FOREIGN.

To young gentlemen beginning life the story of Lord Albert Clinton, as revealed in the Court of Bankruptcy, on Saturday, may be recommended as an exhibition of those things which they ought most to avoid. Lord Albert has devoted his life thus far to the work of showing how soon a foolish young man may bring himself to ruin. The bankrupt told the court he "had done nothing for years beyond getting into debt." He had £900 a year when his father died, and £10,000 under the marriage settlement. He has now succeeded in reducing his income to £400 a year; he has spent the £10,000, and he owes £30,000 beside. The present age of this intelligent young scion of a noble house is 23. He has "seen life"—so much so that he lately passed five weeks in intimate observation of existence in Whitecross-st. How proud his family must be of this excellent young man!

Mr. Bright having been lately consulted by a Paisley elector as to whether Liberals should stand by Mr. Crum Ewing, the old Liberal member, or vote for Mr. Kintrea, a new and more Radical candidate, who was formerly an agent in London for the Confederate States, has written as follows from Torquay, October 13: "I am unwilling to interfere in your election matters, but in answer to your question I cannot hesitate to say that the working-man, the new elector for your burgh, will in my opinion make a grievous mistake if he attempts to remove Mr. Crum Ewing from the representation of Paisley, and to replace him by any other candidate now before your constituency. If Mr. Kintrea was the confidential agent of the friends of the slaveholder, he is a bold man to offer himself as the representative of the now free men of this country."

"Victoria Cross," in The Pall Mall Gazette of Oct. 20, replies to the question, "Can any single officer, non-commissioned officer, or man in the British service tell us how, if Private Brown runs out of cartridges in action, he can get any more?" He says: "Nothing is so simple, and I can not only explain to you the process, but also give you a case in point. I happened to form one of the storming party at the capture of the Quarries (an advanced work of the Russians in front of the Redan) on June 7, 1855. On this occasion there was a slight mistake in the orders given to our 'supports,' who, instead of 'supporting' us as soon as we took the work, at 5:30 in the evening, only arrived to 'relieve' us at 9:30 the next morning. Owing to this little error, and to what I may call other natural causes, Private Brown of my company, as well as most of his comrades, ran out of ammunition. I thereupon sent a sergeant and two men to the rear with orders to bring a supply as fast as possible. They returned with a polite message from the officer in charge of the magazine to the effect that I should have what I required if I would send the proper 'requisition' in writing. In the meanwhile we had been driven out of the Quarries, and were holding on by the reverse of the work, and just when my messenger returned we had to recapture the work at the point of the bayonet; but I have no reason to suppose that the officer would not have fulfilled his promise had I sent him the proper document, which you will observe I was only prevented from doing because I happened to be otherwise occupied. You will see from this, Sir, that nothing is simpler than the process of supplying ammunition to British troops in action. The only point I am not quite clear about is the proper breadth of margin of the paper on which the necessary requisition should be written, but I have reason to believe that 'half-margin foolscap' is the proper form of the document, and I will state my reason for thinking so. After the fall of Sebastopol, I was one day on guard in the Redan, and shortly before I was relieved I discovered that one of the unexploded Russian magazines was on fire. I placed my guard and sentries in safety, warned the officer who relieved me, and as soon as I returned to camp wrote a hurried report of the circumstance, which was returned to me because it was written upon 'quarter-margin' foolscap instead of 'half-margin.' I am therefore of opinion that the proper form of a requisition for ammunition for British troops in action is 'half-margin foolscap.' I have omitted to state that on the occasion referred to Private Brown was unfortunately killed while engaged for the third or fourth time, I forget which, in retaking the work at the point of the bayonet. As he was dying he requested me (verbally, not in writing) to send his prayer-book to his mother at home, which I did."

PUBLISHED THIS DAY, by CHARLES SCRIBNER & Co., No. 654 BROADWAY, New-York.

PROF. PORTER'S MENTAL SCIENCE.

