HONOLULU SOCIETY GIRL ENGAGED TO POPULAR NAVY OFFICER.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McChesney announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Martha Louise, to Mr. Milton Hudson Anderson, U. S. N. The announcement of this engagement today was a surprise to the members of the younger set, for although Miss McChesney has been affianced for some time her friends were not aware of the fact. Miss McChesney graduated from Oahu College in June. She received her degree for the general course, also a diploma in music and in harmony. The young bride-to-be is one of the well-loved girls in the younger set. As yet, no definite date has been set for the wedding.

WITH THE SPLENDID BAND of the Second Infantry rendering a medley waltz, through which ran the strains of such old favorites as "Auld Lang Syne" and "Good Night, Ladies," the farewell dance given to the Fifth Cavalry by the officers and ladies of the other regiments of Schofield Barracks came to a regretful close shortly before 2 o'clock this morning. Freighted with memories and suggestion was the music, and with the last few bars came to the dancers the realization that the words of the old songs meant much to them; that auld acquaintance should not be forgot, and that "We have to leave you now," was the Fifth's reluctant farewell to Hawaii nei.

It was a splendid dance; next to the last University Club affair the most brilliant seen on Oahu for many years, and the 350 dancers who glided over the perfect floor of the Infantry Amusement Hall tried to forget until the moment of leavetaking that the occasion was to speed old friends overseas, and gave themselves up to the full enjoyment of the evening.

The big hall was decorated in flags and greens, and the fluttering guidons and colors formed an appropriate background for the white and gold uniforms of the officers, and the many handsome gowns which were in evidence.

Over the center of the room, trimmed in a border of green, hung Old Glory. At the end of the hall, farthest from the stage, on which the musicians were placed, stood the receiving line, flanked and backed by the color-stands of the four regiments of the post. The colors of the Fifth Cavalry, First Field Artillery, First Infantry and Second Infantry, together with the national colors of each organization, grouped together, made a brave martial display.

At the head of the line stood Colonel George K. McGunnegle, First Infantry, post commander and acting department commander, who gave to each guest a courteous welcome. Following in the order mentioned were Miss McGunnegle, Colonel Wilder and Mrs. Orton, of the cavalry; Colonel and Mrs. French, Second Infantry; Major and Mrs. Cruikshank, Field Artillery; Major Wallace De Witt, medical corps, and Mrs. Davis. Major Julius Penn, First Infantry, the senior officer of the committee which had the ball in charge, performed the introductions. The other members of the committee were Captain Gibson, Second Infantry, and Lieutenant Bowley, Field Artillery.

The Schofield officers saw to it that nothing was left undone to make their party a success, and for the convenience of their guests arranged for a special train which left the city at 8 o'clock, leaving Jones station, close to the Amusement Hall, for the return trip, at 2:15 a. m. Lieutenant Martin, First Field Artillery, Lieutenant Halloran, Second Infantry, and Lieutenant Robertson, First Infantry, formed a railway reception committee, and played host on the special during the round trip.

Many service and civilian guests from Honolulu took advantage of the clear night to motor to Leilehua.

The invited guests included:

Leap Year Dance At The Outrigger Club.

One of the most successful and enjoyable of the week's entertainments was the dance at the Outrigger Club last evening given by the feminine members of the Younger Set.

Regardless of the fact that 1913 has already arrived it was a Leap Year dance and the girls chose their own partners.

There were no decorations at the club, but during the third dance the young ladies were given serpentines which they threw across the pavilion. The vari-colored streamers were very pretty and made an attractive setting for the young people as they danced.

Mrs. A. E. Murphy, Mrs. E. A. Jones and Mrs. William Haley Hiserman acted as chaperones during the evening.

The young ladies who arranged the affair were Miss Thelma Murphy, assisted by Miss Eloise Wichman, Miss Myrtle Schuman, Miss Beth Woods, Miss Catherine Ashley, Miss Ruth Anderson and Miss Ruth Soper.

Among those present were.

