CHARMING CANTATA WILL BE RENDERED

Philharmonic Society Will Delightfully Entertain the Public. The St. Helens Philharmonic Society will render Cowen's "A Daughter of the Sea," Monday evening, March 22, at the Assembly Hall of the school house. This is to be a complimentary concert, and Dr. Enna and the ladies of the society extend a cordial invitation to the public to attend, without cost. The following synopsis, while, of necessity, omitting the beautiful imagery of the poem, will suggest the theme of the cantata: 1st—The opening chorus depicts a sea-maid happily floating on a rippling, star-lit sea. A ship approaches; a "gallant, most fair prince" dances to the strains of sweetest music. The scene is changed to tempest; the ship is wrecked; the sea-maid flies to the rescue of the prince. 2nd—The second chorus suggests the pining of the sea-maid. 3rd—The sisters (chorus) chide the sea-maid for her sadness, and inquire the cause. 4th—The sea-maid's reply—solo—(Mrs. Sandifur.) "Would that I were mortal, that I might be the prince's bride." 5th—The sisters (chorus) warn her that death will be the penalty should her love not be reciprocated. 6th—(Chorus) "The sea-maid visits the sea-witch in her cavern under the sea." 7th—The sea-witch—solo—(Miss Perkins) understands the maid's mission and warns her that should her mortal lover prove untrue she will be "changed into foam on the sad, salt sea." 8th—The sea-maid's answer—solo—(Mrs. Sandifur) "Let me be human." 9th—The sea-witch and chorus. The spell is cast. 10th—Choral interlude. She awakes a mortal with mortal's capacity for suffering. 11th—Solo (Mrs. D. W. Williams.) "The prince has chosen another bride, the sea-maid knows her fate." 12th—Chorus—The sisters offer her an alternative, to kill the prince that the spell may be broken. 13th—The sea-maid—solo—(Mrs. Sandifur) casts the knife into the sea. She has chosen death. 14th—Chorus—They bid farewell to the night and greet the daybreak. 15th—The sea-maid—solo (Mrs. Williams) is cheered by the melody. 16th—Chorus—"The spirits of air bear her away to Paradise." The members of the Philharmonic Society are Mrs. L. R. Rutherford, Mrs. Iva Dodd, Mrs. Sandifur, Mrs. W. G. Muckle, Mrs. D. W. Williams, Miss Leona Perkins, Dr. Emil Enna, director.

TO THE Horse Owners

"You know, here at Robenolt's Shop, we always fit the shoe before we nail it to the foot. "Did you know or ever think of the fact that there is really an essential difference between a blacksmith and a horseshoer? "The blacksmith works on iron, an inanimate object, and while the horseshoer is preparing the shoe, he, too, is "blacksmithing." "But the shoer also works on the hoof, which is a living, feeling organism. Now, if the blacksmith makes a mistake he has simply spoiled a piece of iron, but, if a shoer puts a hoof too thin, if he fits a shoe improperly or drives a nail too close, he has either inconvenienced, or lamed, or perhaps, ruined a horse. "Now what do you pay for? Is it blacksmithing or horseshoeing? "If it's horseshoeing spend your money at Robenolt's Shop HOULTON, ORE.