THE HUMAN INTELLECT; with an introduction upon Psychology and the Human Soul. By Prof. Noah Porter, D. D., of Yale College. 1 vol., 8vo., nearly 700 pages. $5.

This is by far the most thorough and comprehensive work upon Metaphysics ever published in this country. It is pronounced a positive argument against the materialistic tendencies of the cerebral and physiological schools of Mill and Bain, and aims to guide the more advanced students to a clear understanding and a just estimate of the questions which have perpetually reappeared in the history of Philosophy. The typographical arrangement of the volume—the more important principles and facts being in larger print, adapts it for use as a text-book,—while its fulness of statement makes it invaluable to all interested in mental science.

THE LIFE AND PUBLIC SERVICES OF GEN. ULYSSES S. GRANT, from his boyhood to the present time, with a BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH of the HON. SCHUYLER COLFAX, by the Hon. Charles A. Phelps, late Speaker of the Mass. House of Representatives, and President of the Mass Senate. A handsome 12mo. volume of three hundred and sixty-four pages, paper binding, with the Republican Platform appended. It is elegantly illustrated with two splendid steel portraits, and illustrations of the birthplace and principal events in the life of Gen. Grant. While a truthful narrative of the leading events of the war, it is pronounced to be one of the most effective campaign documents ever issued in the country. In the hope of securing a large circulation, the price has been made but a trifle above the cost of manufacture. Attention is called to the following notices of this work by the press, and by distinguished statesmen and soldiers:

From the Hon. Wm. Claflin, Chairman of National Executive Committee.

"It is admirable in design and execution. The friends of Gen. Grant can do no better work than give the book the most extensive circulation."

The Hon. E. D. Morgan, Chairman of Congressional Executive Committee.

"So handsome a work must do great good in the Campaign."

Hon. Charles Sumner.

"Sets forth the facts in an attractive way, and cannot fail to exert a powerful influence."

Gen. John A. Logan, Commander of Army of Republic.

"Written with interest and care, and very justly called the 'People's Edition.' It is destined to become a popular work, and I wish it great success."

Gov. Boutwell.

"A graphic and truthful record of the great events of Gen. Grant's career. I hope it will be circulated throughout the country."

The Hon. Ira Harris.

"I am charmed with the book. It is destined to become a standard biography."

Gov. Fenton.

"I do not see how the work could be better executed. I wish the book could find its way to all our voters."

Gen. Badeau, of Gen. Grant's Staff, and Author of Military History of Gen. Grant.

"Mr. Phelps seems to have appreciated the points in Gen. Grant's career which are most characteristic. I have seen no book of similar scope and aim which I like better."

Gen. Burnside.

"It cannot fail to do great good during the campaign, and besides will be an excellent book for general reading for all time. For one, I thank you for this most important work."

The Philadelphia Press.

"The best campaign life of Grant we have seen."

Liberal Christian New-York.

"It gives all that most men will care to know, and is a book that will retain its interest long after the excitements of the political campaign are over."

Watchman and Reflector.

"Of the many lives of Gen. Grant, the best adapted for popular use."

Boston Transcript.

"Deserves the largest possible circulation."

Boston Traveller.

"A more concise, straightforward, and comprehensive record of a man's story was never published, at least, not in our day."

New-York Tribune.

"A spirited sketch of Gen. Grant's military career and his personal character, and is admirably adapted for general circulation."

Worcester Palladium.

"It is peculiarly a book for the people—the mass of men who have not time to peruse more full and elaborate works."

Christian Advocate, New-York.

"The work is evidently designed for use as a 'Campaign Document,' though one would hardly suspect it from its contents or style."

New-York Commercial Advertiser.

"The work is exceedingly well done."

Ambassador.

"A history of the salient events of the war. A book of enduring literary merit, and has evidently been prepared with a view to something more than ephemeral reading."

Price Fifty cents. If by express, $5 per dozen; $30 per 100. The cash in all cases must accompany the order. Address THE TRIBUNE, New-York.
