THAT THINKING.

I sat thinking—idly dreaming
Of the friends my heart once knew,
Till my fancy brought their beaming,
Laughing faces back to view;
Olden pleasures, scenes of childhood,
Passed along in shadowy train,
Till I roamed once more the wildwood,
As I was a boy again.

Back through years of sin and sorrow,
O'er bright hopes that could not last,
Till my heart did eager borrow
Sunlight from the buried past.
As these phantoms by me glided,
In the twilight dimly there,
I heard again the voice that guided
Mine so oft in infant prayer.

Quickly turning, to be grasping
Her pure hand within my own,
Naught before me—nothing clasping,
For the vision fair had flown.
O, my mother, years may vanish,
Disappear in Time's dark sea;
Naught of earthly grief can banish
Thy remembrance dear from me.

A FRAGMENT.—A Phragment of an Owed to a Phreemont Pole What was a Bein cut doon for Stove Would:

Woodman! spare them poler,
Tuch not a singel wun,
Last fall they cheered our soules,
Just let 'em stand for phun.
It was our Phreemont Clubb,
That 1st did place 'em there,
Oh! please, sur, let 'em stand,
Or else you'll hear us swear.

THE DYING GIRL.

Softly!
She is lying
With her lips apart,
Softly!
She is dying
Of a broken heart!

Whisper!
She is going
To her final rest.
Whisper!
Life is growing
Dim within her breast.

Gently!
She is sleeping;
She has breathed her last!
Gently!
While you're weeping,
She to Heaven has passed!

☞ The following lines, found written in a hymn book, which its owner had incautiously left in her pew, explains the cause which impels many of our young ladies to attend church:

I look in vain—he does not come,
Dear, dear, what shall I do?
I cannot listen as I ought,
Unless he listens too.

He might have come as well as not!
What plagues the fellows are;
I'll bet he's fast asleep at home,
Or smoking a cigar!

Rocky Mountain Meats.

In Mr. Greely's last letter, dated June 27th, at Ft. Laramie, he makes the following mention of the various meats obtainable on his route.

By the way, there was a discussion at supper between my three companions—all mountaineers of ripe experience—as to the relative merits of certain meats, of which I give the substance for the benefit of future travelers through this wild region. Buffalo I found to be a general favorite, though my own experience of it makes it a tough, dry, wooded fiber, only to be eaten under great provocation. I infer that it is poorer in Spring than at other seasons, and that I have not been fortunate in cooks. Bear, I was surprised to learn, is not generally liked by mountaineers—my companions had eaten every species and were not pleased with age. The black tailed Deer of the Mountain is a general favorite; so is the Mountain Hen or Grouse; so is the Antelope, the Elk and Mountain Sheep less decidedly so. None of our party liked Horse, or knew any way of cooking it that would make it really palatable, though of course it has to be eaten occasionally, for Necessity hath no law—or rather, is its own law. Our conductor had eaten broiled Wolf, under compulsion, but could not recommend it; but he certified that a slice of cold boiled Dog—well boiled so as to free it from rankness and then suffered to cool thoroughly—is tender, sweet and delicate as lamb. I ought to have ascertained the species and age of the dog in whose behalf this testimony was borne—for a young Newfoundland or King Charles might justify the praise, while it would be utterly unwarranted in the case of an old cur or mastiff—but the opportunity was lost, and I can only give the testimony as I received it.

THE TOMATO.—The New York Evening Post controverts the generally received opinion of the value of the tomato as a vegetable, and says:

As an article of diet, it must be wholly useless, and even deleterious. Indeed the blarny which for twenty-five years has been written and printed about this esculent ought by this time to have passed into oblivion, along with the exploded doctrines of remedial virtues possessed by the carcasses of living spiders, bugs, roaches and fleas, which in some generations were so rife. As a dietic the tomato has little value, being more than nine-tenths water, and almost destitute of nutritive elements. Its medicinal virtues consists in the acid it contains, which probably acts beneficially on the system in hot weather; though in those respects, it is greatly inferior to the apple and other fruits, while its close relationship to the night-shade and other poisonous herbs, must give it always a suspicious character. Its merits, whatsoever they be, have been overrated; and so far from being particularly healthful as an article of food, it is of little value, either for the nourishment it gives or the healthful condition of the body it is said to induce.

