DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

Adopted in Convention at Silver City, N. M., Sept. 3d, 1890.

We arraign the National Republican party for squandering the surplus revenues in the treasury in order to furnish a pretext for increasing tariff taxation on the necessaries of life—for depriving Democratic constituencies of their representation in Congress and arbitrarily seating Republican candidates who were not elected by the people—for adopting an arbitrary and unconstitutional system of rules in the House of Representatives and thereby suppressing the rights of the minority—and for attempting to pass the Lodge election bill to suppress free elections and subvert the rights of the states, in utter disregard of the Constitution of the United States—and particularly for having awarded seats in the Senate of the United States to two Senators from the state of Montana, who were not lawfully elected thereto.

As heretofore, we reiterate, that the General Government has been and still is, heedless of the rights of New Mexico and of its obligations under the treaty of Guadaloupe Hidalgo, in failing and refusing to pass such a law as will secure the prompt and speedy settlement of land titles in New Mexico.

We declare that the native population of New Mexico are entitled to the lands held by them or their predecessors under the laws of the Republic of Mexico, and that their rights thereto should be respected.

We endorse the course of Hon. Anthony Joseph, our delegate in Congress, as a zealous and faithful public servant, at all times tireless in his efforts in behalf of the people of New Mexico, and heartily commend him for re-election.

We denounce the action of L. Bradford Prince, Governor of New Mexico in requesting the quartering of United States troops in the county of San Miguel to overawe the people under the pretext of resistance to the civil authority, when no process was in the hands of the officers of the law unserved, as in keeping with the spirit of contempt for the civil authorities usually observed by the Republican party.

We arraign the Republican party of New Mexico for recklessly disregarding the will of the people and turning out of the last Legislature duly elected Representatives in order to secure a majority sufficient to pass iniquitous measures over the executive veto.

We arraign them for passing a libel law contrary to the spirit of the age in order to suppress free speech and a free press; for the passage of a change of venue law in the interest of a single corporation and thereby so increasing the cost and delays of litigation as to amount to a denial of justice; for passing a law changing the practice in taking appeals to the Supreme Court, applicable only to a limited number of cases in which Republican members of the Legislature were either parties or attorneys; for assuming the powers of the Territorial Executive in order to place in office incompetent and corrupt party favorites; for passing a law authorizing the competition of convict with honest free labor; and for passing many other outrageous laws subversive of the rights of the people.

We condemn them for killing and refusing to enact such legislation as would secure to the Territory an efficient public school system, and for a manifestation of open hostility to public education, as shown by the action of the friends of the school system in killing the bill for the purpose of defeating a full and fair expression of the popular will thereon.

We therefore call upon all patriotic citizens of New Mexico to go to the polls on October 7th next, and vote against the proposed partisan Constitution, to the end that all advocates of Statehood for New Mexico may without regard to present or future party affiliation unite in an honest effort to secure from Congress an Enabling Act, for the submission of a fair and just Constitution.

We declare that the Constitution so framed would, if adopted, deprive the people of the right to elect the Judges of the Supreme Court, while providing for the election of the Judges of District Courts by districts so constituted as to render such right valueless. We further declare that said constitution denies to the Executive the power usually conferred by such instruments, and makes him the mere puppet of the Legislature by subjecting him to suspension from office upon impeachment without trial. We further declare that said Constitution so limits the power of taxation upon personal property as to enable all large property interests of individuals and corporations to escape the just burdens of government, and inequitably and unjustly authorizes the same to be imposed upon particular articles and occupations.

We further declare that this proposed system of taxation will not produce, by property tax, sufficient revenue to support a State government and meet the public obligations, thereby rendering it absolutely necessary to impose a tax upon particular articles and occupations, thus making the masses pay for the benefits of government received by the property of the few.