Miss Thelma Murphy, Miss Eloise Wichman, Miss Ruth Soper, Miss Margaret Jones, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Catherine Jones, Miss Laura Low, Miss Elizabeth Low, Miss Ruth Anderson, Miss Hazel Buckland, Miss Vivien Buckland, Miss Miriam Stacker, Miss Ruth Stacker, Miss Myrtle Schuman, Miss Harriet Lucas, Miss Mary Lucas, Miss Violet Atherton, Miss Juliet Atherton, Miss Laura Atherton, Miss Wilhelmina Tenney, Miss Mildred Chapin, Miss Helen Spalding, Miss Fanny Hoogs, Miss Alice Hoogs, Miss Beryl Hunter—Jones, Miss Crichton Hunter-Jones, Miss Catherine Ashley, Miss Clements Gifford, Miss Martin, Miss Lathan, Miss Frances Coenran, Miss Beatrice White, Miss Esther White, Miss Lady Macfarlane, Miss Alice Macfarlane, Miss Marjorie Gilman, Miss Margaret Restarick, Miss Orpal Starrett, Miss Daphne Damon, Miss Rose Herbert, Miss Ynez Gibson, Miss Bernice Halstead, Miss Katherine Paris, Miss Beth Woods, Miss Ina Ferguson, Miss Glenna McCracken, Miss Virginia McCarthy, Miss Marguerite Creighton, Mr. John Gifford, Mr. Jack Galt, Mr. Erling Hedemann, Mr. Edmund Hedemann, Mr. Bob McCorriston, Mr. Oscar McCorriston, Mr. Percy Deverill, Francis Cooper, Mr. Vernon Tenney, Mr. Wrenne Taylor, Mr. Alan Renton, Mr. Dixon Nott, Mr. James Winne, Mr. William Scott, Mr. Walter McHenry, Mr. Arch Brown, Mr. Jack Guard, Mr. Kenneth Pickford, Mr. Alfred Wishman, Mr. Ralph Grey, Mr. Malcolm Tuttle, Mr. Sam Carter, Mr. Clay Kelley, Mr. Walton Harris, Mr. Fitts, Mr. Reed, Mr. Blakeley Robinson, Mr. Clarence White, Mr. Tom Gray, Mr. Guy Catlane, Mr. Percy Nottage, Mr. Rexford McGrew, Mr. Albert Hall, Mr. Bernard Damon, Mr. Ed Kelly, Mr. Oswald Stevens, Jr., Closson Emery, Mr. Watson Ballentyne, Mr. Oswald Lightfoot, Mr. Charles Herbert, Mr. Elbert Tuttle, Mr. Woods Low, Mr. Will Ross, Mr. Walter Kendall, Mr. Kelvin Keech, Mr. Sidney Carr, Mr. Ernest Shaw and Mr. Ernest Podmore.

Mrs. Frederick A. Barker Entertains

One of the very attractive affairs of the week was the tea at which Mrs. Frederick A. Barker entertained on Tuesday afternoon for her mother, Mrs. Honeyman of Portland, Oregon, and for Mrs. Rosenbaum of Fort Shafter.

Red and green, the colors expressive of the holiday season, were carried out in the decorations and poinsettias, red carnations, African daisies and red Christmas bells were used effectively.

Mrs. Edward L. Spalding and Mrs. James Madison Kennedy poured tea and coffee and Mrs. Manton Mitchell of the First Infantry presided over the punchbowl. Those ladies were assisted by Mrs. Gerald Johnson, Miss Betty Case and Miss Florence Hoffman, while three charming little misses of the fort, Miss Katherine Kennedy, Miss Dorothy Chamberlain and Miss Elizabeth Rosenbaum helped the grown-ups and made a pretty feature of the afternoon.

Among those present were Mrs. Honeyman, Mrs. Rosenbaum, Mrs. McAfee, Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. Chamberlain, Mrs. Schlanser, Mrs. D. B. Case, Mrs. Ross Kingsbury, Miss Betty Case, Mrs. F. B. McStocker, Miss McStocker, Mrs. Cutts, Mrs. Douglas McDougal, Mrs. W. C. Neville, Mrs. Conklin, Mrs. Harold Pratt, Mrs. Offley, Mrs. Cheatham, Mrs. Denman, Mrs. Effinger, Miss Eleanor Effinger, Mrs. McIntyre, Mrs. Aloe, Miss Sarah Lucas, Mrs. Francis Damon, Mrs. Melanphy, Miss Daphne Damon, Miss Helen Spalding, Mrs. Edmund Melanphy, Mrs. John Gamble, Miss Gamble, Miss Barrie Gamble, Mrs. Hugh Cooke, Mrs. Lister, Miss McGunnegle, Miss Josephine Smith, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. French, Mrs. Hand, Mrs. Cruikshank, Mrs. Shuttleworth, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Game, Mrs. A. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Banquetted.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 22.—When 1,500 people jammed and crushed and fought their way into the big ball room of the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday at the Democrat woman's banquet in honor of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and her daughters, one woman, fearing she would miss a sight of the wife of the President-elect, climbed on the nearest table.

"Look!" cried Mrs. A. Ayres, "Democracy is on top. Let us hope it will stay there."

Mrs. Martin Littlejohn joined in the laugh, and the pair pressed on to the speakers' table.

