ALICE CARY'S SWEETEST POEM.

The apology is needed at this time for reproducing the following exquisite lines by the honored Alice Cary—lines which, in the judgment of so competent a critic as Edgar A. Poe, deserve to rank among the very finest contributions to the public literature of America.]

Of all the beautiful pictures
That hang on Memory's wall,
The one of a little old house,
That seemed best of all;
Not for its crooked rails and bars,
Dark with the moisture;
Not for the violets golden
That peeped to the sun below;
Not for the milk-white lilies
That lean from the fragrant hedge,
Courting all day with the sunbeams,
And standing their golden edge;
Not for the vines on the orchard
Where the bright red cherries rest;
Nor for the pinks, not the pale, sweet cowslip,
It seemed to me the best.

I once had a little brother
With eyes that were dark and deep—
In the lap of that sunny forest
He loved to peep and peep;
Light as the down of the thistle,
Free as the winds that blow,
We were there the beautiful summers,
The summers of long ago;
But he died on the hills green mossy,
And one of the autumn eves
I made for my little brother
A bed of the yellow leaves.

Twenty his years scarce folded
My back to a week whilome,
In the light of immortal beauty
Silently entered his home;
And when the autumn of manhood
Ledged in the tree-tops bright,
He fell in his mind-like beauty,
Among the green of light.
Therefore, of all the pictures
That hang on Memory's wall,
The one of the little old house
Seemed best of all.

Variety.

A rare combination—dollars and sense.

A steamboat is being built to run on the sea of troubles.

Indians may be considered the Copper-faced type of Mankind.

A second-hand clothing shop has for sale some of the "shifts" of the wind.

Cold in the head isn't half so common as cold in the heart, but it is a great deal sharper complained of.

"You should be ashamed, husband, to snore so." "Oh, it is entirely unintentional; I never do it with my eyes open."

An ingenious mechanic has invented a plummet for measuring the "depth of obscurity."

A boarding-house keeper advertises "board for two gentlemen with gas."

"Dawkins," said an exquisite, the other day, "I want you to tell me what I can put into my head to make it right"—"It wants nothing but brains," said the physician.

Be not afraid to work with your hands, and diligently too. "A cat is given catches no mice." He who remains in the mill, grinds; not he who goes and comes.

Attend to your business; never trust it to any one else. "A pot that belongs to too many is ill stirred and worse boiled."

A Kentucky editor gives threatening notice to his opponents that he "will make a clean sweep at the next election." We are glad to learn that he contemplates becoming a "sweep." We shall patronize him as often as our chimneys get foul.

"My son," said an affectionate mother, to her son who resided at a distance, and expected, in a short time, to be married, "you are getting thin." "Yes, mother," he replied, "I am; when I come next, I think you may see my rib."

Whatever you do, do it willingly. A boy that is whipped at school never learns his lessons well. A man that is compelled to work, cares not how badly it is performed. He who pulls off his coat cheerfully, strips up his sleeves in earnest, and sings while he works, is the man for us.

Dr. Arnold, when at Laleham, once lost all patience with a dull scholar, when the pupil looked up in his face, and said, "Why do you speak angrily, sir? Indeed, I am doing the best I can." Years after, the doctor used to tell the story to his own children, and say, "I never felt so ashamed of myself in my life. That look and that speech I have never forgotten."

WHAT A PRINTING OFFICE IS NOT.—A printing office or editorial room is not a place for lounging nor is it a public reading room. The exchange papers are taken for the editor's own use, and not for that of the public. Advertising is a part of the regular business of the publisher, and he does not expect to do it gratis, any more than a man build carriages for nothing. And, finally, an editor is not to be considered the universal arbiter of all disputes, the general champion of all the distressed or the mainspring of the Government. If you have business with an editor, transact it with all reasonable dispatch, and leave him to attend to his duties, and do not annoy him by interruptions, by reading his manuscript, or by carrying off his exchanges. If you have no business with him stay away.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES—HINTS TO THE LONDS OF CREATION.—Those dear creatures who are the most indifferent to their husbands are those who are cloyed by too much sufficing of the sugar-plums and lollypops of love. I have known a young being, with every wish gratified, yawn in her adoring husband's face, and prefer the conversation and polite wiles of the merest booby and idiot; while, on the other hand, I have seen Chloe—at whom Strephon has thrown his boot-jack in the morning, or whom he has cursed before the servants at dinner—come creeping and fawning to his knee at tea-time, when he is comfortable after his little nap and his good wine; and, when old John, the butler, or old Mary, the maid, comes in with the bed-candles, looks round proudly, as much as to say, "Now, John, look how good my dear Henry is?"

Make your game, gentlemen, then! There is the roaring, bullying, adoring line, when you are ben-pecked, and Louisa is indifferent, and bored out of her existence. There is the manly, selfish, effectual system, where she answers to the whistle, and comes in at the Down, Charger! and knows her master; and frisks and fawns about him; and mumbles at his knees; and "licks the hand that's raised"—that's raised to do her good, as I quote from memory Mr. Pope finely observes. What ails the lamented O'Connell to say, over whom a grateful country has raised such a magnificent testimonial? "Hereditary bondsmen," he would remark, "know ye not, who will be free, themselves must strike the blow?" Of course you must, in political as in domestic circles. So up with your cudgels, my enslaved, injured boys!—Thackeray's Virginians.