We further declare that said Constitution makes such an arbitrary and partisan apportionment for the election of members of the Legislature as to virtually disfranchise opponents of the Republican party. We further declare that the action of pretended adjourned Convention, on the 18th day of August, 1890, was taken without color of legal authority and without the presence of a quorum of said original Convention, and that the manifest object of a change in the date of the submission of said instrument to the people, was for the purpose of defeating a full and fair expression of the popular will thereon.

We therefore call upon all patriotic citizens of New Mexico to go to the polls on October 7th next, and vote against the proposed partisan Constitution, to the end that all advocates of Statehood for New Mexico may without regard to present or future party affiliation unite in an honest effort to secure from Congress an Enabling Act, for the submission of a fair and just Constitution.

A NOVEL BEAR HUNT.

After the Strands Found Their Game They Employed Others to Kill It.

Ex-City Auditor Vernon Whitesides tells one of the most interesting of hunting experiences. Walden's Ridge, about twelve miles from Chattanooga, Tenn., is yet in a state of nature, and here can be found almost impenetrable forests and the wildest of glens and gorges. It is a favorite place for hunters, the woods being full of the larger game—bear, deer, catamounts, etc. The city auditor thus relates his experience on one of his hunts:

"I started out with Bob Hagen and two or three others for a bear hunt. We had told a good many of our friends that we were going after a bear, and that we wouldn't come home without a bear. We all climbed into a farm wagon and started. It is a rough road up the ridge, and we did not get to the place where we expected to find the bear until night. Here we saw an empty cabin, and concluded to take possession. So we stretched ourselves out on the puncheon floor, and were just falling to sleep when Bob Hagen jumped up, crying:

"'Boys, Joe's caught something.'

"He took off his boot to see what he had caught, and found that it was a house snake, which had crawled up his trousers to keep warm. We all adjourned to the wagon for the night, and the next morning, bright and early, we started to look for a bear. Meeting a native, we asked him if he knew where we would be apt to find such an animal.

"'Why, I saw b'ar tracks a spell ago up on the shelvin' rock 'bout five mile down yer,' he observed.

"So we went to the shelving rock, meanwhile beating the bush in every direction, so that it was 11 o'clock by the time we reached the rock. At first we could see no way to get upon the rock, but finally we noticed that a small tree stood close enough for us to climb up that way, so we were soon on the rocks.

"'I don't see any bear,' said Bob.

"'I don't believe there is any bear,' I replied. 'Let's eat.'

"We agreed to that proposition, spread our lunch, placed our guns against a tree and started to supply the inner man.

"'I wish we could at least see a bear,' said Bob.

"'Hello, look there!' said one of the party. We all looked and saw a bear that looked as big as a horse between us and the guns. I was nearest to the tree, and consequently first to the ground; but the others were not far behind me. When we reached terra firma we began to discuss the matter. We had come after the bear, we had found a bear, and now it was clearly our duty to go back and kill the brute. I felt as though I hadn't lost any bear, and having nothing against bruin I didn't want to kill it; so we drew straws as to which should go back first. I got the unlucky straw and started, but when the top of my head was even with the rock I grew faint hearted and slid back. Bob tried it then, and carefully looking over the rock he made a break and got the guns. Then we all went back and beat around the bushes for a while, but we did not find any bear. Then we started for home, and on the way we met the native.

"'Did you find the bear?'

"'No,' we answered in chorus.

"'Well, he war thar,' replied the aforesaid native.

"I offered him $10 to go and get the bear, and he started. Inside of half an hour he came back dragging bruin by one of its hind legs. He got the $10 and we got our bear."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Useful Bugs.

B. M. Lelong, who has been visiting the east, looking up parasites and studying the habits of insect pests, has made an important discovery in Washington, D. C., in the grounds of the United States department of agriculture, almost directly under the windows of the entomological department itself. In walking through the grounds he noticed a ladybug feeding on the aphis, and on closer examination he discovered that it was devouring the aphis, and that it also breeds as fast or nearly as fast as the wonderful vedalia that has almost entirely exterminated the cottony cushion scale of this state. This ladybug is the Adalia bipunctata, of which Mr. Lelong captured as many as he could find, making two large colonies, one of which he sent to Col. Dobbins at San Gabriel, and the other to Mr. Runyon, near Sacramento. This ladybug feeds both on the scale and other insects, and it is to be hoped that it will prove a great help in clearing up the scales and aphis of this section.—San Francisco Chronicle.