The central figure throughout the reception which preceded the victory breakfast, as it was called, maintained the gracious attitude of a woman so sure of herself that she is without consciousness. Only once the next Lady of the White House quailed. As she rose from her seat a woman rushed forward to the table of honor and thrusting her program and a pencil toward Mrs. Wilson, asked her autograph. Mrs. Wilson smiled and wrote. Mrs. Darwin W. Truss, who bore off the trophy, turned in triumph to discover that she had precipitated a riot. Dozens of women were clamoring for Mrs. Wilson's signature. As Mrs. Wilson drew back Mrs. Truss faced them and said in a loud voice:

"Mrs. Wilson will give no autographs. She has said it is impossible."

The guests drew back at once. Mrs. John Sherwin Crosby, presiding officer of the Women's Democratic Club, filled the chair. Mrs. Dix and Mrs. Sulzer, the present and future ladies of the Governor's mansion, left girls. Mrs. Wilson, on Mrs. Crosby's right, sat next Mrs. James A. O'Gorman, with Miss Jessie Wilson and Mrs. Gaynor the next succeeding couple. The recently married Mrs. George Norden of Chicago was on the President's left, with Miss Margaret Wilson, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin of Chicago and Miss Eleanor Wilson beyond. At the extreme left of the table Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont were seated on either side of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

There was an amusing moment when Mrs. Crosby, calling upon all to rejoice in "the people's choice of chief adviser to the new President," proposed a toast to Mrs. Wilson and her daughters. The house was on its feet, every glass raised, when Mrs. Henry D. Clayton of Alabama, who sat next Miss Jessie Wilson, turned to her! saying, "No, I refuse; I cannot drink your health in water," and she put it down untasted.

There was another little ripple when George Fred Williams, replying to the toast "The President of the United States," paused in commenting upon the generous opponent Mr. Wilson had met in Taft to remark that woman's rights in the campaign have advanced to the stage where they must obtain universal recognition and he believed the nation would have a President who reflected such an idea of Democracy. Miss Jessie Wilson leaned forward and clapped her hands delightedly.

Dudley Field Malone replied to the toast "The Ladies of the White House."

"If you want to know who has contributed the color, the good humor, the joy to this campaign look to the next mistress of the White House and her beautiful daughters," he said.

Mrs. Wilson rose to bow her acknowledgment at the outburst of applause. As she stood there with her three daughters, her gown of black charmeuse veiled with Chantily lace, she was the embodiment of quiet elegance. The Misses Wilson were simply and girlishly gowned, Miss Jessie in blue, Miss Margaret in ruby and Miss Eleanor in palest violet.

John Sherwin Crosby, speaking to the toast 'The President-elect," complimented Mr. Wilson on the selection of his "fireside cabinet—his only kitchen cabinet," a mot which Mrs. Wilson appeared to enjoy immensely. Mrs. Henry D. Clayton, Mrs. Norman E. Mack, Miss Edith Reiffert, Mrs. Fisher Harcourt and Mrs. Marie Newhaus spoke. The latter toasted the men with:

"God save them all—and one for me. So say we all of us."

Mrs. Crosby announced that this was Wilson Day, and steps would be taken to make it legally so. She said that next year it would again be celebrated.

Mrs. Martin H. Glynn, Mrs. Dudley Field Malone, Mrs. J. Charles Linthicum, Mrs. John Purroy Mitchell, Mrs. Andrew Cuneo, Mrs. William A. Cult, Mrs. Eugene F. Kinkead, Mrs. Lewis Nixon and Homer Cummings, who spoke for "The Spellbinders," were others at the table of honor. Mrs. Cothran, Mrs. Wilson's sister, with her daughter, was present in a box. In a preliminary reception twenty-two little girls in charming white frocks presented in roses the loyalty of the States.

Miss Ruth McChesney Entertains.

Miss Ruth McChesney was hostess at a prettily-appointed luncheon today at which the engagement of her sister, Martha and Ensign Milton J. Anderson was announced. The color scheme for the decorations was red and green and was developed with red flowers and maiden hair ferns. A large bow of soft red satin ribbon embellished with bits of lacy ferns formed the centerpiece. Each of the guests was given a red carnation knotted with maile. The little hand painted card marking the place of each guest revealed the secret to the friends of the hostess and the guest of honor. Little hearts folded together and ornamented with tiny Cupids were placed on the table, and when opened disclosed the names of Miss McChesney and Mr. Anderson. Covers were laid for Miss Martha McChesney, Miss Helen Spalding, Miss Carrie McLain, Miss Rose Herbert, Miss Violet Stoever, Miss Laura Atherton, Mrs. Adams, Miss Fanny Hoogs, Miss Hazel Buckland, Miss Beryl Hunter-Jones, Miss Crichton Hunter-Jones and Miss Ruth McChesney.
