The Hawaiian Crisis.

From the "S. F. Merchant" of September 3.

There is no disposition on the part of the conservative citizens of the Hawaiian Kingdom or on the part of foreign property owning residents to exaggerate the importance of the ministerial crisis which has lately occurred in that Island. The events from the 14th to the 19th of August, or indeed we may include the last four days during which the Legislature was in session, making eight days in all, are the most eventful week that the little Kingdom has passed through since Kamehameha First consolidated the several chieftainships and made a Kingdom out of a tribal government. Not only have we no disposition to exaggerate the dangers the country has passed through, but we have no desire to impugn any motives to his Majesty King Kalakaua than what are good and loyal to the people of whom he is the constitutional King. It would be useless to conceal that the great excitement which prevailed in Honolulu from the 14th to the 19th of August to a lesser extent spread to this city when the story was told by Honolulu newspapers and private correspondents. The action of his Majesty in suddenly discharging his cabinet, which had just received by an overwhelming majority a vote of confidence from the legislature, and his immediate appointment, apparently without consultation with any of the intelligent and conservative citizens, native and foreign born, of whom there are so many in the Islands, of a ministry repugnant to the best of his subjects and to decent people of all shades of politics and all nationalities, might well excite alarm. The following is an outline of what occurred in the four days: On Saturday, August 14th, the legislature, to the relief of a majority of the most enlightened and substantial residents of the Island, was prorogued. This cheerful condition of affairs was quickly broken up by the promulgation of news that the King had sent letters to all the members of his cabinet dismissing them from the ministry. The public was naturally enough on the qui vive to know who were their successors. The names were shortly announced, and we can well understand that, in the opinion of the Hawaiians the King, as an honest gentleman, could hardly have made a worse selection for a portion of his cabinet if he had desired to do the worst instead of the best for his people. The appointments were Celso Cæsar Moreno for Minister of Foreign Affairs; General J. S. Walker, Minister of Finance; John Bush, Minister of the Interior, and Judge Davidson, Attorney General. Messrs. Walker and Davidson at once declined to take office with Moreno. It should be here explained that Moreno is well known in San Francisco as a man without character, as a lobbyist and an adventurer, who having exhausted his opportunities in California left the United States and has resided for some time in China, and for the past few months in Honolulu. On receiving the refusals of Messrs. Walker and Davidson, who are well known and reputable citizens of Hawaii, the King, unfortunately for all parties, instead of reconsidering his one most objectionable nomination, appointed W. C. Jones, Police Magistrate, and the Rev. M. Kaaea, a native preacher, in the places refused by these gentlemen. When the news of the King's persistence in his choice of the intriguer Moreno for Minister of Foreign Affairs, was bruited about, the people of Honolulu expressed their indignation very freely. Protests were sent to their several national representatives by foreign merchants, planters and capitalists, setting forth the evil effects which they feared from his Majesty's ill considered conduct. In these protests the appointment of a disreputable adventurer like Moreno to one of the most important positions of the cabinet was characterized as dangerous to the welfare and prosperity not only of the country but also of all foreign capital invested in the Islands. On receipt of these protests the several foreign representatives hoisted their flags and notified his Majesty that they would not recognize his cabinet or hold any relations but those on the most urgent business, with his new minister, until further instructed by their governments. Following quickly on this remonstrance of the representatives of friendly foreign powers, came mass meetings of the people. In some of these meetings resolutions couched in strong language and censuring the King were passed by acclamation and immediately forwarded to his Majesty. An attempt was made by old friends of his Majesty and by delegations and committees to obtain personal interviews in which matters might be explained, and a course of royal action agreed upon that would be mutually satisfactory. His Majesty, on some inexplicable grounds, possibly conceiving himself misjudged and the victim of popular clamor, refused to see any one. This state of affairs, with its growing bitterness of feeling on the part of the populace, continued until the afternoon of the 18th, when a meeting was called of all foreign residents, for the purpose of taking some more decided steps in the matter. While that meeting was in session, and after some resolutions strongly condemnatory of the King's action had been passed, word was brought from the palace that Moreno's resignation had been demanded, received and accepted. The obnoxious Minister, after four short days of office, was out. The meeting good-humoredly amended the resolution already passed, softening their tone, and nominated a committee, consisting of C. R. Bishop, C. Pfluger, A. J. Cartwright, H. May and W. G. Irwin, to wait on his Majesty, and convey to him the gratification of the meeting at learning of the judicious action he had taken. These gentlemen went to the palace, but were denied an audience by his Majesty, though his royal thanks were conveyed to the committee for calling.