DR. EDWARD'S SINGING MICE.—Dr. Tom O. Edwards, who lives on Lorinder avenue, above the Lorinder House, has a canary, which is a very fine singer. Some time since the servant girl, who was sitting one night in the kitchen, was much astonished at an imitation of the canary's notes, which proceeded from the cupboard. Thinking, perhaps, it was the devil, she precipitately fled, but the next night and the next it was no better. Investigation, however, revealed the cause. The cupboard was left open, and a watch placed, and soon after a mouse came out, got up on its haunches, curled its tail squirl fashion over its back, and commenced warbling exactly like the canary, in a sweet but low tone. This has been repeated night after night, and has been witnessed by hosts of people. This is a very singular phenomenon, and leads one to think that mice are capable of better things than to nibble cheese or afford dinners to prowling cats.—Dubuque Herald.

A REMARKABLE SPRING.—The Gallatin, (Tenn.) Examiner says:

"Col. James Glover, of the California Overland Mail Company, informs us of the existence of a remarkable spring, on his route, 280 miles east of El Paso, on the road leading to San Antonio. It is fully 150 feet in diameter, and has been sounded to the depth of 8,000 feet without finding bottom. The surface is as smooth as that of a mountain lake. It breaks out, running about three miles, when it disappears, and again six miles distant reappears, forming a stream fifteen to twenty feet deep in many places. It is slightly impregnated with alkali, and contains five varieties of fish. It is called the Leon Hole."

☞ The Genoese have sent a spirited address of King Victor Emmanuel, in which after affirming their confidence in his good faith they say of the abominable agreement of Villa Franca, "It is not a stroke of the pen that can cancel the sentiments of twenty six millions hearts."

JOY AND GLADNESS!
HAS BEEN BROUGHT TO
MANY HOMES AND FAMILIES.

SINCE THE INTRODUCTION OF THAT World Renowned medicine, Dr. MANN'S AGUE BALSAM, in the Western country, and especially the past season—it has brought health and happiness into more families than any remedy on record. The question would naturally arise—why is this? Because it does in all cases, in the shortest time, arrest chills, fever and ague in its worst forms, and in all cases performs a speedy cure. Persons residing in malarious districts, using this Balsam, occasionally during the sickly season, need have no fears of an attack of ague. It is therefore highly recommended as a sure preventative, if used in small doses daily during that particular time when this class of diseases prevail. For want of space we can only offer a few of the many evidences in its favor.

BROWNS, O., Feb. 26, 1858.

DR. S. K. MANN, GALLIA, OHIO—GENTS:—We are at a loss to find language sufficient to portray to the public the great extent in which your celebrated Ague Balsam is held in this community. The fact is it never fails to cure ague in its worst forms and we can sell nothing else. Yours, &c.,

HOLOBERT & TAYLOR, Druggists.

CONNEVILLE, MUSK. CO., Oct. 20, 1858.

Messrs. S. K. Mann, & Co.—Gents:

Having procured a supply of your Ague Balsam and testing it thoroughly in many severe cases of long standing, where all the popular remedies of the day had failed, I found in all cases your Balsam effected a safe and speedy cure. It is just the medicine we want here in the South. Yours,

JOSEPH BUCHANAN, Druggist.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23, 1858.

Messrs. S. K. Mann & Co—Gents, I have at our house, in St. Louis, and your Ague Balsam some three years, and have carefully observed its effects, and in candor must say, I do not believe it has an equal in the history of medicine; for, to my personal knowledge, it cures permanently every case, and I have known it used after all other remedies had failed, with the same happy result. I have no hesitation in pronouncing it the greatest discovery ever made in intermittent remedies, and a perfect triumph over chills, fever and ague.

Truly yours,

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infection, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the eternal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the Chill. But in this effort it fails. Then the Fever follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through that other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote,

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflicting disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system so it is benefited, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Agues, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painfull Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these disorganments, and cures the disease.

This accomplishes by stimulating the secretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habituated to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arrises what we call a cure (imitation. This may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as a safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the malaematic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.