News of the Week.

After all obligations are paid, Horace Greeley's daughters will each have $100,000.

Bismarck says some of the Great Powers will oppose a Federal Republic in Spain. Also, that Austria will recognize it.

Spain is considering a proposition to send ministers to Chili, Peru and other South American Republics.

Poland's Credit Mobilier Committee report severely against Ames and Brooks, and that the credit was a "gigantic swindle;" but they whitewash the offenses of the other members who disgraced themselves and Congress by going into the ring and helping to defraud the United States.

Wood introduced a resolution for the impeachment of Colfax. The House refused; yeas 106, nays 109, to consider the resolution.

An attempted mutiny in the Spanish army in favor of Don Carlos, resulted in enthusiastic demonstrations for the Republic.

The Governorship of forty-eight provinces of Spain will be divided equally among the Radicals and Republicans. The secretaries of Radical Governors will be Republicans.

The Committee on Public Buildings reports in favor of a new Presidential Mansion at Washington; that the existing one is unfit for a President to live in, but may be used for executive offices.

A report is just received in London, that Cafe, in Smyrna, situated on the shore of the gulf, having been undermined by tides, was suddenly swallowed up in the waves, and that between one and two hundred persons, mostly Greeks, were drowned.

By a close vote the House Committee on Appropriation has adopted Edmunds' amendment withholding Government compensation from the railroad companies for transportation, till they shall have paid up the interest account due to the United States.

It is stated that since the passage of the Asiatic Telegraph bill, it has been discovered that the parties standing behind the scheme are not responsible, and that probably their only object in securing the bill is to sell the franchise accruing under it. So Senator Cassedy moved a re-consideration of the vote by which the bill passed, and will call it up at the first opportunity. This action defeats the bill for this session at least.

The Indiana Legislature has passed a liquor law similar to that of Ohio.

Families are leaving Madrid in anticipation of trouble.

Oxford and Cambridge are to have their annual boat race on the 29th of March.

The French Committee of Thirty have adopted Thiers' proposal for a second chamber.

Eighty-eight bronze cannons captured by the Army of the Cumberland, are to be moulded into an equestrian statue of Gen. George H. Thomas.

Three new indictments were found against Ingersoll and Tweed. The former gave bail in $10,000 on each indictment. Tweed gave bail in the course of the day.

Trouble reigns at Barcelona, Spain, and a Republican committee has gone with troops to quiet the people. At Saragossa the Republicans have it all their own way.

One of Stokes' lawyers says he has found important evidence. It will show that Fisk had a pistol when Stokes shot him; that he dropped it on the staircase; that a woman picked it up, and that this woman has been found.

Revolution threatens Portugal and the Government is arming to prevent it.

Spain is going to abolish capital punishment.

Americans in Paris had a very brilliant celebration of Washington's birthday.

Confirmation comes of the account of the murder of Senor Valencia, one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Mexico, close to the capital town of Sonora, some time in January. The assassins are supposed to be on the Cochise reservation.

Late mails bring news of the death of J. S. LeFranc, the eminent Irish writer, at Dublin, February 7th.

The loss by the burning of President Grant's residence six miles from St. Louis, in February, is about $8,000; most of the furniture was saved.

A very bitter quarrel has broken out between the Bourbons and Orleanists in France, from which the republic and Thiers are likely to be great gainers.

General Banks made a speech in the House of Representatives Friday night, in which he asserted that the son of ex Queen Isabella will soon become King of Spain.

The Republican Cabinet of Spain is going to withdraw the bill for the abolition of slavery in Porto Rico, and substitute gradual emancipation in all the Spanish Dominions.

The House Judiciary Committee reported Monday against the impeachment of Vice-President Colfax, on the main ground of law that their jurisdiction is not certain over offenses committed during a prior Congress.

President Grant will retain all the members of his Cabinet after the 4th of March, including Boutwell, who will remain at the head of the Treasury till the middle of March, and only then resign if he is elected to the U. S. Senate.

John Bright has resumed his seat in the House of Commons, after years of absence.

Three thousand persons engaged in a political riot at Quebec lately. Only two killed.

It is said claims filed against the estate of the late James Fisk are almost equal to its entire value.

A general strike for the Eight-Hour Law is preparing among the German mechanics and labor organizations in New York.

Fifteen, and not one hundred and fifty, thousand dollars was the sum voted in favor of continuing the breakwater at Wilmington, Los Angeles county.

News from Madrid is not of the most favorable kind for the Republic. An Alphonsist insurrection threatens, and the soldiers show signs of insubordination to the Government.

Calcraft, the English hangman, is a robust, benevolent-looking old man, with a slight stoop and a trifle shaky in his gait, who wears a clerically cut black suit and long white hair and beard. His assistant, and probable successor, is a well-to-do Welshman of thirty-five, who has a morbid fondness for witnessing last scenes. They both are amateur gardeners when not professionally employed.