The removal of Moreno, one of and the most objectionable member of the Cabinet, allayed the public excitement somewhat, but still there was a feeling of underground anxiety to know what step the King would take next. On the 19th—the day the steamer left—there was a rumor that his Majesty had determined to appoint the Hon. H. A. P. Carter, Minister of Foreign Relations; Robert Sterling, Minister of the Interior; Simon Kaai, Minister of Finance; and Mr. Preston the late Attorney General, his own successor. If this rumor prove true, the Hawaiians will have no further cause of complaint. All the appointees in the objectionable Cabinet, good and bad together, will have been got rid of, and men of tried character and merit will be at the head of affairs. While the policy of the new Cabinet may differ in detail from that which has been in power the last two years, in all essentials it will be similar in policy. If in this struggle between the prerogatives of the Crown and the rights of the Cabinet and the people the latter have been strengthened while the former have been awakened, it will be the better for the country. It is gratifying to record that during the intense excitement which prevailed in Honolulu, both among the foreign born and native, there was no rioting, no disturbance, no manifestation of a desire to have recourse to any but the most legitimate and constitutional means of righting what the people felt to be a grievous wrong. It is true that there was a rumor as the steamer left that a delegation, our informant says, of the hoodlum population, had waited upon Moreno, and demanded that he should leave the country, and that that person had called upon the police for protection. This rumor is, however, unauthenticated. The Hawaiians are a peace-loving and law-abiding people, and Moreno is safe from personal injury, but he will probably find in the openly-expressed dislike of the people a sufficient cause for leaving a country in which his career has been as mischievous to others as it has been unproductive in results to himself.

The Coming of the Ho Chung.

[From the San Francisco Weekly Bulletin of Sept. 1st.]

The first Chinese steamer has just entered this port. She is a small craft, British built, and one of more than thirty steamers, most of them larger, owned by a Chinese company. It appears that her presence in these waters is due in some measure to the efforts of one Celso C. Moreno, a restless Italian adventurer, who appears and disappears in various parts of the world, and whose only capital consists in unlimited energy and an audacity which amounts almost to genius. No doubt the Chinese merchants are ready for the experiment. The Ho Chung went first to Honolulu with Moreno on board. The most extraordinary fact is, that during the short stay of the steamer at the Islands, Moreno contrived to influence the King to such an extent that he dismissed his Cabinet, appointing a new one, with Moreno, the foreign adventurer, in the place of Minister Kapena, a native, who had served long and faithfully in that capacity. Minister Wilder, of the Interior, was also removed. This revolution astonished the people, who have a healthy way of expressing public opinion. Moreno held office for four days, when the pressure of public sentiment became too strong, the indignation of the people becoming more fervent every day. It is difficult to ascertain just the kind of reasoning on the part of the King that led to these extraordinary changes, or whether there was any reason at all in the premises. The mere change of Cabinet Ministers would not in itself be a strange circumstance. But the appointment of an adventurer to the office of Minister of Foreign Affairs, one not heretofore identified with the interests of the Kingdom, of whom little was known, and that little had failed of making a favorable impression upon the public—that transaction was too much for the Hawaiians.

It is evident that from the first, the King had expected great things from the inception of the new line of China steamers, with which Moreno had managed in some way to become identified. Honolulu would be a port of call. The line could not be made profitable unless, in addition to the coolies landed on the Islands, the greater part of the business was transferred from American steamships to the China line. All this the King and his advisers must have foreseen, if they foresaw anything. Yet in the face of these facts the King promptly takes Moreno into his confidence and gives him the most important place in his Cabinet. That appears to have been the reward which Moreno received for promoting a Chinese line of steamers to cripple American commerce with the Islands. Moreno reigned for four days. What State papers he originated in this brief time does not appear. We have been furnished such an account from his pen of affairs at the Islands as it is deemed wholly inexpedient to publish, because it is, to a considerable extent, an effort to punish the ex-Minister's enemies and to reward his friends.

