'SEVEN DAYS' CONTINUES TO SCORE SUCCESS

[illegible] Will [illegible] Mrs. Brown [illegible] Sister [illegible] Dove [illegible] Mrs. Brown [illegible] quarantine [illegible] established at the Wilson home because of a smallpox [illegible] located there by the health officers. The wife, who comes back on the anniversary of her divorce to entice her former husband's clock from him; the girl who call's, unconscious of there having been a separation; the burglar who is just about to get away with the loot when the health guards surround the house and numerous other characters are introduced into action. In the second and third acts the complications pile up so fast that there is wonder ever how they will be straightened out. While there are many sidesplitting features those caused by the burglar and Mrs. Brown who believes that she has control over spirituals, the bodies are the leaders. The burglar jumps through the three acts until close to the end without being discovered. Very good work is done by the entire company, and tonight will be the last opportunity of seeing the biggest laugh producer ever seen in Honolulu. Commencing with tomorrow night a mammoth production of "The White Sister," a dramatization of F. Marion Crawford's novel, will be put on. The admirable portrayal of the pathetic story of "The White Sister," who becomes a nun when her soldier lover is reported killed, with grinding heart interest will be taken by Miss Florence Oakley. A finished piece of work is expected by this skilled actress.

The "Column of Progress" which will stand north of the Court of the Universe, between the Court and the Bay of San Francisco at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, will be the collaborative work of Mr. Isidore Konti, who will execute the frieze of the pedestal and Mr. H. A. MacNeil, who has modeled the magnificent group "The Adventurous Bowman" which is to crown the column. Mr. Konti's frieze will typify the progress of the nations through the ages.

MISCHA ELMAN EARLY SHOWED MARKED ABILITY ON VIOLIN

Mischa Elman, who will be heard in concert at the Royal Hawaiian opera house tomorrow night.

Mischa Elman was born January 21st, 1891, at Talnoje, Russia, where his father was a schoolmaster and a teacher of the violin. As a child he was given a quarter-size violin for a birthday present, and soon commenced to play by ear with astonishing correctness the pieces played by his father. He made his first public appearance at the early age of five, at a charity concert arranged by the Princess Oursow, in his native village, with extraordinary results for one so young. His father having decided to sacrifice everything for his son's future, took Elman to Odessa, with a view to entering the imperial school of music and in May 1896 he appeared before the board of examiners.

Although the rules of the institution did not permit the admission of one so young, his exceptional performance and marvelous feat in memory overcame all difficulties, and upon Mischa accordingly becoming a student at the imperial school, he was placed under Alexander Fiderman.

Professor Auer, [illegible] moment he sent a message to say he was unwell, and under the circumstances his youngest and best pupil would fill his place; consequently Mischa Elman—a lad of 12—played the Mendelssohn Concerto, one of Chopin's Nocturns, and Paganini's "Moto Perpetuo" with such success that Auer immediately arranged for Lita to play at Berlin, in which city he arrived with his father on October 12th, 1904.

He afterwards made a successful tour in Germany—Dresden, Hamburg, Dusseldorf, Frankfort, Hannover and Leipzig.

Following this he journeyed to London, and, while in the train, the good-hearted Misha, in offering a fellow passenger a glass of wine, slipped, breaking the tumbler and cutting his hand. Although the wound was not quite healed, he made his English debut at Queen's hall on March 31st, 1906, when he played Tschaikowsky's Concerto with faultless technique, and such poetic phrasing that he was engaged for two more concerts.

He has enjoyed the distinguished honor of playing at court, and before Queen Alexandra on several occasions, and also before the King and Queen of Spain. He has also played in every town of note in Great Britain, besides which he has toured America and Australia, and after completing his Australian tour through the British provinces, he returns to America in December next to fill a hundred series of concerts throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico extending over a period of 12 months. It can truly be said of Mischa Elman he is placed under [illegible] all the great conductors [illegible] which his genius [illegible] his is an unknown [illegible] Golden Length.
