"A WORK of GREAT POWER."—SECOND EDITION NOW READY.
PAUL FERROLL.
A Tale, by the author of "IX. Poems by V." From the 4th London Edition. 12mo., cloth. $1.
"Paul Ferroll stands almost alone as a fiction of the day. Possessing all the elements of a striking effect, written with a power unhappily too rare in present light literature, singularly original in conception, sustained in plot and general arrangement with an art which we had begun almost to fear was lost, and admirably adapted to enchain the perusal while it satisfies it—this book when once read, such a circumstance as forgetting is hardly possible." [National Ægis, Worcester.
"This tale is intensely interesting. Indeed, we have rarely read a work of fiction that equaled it in the power of fastening the reader's attention, and making a lasting impression upon his mind." [N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.
"A work of great power, originality of style, plot and character, and of intense interest." [Boston Atlas.
"The startling contrasts which are made to appear in the tale fix vividly the attention of the reader; and the story is one which once read will never be forgotten."
[Boston Evening Traveller.
