Five Points House of Industry.
A CARD.
We are frequently called to account in the following manner: Some one calls at the institution and says, "We sent you, Sir, a donation of provisions (or money) on such a day, but you did not acknowledge it."
Our explanation in most cases is this: There are two Mission Houses at the Five Points; our building is called House of Industry (Mr. Pease's), the other building is called Five Points House of Mission (Methodist). If our friends about to send us a contribution should direct it to "Five Points Mission, N. Y.," it would not reach Mr. Pease's institution, but would go to the Methodist institution, and of course we could not acknowledge its reception, because the two houses have no connection. Donations intended for us should be directed, "L. M. PEASE, or B. R. BARLOW, House of Industry, N. Y." Grateful for the liberality of our friends, we feel bound in justice to them and to ourselves to make this statement.
B. R. BARLOW, Superintendent.
L. M. PEASE, General Agent.

The plan of this beautiful work is as original as it is attractive. In its respect it is more reproduction from the "Shakespeare Gallories," and "Heroines of Shakespeare" so well known to the public, but with striking novelty and taste, combines the story-telling quality of Charles Lamb with the graceful criticism of Mrs. Jameson.

From The Philadelphia Press.
"One of the neat and, perhaps the very handsomest of the books which have been published recently is Mrs Palmer's 'Stratford Gallery.' Her volume is not only a suggestive contribution to Shakspeare literature, but it has a positive character in itself, as revealing a woman's sympathies and judgments about women."

From Dwight's Journal of Music.
"Nothing pedantic, obtrusive or dry—simply what a living woman of intelligence and refinement thinks of the women of Shakspeare. And who can be better qualified to judge of women than a woman?"

From The Boston Traveler.
"The first artistic talent of the day has been employed on it and altogether it will form the most superb work that has been published for years."

From The New-York Observer.
"This magnificent volume, published by the Appletons, is now ready for the eager admirers and it is indeed a triumph of art in bookmaking, worthy of a place by the side of those great gift-books which for successive years they have issued."

From The N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.
"We have no hesitation in expressing our confidence that, in all respects, the work will prove a great attraction to every person of cultivated taste."

From The Baltimore Dispatch.
"The typography is in the highest style of excellence, and the illustrations in the sketch before us—Hero in Much Ado About Nothing, and Julia in 'Two Gentlemen of Verona'—are exquisite."

From The N. Y. Tribune.
"A truly superb work."

From The N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.
"The portraits of the better-places we think we have read are admirable; and even those who are familiar with the charming essays of Charles Lamb and Mrs Jameson on the same subjects will find much to interest them in the eloquent ideal descriptions and critical criticisms of Mrs Palmer."

From The Washington Union.
"We can now inform our readers that it will be the most beautiful volume ever offered to the American public; and as it is nearly ready for publication it will be in the hands of the bookseller in time for the extensive list of those who wish to obtain a superb book for a present."

From The N. Y. Christian Advocate.
"It is no reproduction of familiar works of the kind, but original and ideal illustrations in the finest style of art, with beautiful stories in the text."

The Publishers are in possession of many flattering testimonials in its favor, from which they select the following:
FROM THE REV. T. STARR KING.
"My recollections of the interest of the story ("the Mustee"), the nobleness of its purpose and sentiment, and the careful preparation and labor which the style and structure of the work evince, and which I owe to a perusal of the manuscript, some months ago, are still fresh, and it is from the impulse of these that I heartily thank you for the copy you have sent me, and commend the book, so far as my words can avail, to the community. Respectfully yours, TH. STARR KING."
FROM WENDELL PHILLIPS, ESQ.
"I have read 'The Mustee' with an interest which deepens as the story advances. Mr. Presbury has made skillful use of his materials. His plot is excellent, and the characters cannot fail to awaken the deepest sympathy.

By VIRGINIA F. TOWNSEND,

"Miss Townsend has written many choice and entertaining stories, but we were not prepared for such a charming work as this. It is just the book to read aloud at the firside; entertaining, because the style is unaffected and the plot admirably sustained; instructive, for it inculcates sentiments of respect for all that is beautiful and good." [Journal.
"Under the name that mythical title of 'While It Was Morning,' Miss Virginia F. Townsend has produced one of the most readable books of the day. It is a most charmingly told story, illustrating once more the truth of the old max m that 'true love never did run smooth.' Throughout the entire work there breathe lofty, pure and elevating sentiments. There is no transcendentalism about it. The style of the work we specially commend. It is natural, sparkling and vigorous. It is a book which cannot fail to have a wide-spread popularity." [Post.
"This is a rare and beautiful story—a story of trial and endurance, and final triumph. The pathos and beauty of its incidents cannot fail to charm the reader, while it has pure and blessed teachings for all lives." [Sodey.
"Great beauty of imagery is displayed, while it abounds in passages of the tenderest pathos. The story has its teachings for all hearts, its lesson for all lives, and we warmly commend it to the public. It will make a fitting holiday gift." [Arthur.

VISIONS OF ANOTHER WORLD
A NEW BOOK OF STARTLING INTEREST.
FUTURE LIFE;
OR,
SCENES IN ANOTHER WORLD.
By GEORGE WOOD,
Author of "Peter Schlemihl in America," "Modern Pilgrims," &c.
One neat 12mo. volume. Price $1.
[From The New-York Observer.]
"The boldness and beauty of the conception on which this book is constructed command the reader's admiration, and the splendor of the diction, the elevation of the sentiment, and the purity of the style are worthy of a master of rhetoric, as well as a Christian scholar.
"At first blush the pious mind is startled by the attempt to bring the earthly and heavenly into such associations as are here presented, but the general view of the author is in harmony with the Scriptural teachings, and is supported by the opinions of many great and good men. His aim is to awaken in the reader's new aspirations of hope and rejoicing looking for the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." In order to do this, we have presented scenes of future blessedness which reach our highest conceptions. The personages are some of them historical, and all live in the instant apprehension of the presence of Deity, in a world devoted to the True, the Beautiful and the Good, surrounded by beings of high endowment, to whom they are living epistles of the grace of God in the redemption of the world."
The pictures here drawn are founded upon the writings of Milton, Howe, Baxter, Isaac Taylor, and of Archbishop Whately's recent work, entitled "A Future State," whose teachings are here wrought into a narrative. The author, in his address to the reader, says:
"After all that has been penned by prophets and poets of the glory of Christ's kingdom, it will be doubtless found true that 'eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him'—a text which has been thought by some to preclude all attempts to lift the veil which conceals the invisible world, notwithstanding that St. Paul goes on to say: 'but God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit.'"
The author's motto is also significant of the aim and end of his labor. It is this:
"The greatest philosopher in the world, says Pascal, on a plank wider than is necessary in order to go without danger from one side of an abyss to the other, cannot think without trembling of the abyss that is beneath him. It is not reason, it is imagination that frightens him. . . . Imagination is a child that must be educated by putting it under the discipline and government of better faculties; it must be accustomed to go to intelligence for aid instead of troubling intelligence with its phantoms. . . . Nature trembles when face to face with the unknown eternity. It is wise to present ourselves there with all our forces united—reason and heart lending each other mutual support, the imagination being subdued or charmed."