For Physicians.

In an address before the Harvard Medical school Dr. David W. Cheever gave the graduating class some advice which all physicians might profitably heed. "Cultivate good manners," he said. "Be reticent. Always show a cheerful face. Never give up a case while the patient breathes. Stay at home; be ready in your office. Medicine is not a trade, it is the noblest profession; cling to that thought. The Golden Rule is the true code of ethics. Be gentlemen, and not rude, grasping boors; respect others' rights and you will be respected."

A Narrow Escape.

She—Do you know, your necktie is so harmonious that I almost feel like singing an accompaniment to it!

He—Then I shall take care never to wear it again.—Clothier and Furnisher.

The aborigines of New South Wales show great ingenuity in shaping their harpoon heads for spearing fish. Instead of shaving the wood up and down the grain as we are accustomed to whittle, they turn it round and round and chip it off across the grain.

Had Him There.

She (during a slight tiff)—You never can keep a secret, anyway!

He—I can't! Suppose I had told that I kissed you before we were engaged!

She (calmly)—Well, I should say you were not the only one.—Life.

High Sounding Appellations.

"That bootblack has become inoculated with Bostonese magnum super," remarked a patriotic New Yorker of the old school, as he passed in the corridor of the postoffice and pointed to a conspicuous sign that read, "You will find the artist inside the building during the chill season."

"The good old names of 'bootblack' and 'shiner,' that express just what they mean, are fast going the way of all flesh, while such pretentious and obnoxious titles as 'boot polishing artists' are being substituted. I blame it all on Boston. The fad of dubbing every bootblack a professor originated in that locality several years ago, and has been spreading through the country with deplorable rapidity.

"Why, in Boston the most miserable shanty or the dirtiest cellarway is dignified as a 'bootblacking emporium,' and its genius is 'Professor' Job Johnson or 'Professor' Tomaso Vermicelli, as the case may be.

"There are scores of these pretentious emporiums and parlors scattered all over the Hub, and they serve as a forcible commentary on the city's pedantry. No one but a Bostonian would have evolved the phrase 'tonsorial artist.' There are no barber shops in Boston. They are all hairdressing parlors.

"The term 'washerwoman' has, I am told, been relegated to Choctaw, and every woman who rinses stockings in suspenders at four cents a pair is respectfully entitled a 'wash lady.' If O'Callahan, artist in black and white,' is the legend that a South Cove son of Erin has inscribed over his dilapidated cellar door. He combines whitewashing with boot blacking.

"Such are Boston's barbarisms. But, then, what can one expect of a town that allows its five cent museum to be advertised as a 'nickelodeon, theatridium and repositorium' all in one!

"Oh, for a taste of the days when a spade was a spade!"—New York Herald.

A Story of Private Allen.

Allen had no special reputation as a wit or orator when he first ran for congress, and so he had a time getting the nomination. He stumped the district with his competitor, a Gen. Tucker, who opened the campaign with a rhetorical rhapsody in which he alluded to his war services, and particularly described a battle in which he had commanded the Confederate side, beginning: "Fellow citizens, I slept one night in a tent on the mountain side awaiting the battle on the morrow." When he had finished Allen got up and said: "Friends and fellow citizens, it's all true what Gen. Tucker told you about his sleeping in his tent that night before the battle. I know all about it, for I was guarding that tent all night long in the cold and wet on picket. And now I just want to say to all of you who were generals in the war and slept at nights in your guarded tents like Gen. Tucker, you vote for him. But all you fellows that guarded the generals' tents in the wet and cold like me, you vote for Private Allen."

