DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES and Measures.

A strict construction of the Constitution, and no assumption of doubtful powers.

A Diplomacy, asking for nothing but what is clearly right and submitting to nothing wrong.

No connexion between the government and banks.

An ad valorem revenue tariff.

No public debt, either by the General Government or by the States, except for objects of urgent necessity.

No assumption by the General Government of the debts of the States, either directly or indirectly, by a distribution of the proceeds of the public lands.

No extensive system of Internal Improvement by the General Government, or by the States.

A constitutional barrier against improvident State loans.

The honest payment of our debts and the sacred preservation of the public faith.

A gradual return from a paper credit system.

No grants of exclusive charters and privileges by special legislation, to banks.

No swindling corporations.

No connexion between Church and State.

A preference for democrats over whigs for every office.

Acquiescence in the rule of the majority in all cases of party discipline.

No proscription for honest opinions.

Fostering aid to public education.

A "progressive" reformation of all abuses.

The Last Step before Nobility.

LOLA MONTES (the present Countess of Landsfield) arrived at Baden, in the height of the bathing season, with cigar in mouth and riding whip in hand. She commenced immediately the outlay of her electrifying graces upon the public eye, producing an effect proportionate to their contrast with the extreme calmness and propriety of the manners of the German ladies of rank. In the afternoon she followed the world to the public drive, and, mounted upon the most furious horse which could be found, she executed feats of daring horsemanship such as are commonly seen only within the ring of a circus. At twilight, with the rest of the world, noble and ignoble, she went to the public gaming saloon; and, with riding dress on and whip in hand, flung her money upon the table with the prodigality of one whose receipts are as easy as her expenditures. The first evening after her arrival she lost a hundred Napoleons. The second and third evenings her losses went on increasing.

'This becomes tiresome,' she remarked at last, to one of her admirers, 'I don't like to be always doing one thing. I'll vary pleasures a little by going to the ball.'

Making a toilette of such skill and splendor as she alone, at that place, was mistress of, she presended herself at the door of the ball room.

'You cannot pass!' said the functionary at the door.

'Not pass!' cried Lola, 'has not my servant handed you my ticket!'

'Your money will be returned to you.'

'Make room, insolent villain!' cried Lola, bending her two enormous eyes, with brows descending like clouds over two war shields fiercely upon him.

'I have my orders!' said the man, still standing in her way.

With a single blow, directly between the eyes, the man staggered back against the wall, and entered Lola, to the crowded ball-room, with as calm a march as if she had sailed to the threshold of Venus's clouds.

There was a buzz around the room, but, meantime, Lola had seated herself between two Duchesses. In this position she was approached by a grave personage, who politely requested her to leave the hall.

'My friend!' said Lola, 'don't make my ears too hot!'

'If you do not immediately depart,' said the official, 'I will have you taken out by a corporal and four soldiers. I am the high sheriff of Baden, and my guard-post is but two steps from the door.'

'You shall fight me for this,' cried Lola, furiously, (but rising to depart) 'and, Monsieur, though you little deserve it, I will give you your choice of weapons!'

'I choose a regiment of grenadiers,' replied the Sheriff, 'and I moreover order you to quit Baden in twenty-four hours.'

The next morning, accompanied by a young Bavarian officer, Lola started for Munich, and her intimacy with the King followed immediately, and her ennoblement soon after. So that, probably, if she had not been turned out of the ball room at Baden, she would not have been now Countess of Landsfield, with an estate, and an hundred thousand francs a year.

What will probably be the future history of Lola Montes, Countess of Landsfield?

A CARD.

I WISH to offer the public to my advertisements in this paper; very thankful for the liberal patronage already received of this city and vicinity, and the State at large, I shall endeavor to keep that confidence with which I am entrusted by such a large community. Goods of every description I am able to sell lower than heretofore; the freights by means of the railroad are 50 per cent. less than I usually paid. I also bought this time most of my goods east of the Alleghanies, at such prices, that I can sell them by adding the freight from the river as low as they can be bought there wholesale or retail. Please call and examine my stock. Produce of every description taken at the highest market price.

NEW BOOKS. NEW BOOKS.

MORRISON & TALBOTT are now receiving their stock of Law, Medical, Theological, Miscellaneous, Juvenile and School Books, direct from New York and Philadelphia publishers.

We have no time at present to particularize—our selection is such as will meet with ready sale we doubt not, as we are determined to meet any competition, either here or elsewhere, in the right way.

We will hereafter give the public at a distance a glimpse of our variety through the newspapers, (we regret they cannot make a personal inspection,) looking to receive their orders, which shall be carefully attended to, at low prices. To the citizens of Indianapolis and vicinity, we respectfully tender an invitation to call and examine our stock, and learn the prices. Nov. 20