Moreno, it appears, not only succeeded in obtaining a small subsidy from the Hawaiian Government for the Chinese line of steamers, but was successful also in promoting the opium scheme, of which mention was made some days ago in this journal. It was proposed by Chinese capitalists to transfer the manufacture of opium from Hongkong to the Hawaiian Islands, chiefly because the subsidy demanded at the former place was too large, the sum of $400,000 being the fixed price. Through Moreno's influence a concession was obtained from the Hawaiian Government for the manufacture of opium, the royalty being $120,000 a year. It is to be noted that no such business can be carried on anywhere in Chinese territory. But the island of Hongkong being British territory, that business has been prosecuted there with great zeal and at an immense profit for many years. The transfer of the manufacture to these islands, so near to the Pacific Coast, would have been a brilliant speculation. The amount which Moreno would have gained does not appear. But the difference in the subsidy price was $280,000. Here again the pressure of public sentiment was so great that the King finally refused to sign the bill, although there is good reason to think that he favored it up to the time it encountered the strong and determined opposition of the public. It would appear that in both these transactions Moreno was the agent of Chinese capitalists, and that for these efforts the King rewarded him by bestowing on him one of the most important offices in the Kingdom. The favor of the King shown to the China line of steamships is the more extraordinary, since it has been known for some time that Chinese immigration to the Islands has been a failure in an industrial point of view. The Islands have now more Chinese than any other foreign element, and the tendency would be, if Chinese steamers were to land coolies without restriction, to overrun the Islands with this population at no distant day. This immigration being so unsatisfactory, planters and others have cast about for other laborers, and have sent to the Society Islands for them. Yet here is a Government premium—a small one, it is true—offered for a Chinese line of steamers, when the most profitable item of the business would be the transportation of coolies to and from these Islands!

The recent expression of popular opinion at the Islands is adverse to any subsidies to a China line of steamers, to Chinese immigration other than in a very limited way, and to Moreno's concession for an opium factory, and not least, to his holding any position like that of Cabinet Minister in the Hawaiian Government. The latter declares that he was a naturalized citizen of the United States. It follows that having taken the oath of allegiance to the Hawaiian Kingdom, he is now a subject of that country, and being a citizen he ought to have the interests of the Kingdom too much at heart to desire in any way to cripple its prosperity that he may personally profit by it. He knows, or ought to know, that the scheme of subsidizing a line of China steamers would at this time work incalculable mischief to Hawaii, since it would be at the expense of American commerce, and would certainly in the end provoke antagonism to the Reciprocity Treaty. He knows, or ought to know, that such a scheme as that of obtaining an opium concession from Hawaii, by giving a large subsidy therefor, was fraught with mischief, and was a scheme which could only have been set on foot for selfish personal ends. Just now ex-Minister Moreno's position can hardly be said to be an enviable one.

Honolulu Politics.

It was not unnatural if the foregin merchants of Honolulu should, in the excitement resulting from the late ministerial crisis, seek the aid and protection of the Foreign Ministers. That these Ministers thought the choice of the King—especially in the case of Moreno, appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs—a most undeserved and unfortunate selection, was evinced by their unanimous refusal to recognize this person or transact any but the most urgent business with him. The following is a copy of one of the protests which induced the foreign representatives to take this extraordinary stand: [Here follows the protests of the English community and those representing English interests, signed by eleven heads of important business houses, addressed to the English Consul-General.]—S. F. Merchant.

The effect of the news from the Islands has not been beneficial to the credit of that Kingdom. Freaks of caprice or temper in the chief ruler of a country, as much as dishonesty, folly and extravagance in a legislature, weaken the faith of capitalists, bankers and merchants in the future prosperity of the State in which they are exhibited. It is not too much to say that for the moment Island credit received a pretty rude shock in San Francisco when the particulars of a ministerial crisis were learned the other day. Men said to themselves, and asked each other, "What will a King do next who is so lost to prudence and self-respect as to choose a man like Moreno for his companion, chief officer and Prime Counselor?" Fortunately for the little Kingdom, the news of the King's retraction, and, however slowly and unwillingly made, it mitigated the feeling of indignation, was received at the same time as the first intimation of the trouble. It was as if the first we heard of an alarm of fire was coupled with news that the flames were extinguished. The friends of the Island Government, and of all that appertains to the Islands, hope to hear of no more such crises or unreasonable and unconstitutional exhibitions of Kingly power.—S. F. Merchant.