It is needless to say that Private Allen was triumphantly elected, and was Private Allen ever after.—Philadelphia Record.

Care of the Body After a Speech.

I know several members of the legislature who take the most extraordinary precautions for making a speech. They do not speak often. They know for weeks beforehand that they are to speak, and after all preparations are made for the speech itself, and the day comes for the effort, they have a servant bring a complete change of linen and underwear and a heavy overcoat to the Capitol, and wait with these things at hand until the speech is ended. Then the speaker, with the perspiration pouring off him, rushes to the cloak room, where the servant stands with the coat ready, and throws it over his shoulders as soon as he comes within reach. Next, the member, with the collar of his overcoat turned up high, tucks his dry underclothing under his arm and makes for the bath rooms. There he enters the waiting room, where the temperature is high and there can be no draught, being under ground, and waits to cool off a little preparatory to a bath. There is no more work for him in the house that day. When he has got his bath he makes for his lodgings as fast as he can, and stays there until thoroughly rested. Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

A Warning to Oyster Lovers.

Lovers of bivalves, especially those who prefer them cooked in their own liquor, may be interested in knowing what that fluid contains. The microscope makes some very unpleasant discoveries, of which with the naked eye alone we should remain happily ignorant. A scientific journal says that if, on opening an oyster, the liquor is retained in the lower or deeper shell and viewed through the microscope, it will be found to contain multitudes of small oysters, covered with shells, and swimming nimbly about—120 of them extending but one inch. Besides these young oysters the liquor contains a variety of animalcule and myriads of three distinct species of worms. Sometimes their light represents a bluish star about the centre of the shell, which will be beautifully luminous in a dark room.

The Whistling Nuisance.

A change in navigation in New York harbor has demoralized real estate in Brooklyn heights. Notwithstanding the location commands a splendid prospect of New York bay and has the finest air a general effort is being made to dispose of houses there. The trouble is that steam whistling prevents sleep, and is destroying the nerves of all the nearby residents. The East river once was occupied by the largest shipping, but this has now gone over to the North river, and its place is filled by tugs and small steam craft, which ply at all hours of the day and night, and their whistles are continually piercing the ear.—Exchange.

You may only drink from sorrow's cup but once in your whole life, yet you will never be able to get the bitter taste of the dregs out of your mouth thereafter.

"Erin Go Bra."

War cries, meant originally to keep the fighting men aware of the place of their own clan in battle, or when scattered in woods and hills, came down to the baronial period, and were used by the Anglo-Norman nobles out of consideration for their Gaelic retainers. The commonest shout was some name of famous place or famous man with the addition abo, a word well fitted for the clamor of a band of fighters, being at once more musical and less wearying to the voice than our "hurrah." The Kildare retainers cried "Crom aboo!" in honor of Crom castle, a citadel in Limerick county, originally a stronghold of the O'Donovans, which one of the intrusive Geraldine families, named after the town of Kildare, occupied while turning Irish.

The O'Neills cried out, "Lawy dareg aboo!" because the Lawy dareg or Red Hand was the badge of the family and clan. The O'Briens cried, "Lawy Laidir!" or "Laudir abo!" or "Strong Hand abo!" The translator of Geoffrey Keating's "History of Ireland" suggests as the meaning of abo the Irish word boa, victory; but analogy would point rather to boa (beotha), lively, awake, spirited; when abo would be an exclamation like the French alerte! and vive! A parallel in Irish is the well known Erin go brat "Erin till judgment day!" where go bra, forever, implies the same idea of living which the word beotha actually contains, since the latter is the Keltic equivalent of Greek bios.

"Yahu!" is the exclamation of Tartar horsemen when urging their steeds forward. While on this topic it may be interesting to note that this Irish word, or its Welsh equivalent yu baw, corrupted to boo and bob, is found in our colloquial expression, "He doesn't dare say boo to a goose;" or in other words, he is too cowardly to sound his war cry in the presence of the most peaceful of creatures.—Charles de Kay in Century.
