*Boxes north of river.

Fire alarms are sounded upon the tower bell at department headquarters by striking the number of the signal station nearest the fire, in this manner: If for box 6, four distinct strokes and repeated; if for box 13, one stroke, a short pause, then three strokes, and repeated, thus, 1-111, 1-111, etc. "72" is sounded for all fires within the district bounded by Fifth, Ninth, Jackson and Quincy streets.

TEN STROKES, and repeated, followed by the number of the signal station nearest the fire, is the SECOND ALARM—for a serious fire.

THREE STROKES, followed by TWELVE, and repeated, is the GENERAL ALARM for a very dangerous fire, and calls out the entire department with a detail of police.

TWO STROKES, SLOWLY, indicates FIRE IS OUT.

One long whistle from water works, for fire south of river. Three whistles from same, for fires north of river.

FOLLOWING PRECEDENT.

Old Bill Botts Found the Chinese Not at All Accommodating.

A good, honest fellow in his way was Bill Botts, but he had never had an opportunity to study moral philosophy as taught in the colleges and universities. He came from Biddeford, in Devon, and very likely some of his ancestors had helped Drake "wallop" the Spaniards. He had followed in their footsteps by enlisting in the navy to fight for his country whenever called upon to do so.

When he returned from a voyage to China he brought with him a present for a gentleman who had been very kind to his old mother during his absence. It was a curiously fashioned Chinese garment made of bits of a species of straw strung together.

"Plase, sur, you must excuse us being torn," he said bashfully, when he presented it, "the Chinaman wouldn't part with us easy."

He had run across a Chinaman wearing it somewhere in the streets of Hong Kong, and the unfortunate celestial not understanding his summary request to "Hand that over here," he had simply yanked it off him.

To the suggestion that his conduct had hardly been consistent with strict honesty he replied:

"Beggin' your pardon, sur, he wuz only a haythen, an' I never heard that taking things from a haythen counts as stealin'."

"Well," replied his friend, "if many illustrious Englishmen had not acted on that assumption I don't know where the British empire would now be, so I'll keep the heathen's garments."

THE MANDOLIN GIRL.

She Was a Fraud, of Course, But None the Less Interesting.

In the corner of a New York cable car sat a charming girl. She was beautifully gowned, faultlessly gloved, bore a most becoming hat on her piquant little head, and on her lap carried a mandolin case. Of course she was the object of intense interest to the other passengers, and a man who had seen her nearly every day in the car and always carrying the mandolin put her down in his mind as the most devoted student of that musical instrument he had ever encountered. Behind him sat two shopgirls and they were discussing the interesting unknown.

"There is that mandolin girl again," said one of them. "I can't bear to look at her."

"Why not?" asked the other girl; "I think she is beautiful."

"So she is, but she is such a fraud. She clerks in a store downtown, and doesn't want people to know she is a shopgirl. So she carries that everlasting mandolin back and forth to convey the impression that she is a society girl out for a music lesson. I have known of her little dodge for more than a year, and am tired of it. I wish she would carry a tennis racket or a poodle for a change.

"The mandolin case is very convenient, however, for another girl told me that she carries her lunch, her overshoes, a comb and brush and lots of other things in it. It is not honest, though, and I feel contempt for her."

Possible.

A popular English Nonconformist minister was staying with a family in Glasgow, while on a visit to that city, whither he had gone on a deputation from the Wesleyan missionary society. At dessert, when invited to take some fine fruit which he declined, he mentioned to the family a curious circumstance concerning himself—he had never in his life tasted an apple, pear, grape or any other kind of green fruit. This fact caused considerable amazement to most of the family, but a cousin who was present—a cautious Scotchman of a most practical turn of mind—listened to the statement with great unconcern, and when the various exclamations which it had aroused subsided, he remarked dryly: "It's a great peety ye ladna been in Paradise, and there micht na hae been any fa'."

A Cool Chinaman.

Coolness is a powerful weapon, even against wild beasts. The other day a philosophic Chinaman, in the Straits settlements, was walking along a country road, and sucking a length of sugar cane. Out of the woods leaped a tiger. Some people in the Chinaman's position would have bolted; others would have screamed; still others would have fainted; but John merely gave the tiger a tap on the head with his sugar cane and then calmly went on sucking the toothsome juices. The tiger was so completely upset with his unexpected reception that he fled!

Carrier Pigeons.

The carrier-pigeon, when traveling, never feeds. If the distance be long, it flies without stopping to take nutriment, and at last arrives thin, exhausted, almost dying. If corn be presented to it, it refuses, contenting itself with drinking a little water and then sleeping. Two hours later it begins eating with great moderation, and sleeps again immediately afterwards. If its flight has been very prolonged, the pigeon will proceed in this manner for forty-eight hours before recovering its normal mode of feeding.

A Vagrant Bit of Advice.

We do not know to whom the following vagrant bit of advice should be credited, but it is good sound sense. "When a man playfully points a gun or pistol at you knock him down. Don't stop to inquire whether it is loaded or not—knock him down. Don't be particular what you knock him down with—only see that he is thoroughly knocked down. If a coroner's inquest be held let it be on the other fellow—he won't be missed."
