to take anything with them, either meat or drink, because the nerves were retired, and the joints were filled and dried up; wherefore, also, they have young novices, that serve them as holy men with great respect.

There is no Megara in hell so terrible to look on as those men are—all naked, with their black skin, long hair, dried arms, and in the posture mentioned, and with crooked nails. I have often met in the fields—especially upon the lands of the rajahs—whole squadrons of these faquirs, altogether naked, dreadful to behold. Some held their arms lifted up in the posture mentioned; others had their terrible hair hanging about them, or else they had wreathed them about their head; some had a kind of Hercules' club in their hands; others had dry and stiff tigers'-skins over their shoulders. I saw them pass thus, quite naked, without any shame, through the midst of a great borough. I admired how men, women and children could look upon them so indifferently, without being moved no more than if we should see pass some Ermite through our streets; and how the women brought them alms with much devotion, taking them for very holy men, much wiser and better than others."

A certain class of these mendicants live in communities, like the monks of the western world, while others live singly as hermits, or wander about making strange displays of self-tortures and mortifications. Although from time immemorial asceticism has been held in high veneration in the east, and it was deemed meritorious to retire from the world, to renounce the comforts of the domestic and social relations, and to live in poverty, solitude, and religious contemplation, the original principles of Mahommedanism were unfavorable to a monastic life. Religious mendicants did not appear among the Mussulmans till six centuries after Mohammed, in the thirteenth century of the Christian era. But there is reason to believe that they existed among the Hindoos at a much earlier period. From the first they appear to have been distinguished by their ragged and filthy dress, and the severity of their self-inflicted penances. A celebrated member of their order, who flourished about the close of the twelfth century, says that the exterior of those devoted to a religious life should be a ragged dress and ill-combed hair; and a later writer affirms that a member of this mendicant order should have ten of the qualities proper to the dog: To be always hungry; to have no fixed residence; to watch during the night; to leave no heritage after his death; not to abandon his master, although ill-treated by him; to content himself with the lowest place, and to yield his seat to any one who wants it; to return the person who has beaten him when offered a morsel of bread; to keep at a distance when one is bringing him something to eat; and not to think of returning to the place he has quitted while following his master.

Among the Turks several orders of fakeers or dervishes exist. The chief of these is the order of the Maulavis, founded about the close of the thirteenth century by the Persian poet, Jelaleddin Rumi. They have a great monastery at Galata and another at Iconium, and have also convents in nearly all Mahommedan countries. Mendicants of this order are notorious for their fondness of intoxicating liquors and of opium, and are addicted to the practice of sorcery, conjurations and tricks of legerdemain. They may leave their order, and are then released from the vows of celibacy, and are permitted to marry. The order of the Rufulus are celebrated for their strange excesses of self-mortification. In their weekly meetings some of their number are always selected to hold a red hot piece of iron between their teeth till it becomes cold, while the others make deep incisions on their bodies with sharp-edged instruments. A third class, termed the Calendars, are distinguished by the singularity of their dress. They sometimes wear a tiger's or a sheep's skin, sometimes garments made of parti-colored clothes, and not unfrequently go about half-naked, with their skin painted red or black, feathers in their ears, fancifully-shaped turbans or hats on their heads, a stick or hatchet, or sometimes a drawn sword in their hands; and in their girdles a plate or bowl, which they hold out to receive alms. In this guise they visit coffee-houses and other places of public resort to preach and to beg.

The Hindoo fakeers go entirely naked, carrying on their shoulders a thick club, the end of which is wound round with rags of cloth of all colors. They strew their hair, which hangs half-way down their backs, with ashes, with which they sometimes besmear their bodies. They generally take up their abode in shady places, either in the open air, or in old and ruinous buildings, without using anything to repose on, or to cover themselves. All classes of these mendicants endeavor to gain the veneration of the people by the infliction of absurd and cruel penances and tortures. Stavorinus says he met with some, who, by holding an arm raised in one position for many years, had lost the power of lowering it again. Others had bent their bodies forward, till they had grown so crooked that they formed a right angle. Some, by continually bending the head backward, could not bring it back to its natural position. Others keep the hands clasped together so long, that the nails grow into the flesh, and come out on the other side. Tavernier mentions that some of these never sit nor lie down to sleep, but are supported by a rope hung down for that purpose. Others lay fire on their heads, and burn their scalps to the very bone. Others roll themselves naked on thorns. Some bury themselves in a pit or ditch for nine or ten days, without tasting food or drink.

