Kidder's Gas Regulator.—A better light with one-quarter less Gas. We have examined and tested with some care KIDDER'S GAS REGULATOR, an invention designed to regulate the pressure at which Gas shall be burned by each consumer. Kidder's Regulator is a simple mechanical contrivance, by which each consumer may regulate the pressure at which he desires to burn the Gas, so as to give precisely the amount he wishes to burn and no more. And when it is once thus adjusted, it preserves the same pressure without any further attention.
The invention seems to us one of the greatest utility. From various trials we have made with it, we are convinced that it saves fully twenty-five per cent of the Gas consumed, and that it gives also a better, softer and more equable light. Professors TORREY, GIBBS, ELLETT and others, have certified to its excellence, and a number of persons who have used it have also testified to the economy and other advantages which they have derived from it. We are thoroughly convinced it is an invention worthy of general attention, and calculated to prove universally and decidedly useful.

It is a neat quarto of eight pages, fine paper, with designs by Billings. It opens with a picture of Luther at the Diet of Worms, and will advocate a Free Bible, Free Schools, Free Speech, a Free Press, and immediate legislation to neutralize Foreign Influence in our Government and Institutions.
The game American, which our Journal bears, gives the keynote to our enterprise. We shall aim to illustrate and defend those principles and those free institutions which we glory in as distinctively American, and to awaken afresh among the people an earnest American spirit, especially in view of the dangers which threaten our liberties from foreign and Papal influence.
We shall advocate Americanism on no narrow, sectarian, sectional, or even merely national ground. We shall write in its defense, because it is founded in justice, humanity, and the relations which God has established between man and man, and between man and Himself the Lord of Conscience and because the state of society which it institutes, is best fitted to develop the faculties of man's nature, and promote his elevation and happiness.

Great Excitement!
CAMILLE; Or, THE NORTH AND SOUTH. The two New Romances, commenced in the last number of
THE SUNDAY COURIER,
CAMILLE and NORTH AND SOUTH,
Caused so great a demand for the paper that notwithstanding AN EXTRA OF 5,000 COPIES WAS PRINTED!
The publishers are compelled to print the first part of CAMILLE again the present week, in addition to three more columns of this deeply-interesting and pathetic romance. But the interest of the story has but just begun to be developed; it increases with four fold power and intensity with every new chapter, and so goes on accumulating the elements of entrallment and fascination until the captive mind of the reader, spell-bound by the witcheries of an enchanter, can dwell on nothing else until the heart-touching catastrophe of the exciting narrative has been reached.
In striking contrast, in manner, sentiment and subject is the story of NORTH AND SOUTH, but equally attractive and fascinating to the reader.
No paper in the world has ever published simultaneously two stories of such powerful interest and literary merit as the romances of Camille and the morel of North and South.
THE SUNDAY COURIER is one of the largest class of weekly papers, filled with entertaining miscellaneous matter, original editorials by the best writers in New-York, and contains all the latest news, domestic and foreign, up to the hour of going to press.
