The Ducking Stool In England.

It is interesting to conjure up a picture of a "ducking" as practiced in England at the end of the eighteenth century.

When the "scold" had been properly tried and convicted, she was escorted by a crowd of her neighbors—in fact, by the whole village—to the nearest pond—and the greener and slimier the pond the better. A long plank was produced, at one end of which was the "ducking stool," and in this the screaming, struggling victim was securely pinioned.

The chair end of the plank was then pushed far over the edge of the pond, and at a signal it was tilted deep into the green ooze until the scold was completely immersed.

When the dripping, half drowned woman was raised to the surface again, to the jeers and laughter of the onlookers, it can be imagined that her tongue wagged to some purpose. After a second dose she emerged more subdued, and after a third or fourth she was as penitent a woman as the village contained and was allowed to proceed home a sadder and wiser woman—until the next time.—London Tit-Bits.

The Reward of Labor.

"Bill, have you cut the firewood?"

"Yes, sir."

"An fed the mules?"

"Yes, sir."

"An milked the cows?"

"All milked, sir."

"An ground the corn?"

"Jest through, sir."

"An banked the taters?"

"Last one, sir."

"Well, you're a good un. Now call the dogs, an you kin go an trve a possum fer yer supper!"—Atlanta Constitution.

A Considerate Father.

The Impecunious Son—It was rather hard for you, father, not to send me any money when I was so much in need of it.

The Thoughtful Father—It was my desire to send you ample means immediately, but it was such a pleasure to read your letters asking for remittances—so finely worded, you know—that I could not deny myself the satisfaction of having more and more of them.—Boston Transcript.

The Theaters in Japan.

The theaters are the very places to study the Japanese. In many theaters the entire house is divided by rails into square pens, 6 by 6 feet, intended for four Japanese, but often containing half a dozen. The men and women are barefoot, walk the narrow dividing rails to reach their reserved "seats." The patrons huddle within these square pens, or, when there are no pens, they squat upon the floor in little circular groups and smoke, eat, drink, fan themselves and chatter. Many come in and go out at random. Children run to and fro. Frequently the spectators bring luncheon and pass the day within the theater, the play continuing uninterruptedly.

The stage, which in some theaters revolves to change scenes, has two detached projections three feet wide, extending among the audience. Upon these projections the performers run, reciting and acting.

Their acting is sufficiently curious. A villain slain walks off the stage, a Jap mops with a dirty cloth the chief actor's face while he is speaking. The prompter, dressed all in black, gown, hood and girdle, will follow the actor all around the stage. Other persons, also in black, run to and fro across the stage. Those costumed in black are supposed to be invisible. Stage carpenters and helpers often stand upon the stage and gape and laugh at the actors, and so on.—Baltimore Sun.

He Had Not Changed.

I was in a barber shop presided over by a colored artist the other day and while I was being shaved there came in a colored hack driver who demanded $2 that the barber owed him for a hack at a funeral.

"Come in nex' week an I'll have it," said the barber, as he condoned to scrape.

But the creditor got on his ear.

"Look a-hyar?" said he. "I'se gittin mighty tired o' comin erouu here after dis yere money. H'e's always de same thing. Come erouu nex' week, I wants ma money! I come in las' week an yo' tole me ter come ag'in nex' week, an I comes nex' week an yo' tells me ter come de week after. I wants ma money!"

With that the barber took the middle of the floor and declared himself.

"Look a-hyar, black man," said he, "what yo' pesterin me about yo' money? Ain't I done tole yo' to come nex' week? What yo' expects I've done tole yo' de same thing all de time. Nex' week! nex' week! I tole yo' dat las' week an I tells yo' dat now. I hasn't changed. I'se prepared to do jes' what I says."—Memphis Scimitar.

Magin's Way.

Irishmen are inclined to word perversion; but, says a writer in The Nineteenth Century, the following description of slow speech which often degenerated into a stammer shows that occasionally they use the best words possible in explaining things.

"It's a square sort av way Martha talks," said Pat. "It's as if he tuk the words out av his mout' an laked at 'em before he gives 'em to yez."

True.

Lecturer—And what man is most apt to reach that elevation whence the earth may be viewed "as one vast plain?"

Voice (in the audience)—The one that works in a powder mill.—Life.

A Wife Says:

"We have four children. With the first three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours of birth, and suffered but a few hard pains. This liniment is the grandest remedy ever made."

Mother's Friend

will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above letter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering. Mother's Friend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness. It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of a few days.

Druggists sell Mother's Friend for $1 a bottle.

Patriotism is always commendable, but in every breast there should be not only the desire to be a good citizen, but to be strong, able bodied and well fitted for the battle of life. To do this, pure blood is absolutely necessary, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one specific which cleanses the blood thoroughly. It acts equally well for both sexes and all ages.

Room For Him Too.

A bland and patronizing New Yorker was passing through a raw and new hamlet in the west, which its proud founders had dubbed B— City and were sure would soon become a thriving hive of human beings. Addressing a lank and lazy youth who was lounging at the door of one of the rude shanties that passed for a "shoe emporium," the New Yorker inquired sarcastically:

"Who is that important looking gentleman with the red flannel shirt?"

"That's Sam Peters," was the proud reply. "He's just opened the new post-office."

"And the tall person with no collar?"

"He's Long Mike. Just opened a grocery store."

"And the plump individual with the bald head?"

"Handy Jim. Owns the new saloon."

"Indeed?" said the New Yorker. "Your city seems to be pretty well started. I should suppose there was nothing left for a stranger like myself to open."

"Oh, I dunno!" drawled the lanky one. "We ain't got no locomotive asylum yet. You might start that."—New York Tribune.