CHALMERS-SPENCE

'AIR SPACE,'

AND FOWLER'S

YUCCA BOILER COVERING

Patented January 19, 1866.

Has been victorious over all other devices for covering boilers with which it has been brought into competition, both in Europe and America, for the past twelve years. Endorsed by the Scientific American and London Engineering everywhere as being the best Non-conductor, the most Reliable, the most Economical.

THE AIR SPACE.

The "Air Space" is a mechanical device. The old method of covering boilers, steam and other hot pipes, was to smear a coating of plaster over the boilers and pipes, and directly in contact with the hot surfaces. Common sense teaches that any compound thus applied will soon have the life burnt out of it, and that the expansion and contraction of the metal over which it is smeared, will cause it to loosen and crack, so that it will, after a time, fall off. Besides this, experience has proved that the lime and other compounds used for this purpose, when applied direct to the boiler surfaces, corrodes the boilers so as to greatly injure them.

The Air Space serves a two-fold purpose; first it provides a stratum of air entirely around the boiler, which is the best known non-conductor of heat. Second, it provides a surface which is entirely independent of the boiler surface upon which the covering compound is placed, and this surface being formed of wire cloth of ¼-inch mesh, furnishes a splendid means of clinching or fastening the compound around the boiler.

The wire space is supported at the space of an inch or more from the boiler or hot pipe by metal studs placed close together, so that the expansion or contraction of the boiler or pipes around which it is placed will not affect the outside covering, because the stud allows a sufficient movement without disturbing the surrounding wire and cover.

Experience and practical tests have demonstrated beyond a doubt that the radiation of heat from a boiler surrounded by the "Air Space" and its covering, is less than that from a boiler covered with any of the other well known boiler coverings; consequently there is a greater saving of fuel.

In proof of what is said about the superiority of the Chalmers-Spence Air Space, see Scientific American, Dec. 1, 1877, and London Engineering, July 12, 1877.

Pianofortes in the Exhibition.

In our previous notice of the Pianos in the Exhibition (No. IV.) in connection with those of the German Court, we were unable to do more than enumerate the exhibits of L. NEUFELD, of Berlin, and that enumeration was erroneous. Since writing that notice, the Sydney agents, Messrs. Rabone, Feez & Co., have given us an opportunity of seeing the instruments, of which four are exhibited instead of two, as formerly stated. The First is a Grand of full compass, 7½ octaves overstrung, "an acoustical metal frame in agraffes, the action is perfect unfailing repetition." All the modern improvements are applied; the instrument is cased in walnut, of fine tone and light touch, and being in addition by far the most priceworthy ought to command the most ready market.

No. 2 is an upright cottage grand, with iron frame overstrung, well finished, and cased in a handsome frame in the Louis Quatorze style. No. 3 is an upright cottage, simpler in the exterior, but with substantial metal frame, and all the evidences of thorough care in the internal construction. No. 4 is an overstrung upright boudoir cottage of very agreeable tone.

Having thoroughly examined the workmanship and construction, and tested tone and touch, we are able to speak with confidence on the sterling merits of these instruments, especially when we compare the prices with those of other exhibits. ☞ Pianos are now on exhibition at the store of

EMIL FRESE'S

HAMBURG TEA.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO SAY TOO MUCH IN praise of this good old standard Family Medicine. It cannot be too highly recommended, as it is truly a Marvel of the Age, and no household should be without it. It prevents as well as cures Skin Diseases, Gout, Rheumatism, Gravel and all Kidney Diseases. Affected Liver, Heartburn, Nausea, Bile, Wind, Indigestion, Constipation, Fevers and Ague, Sleeplessness, Lassitude, Foul Breath, and every disease brought on or aggravated by a disordered stomach.

It purifies the Blood, Cleanses the Stomach and Bowels, and gives the whole system a Healthy and Delightful Tone. There never was a medicine for the Nursery equal to it, and being composed of Herbs only, it can be given safely to infants. It is a triumph in medicine—harmless, yet efficacious. Invaluable in the family, on the road, at sea, and everywhere.