A recent traveler in India states that he saw a fakeer who was never known to eat at all. He carried a small black stone about him, which had been presented to his mother by a holy man. He pretended that by sucking this stone, and without any sort of nutriment, he had arrived at the mature age of forty, in a state of obesity which did great credit to the fattening powers of the black stone. Oddly enough, his business was to solicit offerings of rice, milk, fish and ghee, for the benefit of his patron, Devi. These offerings were nightly laid upon the altar, before leaving the fragments to be distributed among the poor of the parish. Sometimes, this writer adds, a fakeer will take it into his head to trundle himself along like a cart wheel for a couple of hundred miles or so. He ties his wrists to his ancles, gets a tir—a compound of chopped straw, mud and cow-dung—laid along the ridge of his backbone, a bamboo staff passed through the angle formed by his knees and elbows by way of axle, and off he goes; a brazen cup and a hubble bubble bang like tassels at the two extremities of the axle. Thus accoutred, he often starts on a journey which will occupy him for several years. On arriving in the vicinity of a village, the whole population turn out to meet and escort him with due honors to the public well, or tank, where he unbends, and washes off the dirt and dust acquired by perambulating many miles of dusty road. After ascertaining by minute inquiries the state of the larders of the assembled villagers, he takes up his quarters with the man who is best able to entertain him. When the supplies begin to fail, he ties his hand to his heels again, gets a fresh tire put on, and is escorted out of the village with the same formalities as accompanied his entrance.

Some of these mendicants are undoubtedly insane, but the greater part of them are imposters and hypocrites, who secretly indulge in the grossest licentiousness, while they assume a sanctimonious air in order to obtain a pretext for idleness, and for preying on the ignorant and superstitious. D'Herbelot estimated that there were 800,000 Mahommedan and 1,200,000 Hindoo fakeers in India.

TALLADEGA CAVE IN ALABAMA.—Brother Hardy, of the Selma Sentinel, has been "bobbin' around" in the up country. Among other things he visited the Talladega cave. He gives the following description of it:

This cave, which is well known to the people of the western part of Talladega county, is situated immediately on the road from Fayetteville to Talladega town, and about six miles above the present terminus of the Alabama and Tennessee rivers railroad. The opening, or mouth, is of an oval form, and goes directly down some fifteen feet, then the vacuum, or opening takes a northern direction with gradual descent for about 200 yards, where there is another mouth, or abrupt descent, of twelve or fifteen feet, at the bottom of which there is a fine, bold stream of water abounding in fish of all kinds and size, and the larger number are without eyes. The inside of the cave gradually widens, and it is said that it has been explored some mile or two without coming to any stopping place. All along the bottom of the cave there are numbers of formations resembling cypress knees, and from the top they give the appearance of icicles, formed, probably, by the water's dripping. The entire formation of this cave is one of the greatest curiosities, and will well pay for the time and trouble to any one fond of natural curiosities. It is the largest cave in the South.

A TALE OF TERROR.—The following rather marvellous story is told by one of the Vienna journals:

As a farmer of Orsinovi, near that city, was a few nights ago returning from market, he stopped at a roadside public-house, and imprudently showed the innkeeper a large sum which he had received. In the night the innkeeper, armed with a poignard, stole into the farmer's chamber and prepared to stab him, but the farmer, who from the man's manner at supper conceived suspicions of foul play, had thrown himself fully dressed on the bed, without going to sleep, and being a powerful man, he wrested the poignard from the other, and using it against him, laid him dead at his feet. A few moments after he heard stones thrown at the window, and a voice, which he recognized as that of the innkeeper's son, said: "The grave is ready." This proved to him that the father and son had planned his murder, and to avoid detection had intended burying the dead body at once. He thereupon wrapped the dead body in a sheet and let it down from the window; he then ran to the gendarmerie and stated what had occurred. Three gendarmes immediately accompanied him to the house, and found the young man busily engaged in shovelling earth into a grave.

"What are you burying?" said they.

"Only a horse, which has just died!"

"You are mistaken," answered one of them, jumping into the grave and raising the corpse. "Look!" and he held up a lantern to the face of the deceased.

"Good God!" cried the young man, thunderstruck, "it is my father."

He was then arrested, and at once confessed all.

A blacksmith, having lost his wife, complained to a neighbor of his misfortune in terms of the most bitter disappointment. "Oh," replied the latter, "your case is not so deplorable as to excite grief like this. I will give you my living wife, and a barrel of cider to boot, for your dead one."

Spurgeon sometimes comes out with a good thing. "Brethren," said he, "if God had referred the Ark to a Committee on Naval Affairs, it's my opinion it wouldn't have been built yet."

DRUGS AND MEDICINES.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION, PHILADELPHIA—A Benevolent Institution, established by special endowment for the relief of the sick and distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

To all persons afflicted with SEXUAL DISEASES, such as Spermatorrhœa, Seminal Weakness, Impotence, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, etc., etc.

The "Howard Association," in view of the awful destruction of human life, caused by Sexual Diseases, and the deceptions practised upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a Dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, etc.,) and, in cases of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves with renewed zeal to this very important but much despised cause.

Just published by the Association, a Report on Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other Diseases of the Sexual Organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, which will be sent by mail, (in a sealed letter envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on the receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage.

Address, for Report or treatment, Dr. GEORGE R. CALHOUN, Consulting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth street, Philadelphia, Pa.

By order of the Directors:
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary. 43 6m&W

ABITA WATER FOR SALE—
The water of the "Christy Abita Springs," so celebrated for the numerous cures it has effected of many of the most troublesome diseases, such as Scrofula, Chronic Diarrhœa, diseases of the Liver, of the Skin, of the Kidneys, Bronchitis, Laryngitis, Nervous affections, Paralysis, Diseases peculiar to Females, etc., may be purchased fresh in wood or glass vessels, at the following named places: A. C. Wilber & Co.'s, 22 Gravier street; E. Dechamp's, 21 St. Louis street; M. Morton's, 3 Poydras street, and at W. B. Abrams', corner of Camp and Common streets.
Dr. Riddell uses the following language in his report or analysis of the water:
"Among the recorded analysis of several hundred mineral springs in various quarters of the globe, I have seen none similar to the Abita Springs."
This Spring is located on the head waters of the Abita river, about three miles east of Covington, parish of St. Tammany, in this State. It is very remarkable for the volume and quantity of water it discharges, as well as for the force of its ascending current as it makes its exit from the earth, which proves clearly that its fountain head is in an elevated region, and at a great distance from the spring, as the quantity of water discharged is about 120 gallons a minute, and which never increases or decreases. This remarkable spring is in fact a "natural Artesian well," as pronounced by Prof. Riddell.
To prevent the recurrence of much disappointment to persons wishing to use this water in a pure and fresh state, the proprietor feels it to be a duty he owes to the public to state that it is in no manner connected with the spring recently excavated on an adjoining property, the water of which has been sold as the "B. Abita Water" from the Bagley Spring.

A NEW DISCOVERY—THE GREATEST AND MOST WONDERFUL IN THE WORLD.
SARSAPARILLA LOZENGES,
Simple and Compound.
Prepared by N. HEREU, Druggist and Physician.
Superior to all Essences, Syrups and Extracts so named, and to all specialities heretofore known.
I have for a long time thoroughly investigated the idea of a general therapeutic agent susceptible of being applied to all diseases, the development or morbid principle of which proceeds from an internal cause, either in the blood or any of the organs.
A careful and uninterrupted analysis of the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms had induced the hope that I could bring about such a result, and, thanks to my indefatigable researches, it is now obtained.
I have found in some vegetables the necessary means for this grand idea, which is based upon an oleaginous principle of Sarsaparilla partly known to the public. Such is the discovery which I have the honor this day of advertising. The form of Lozenges has been given to it, because its nature precluded the possibility of doing otherwise; and I have divided it into simple and compound Lozenges, in order that they might be given to children as well as adults.
My first experiments were made privately, and remained unknown until wonderful results had satisfied me that I had succeeded, and that the charge of quackery could not be brought against me.
The attention of physicians and of the public is called to these Lozenges, in order that every one may witness the admirable results of the same.
GENERAL EFFECTS,
Testified to by upwards of a thousand persons.
The stomach is cleansed, the blood is purified and renovated by removing all impurities from this precious organ and fluid.
SPECIAL EFFECTS.
1. Prompt and radical cure of all diseases generally.
2. Persons who have used these Lozenges have never had the cholera nor the yellow fever.
3. Venereal, syphilitic, hepatic, scorbutical, gouty, rheumatic and nervous and bilious diseases, are completely cured a few days after the remedy is resorted to.
4. All diseases of the lungs, head, eyes, stomach, bowels and other internal and external complaints disappear entirely, provided the Lozenges are resorted to.