The Ludicrous in Patents.

The amount of misapplied talent engaged on inventions that can never be used is as wonderful as it is prolific, and there is a ludicrous element in many of the patents, and more of the applications, which is well worth investigation. We extract from the records of the Patent Office an account of some of these, that show more genius than common sense, and have produced more laughter than profit.

In 1870 the owner of certain bee-hives, irritated by the loss of his honey by the bee-moth, asked for a patent for a combined hen-roost and bee-hive. He had noticed that the bee-moth travels at night, while the busy bee works by day. His device, therefore, was for a device that should admit the worker by day and keep out the thief by night. This his ingenuity effected by the erection of a hen-roost pivoted upon a bee-hive provided with gates. The bees were expected to be in their cells just before dusk; the hens, lighting on their roosts, were then to close the gates of the hive and keep them shut all night. The early rising of the fowls would automatically open the gates and return the bees—their honey all safe—to the airs of heaven and the flowers of earth. He received his patent.

Another applicant asked for a patent right for an artificial moon, that should light each town that used it without expense. His eye had often been struck with the reflection of distant windows at sunset, and how far the light traveled. He therefore proposed a balloon for each town, sufficiently large to raise a huge reflector that was to be hoisted every evening at dusk (about the time the hens shut in the bees). The reflection of the sun's rays, cast downward upon the village, was sure to light it through all the darkness of the night. Fortunately for himself, this inventor presented his application through a patent attorney, who told him it was doubtful if it could be obtained.

In the Fall of 1871 a gentleman, probably from California, applied for and received a patent for building houses on wheels or rollers, so that, in case of earthquakes, they might roll forward or backward, but not be shaken to pieces.

Only three years have passed away since a very ingenious gentleman from the rural districts applied for a patent to prevent cows from switching their tails! He presented two models—one shaped like a bottle, around the neck of which the cow's tail is to be curled; the other consisted of a square block, with a hole through the center, wherein the tail was to be put, and then tied in a knot, so that the animal could not withdraw it. On the presentation of the application the official examiner thought it could not be granted, because of a similar device in "Don Quixotte," where Sancho Panza, trying to sleep in the hay-loft, was kept awake by the braying of his donkey below. His wakefulness gave Sancho time to reflect that when riding the donkey the animal always switched his tail when he brayed. Descending hastily from the hay-loft, the squire tied a block to the donkey's tail to prevent him from braying. But as this device originated with a Spaniard, and had never been repeated in this country, the office decided to grant the patent. Our readers will therefore remember that they cannot tie a cow's tail to prevent its switching without a payment of royalty to the owner of this privilege.

Another gentleman applied for a patent for heating canals by steam, so that boating could go on in winter as well as in summer. The office decided that this invention was worthy of protection and gave him his patent.

Another applied for a combination of clock and bed, so ingeniously contrived that when the clock struck, the bottom of the bed dropped out. He claimed that this plan would probably awaken the sleepers.

Speaking of the combinations, he must have come from Missouri or Kansas who asked for a patent for a combination of cannon and plow. For this purpose he filed three applications, making the elongated handles of the plow hollow, so as to form two cannon. These were to be kept loaded until the guerrillas were after him; the cannon were then to be fired, the guerrillas shot down, and the farmer to go on his way rejoicing.

And he, too, must have come from the borders who asked for a patent for a combination of trunk and house. The trunk was made with triple sides, moving up and down. Doing duty all day in guarding clothes, when night came and no chin near, the triple walls elevated into one and the benighted traveler is safely housed.

Another asked for a patent for the invention of the generation of steam by boring a hole in the ground until he reached the waters that are boiled by the internal fires of the earth. He set forth, among the advantages of his plan, that there would be no danger of explosions, no expense for fuel, no necessity of engineers—all of which statements are undoubtedly true.

It must have been a relative of this last gentleman, and one equally acquainted with the laws that govern the hidden heart of this planet, who applied for a patent for boring the earth for artesian wells for purposes of irrigation. He gravely set forth that he had made the discovery that quicksilver was heavier than common earth. He therefore proposed to start a hole, and to empty into it a little mercury. By the laws of nature that mercury would be sure to work its way downward till it struck water, and the water would then be sure to work its way upward till it struck air.

Should it be said that such patents as this last, as that for the prevention of cows switching their tails, for artificial moons, for plows doing the work of cannon, etc., must be jokes, we can only reply that shrewd Yankees are not wont to pay $5 even for practical jokes, and that none of these designs have culminated into patents under less than that sum, and when attorneys were employed, under double and quadruple that sum.—Appleton's Journal.

HERE is the ground-work for a first-class novel. A blind man was crossing Regent street, when he was on the point of being run over by a reckless hansom cab-driver, and at the risk of her own life, a beautiful young lady ran to his rescue, and piloted the poor man to the pavement in safety. A rich bachelor saw the transaction, and straitway sought her out, was introduced, courted, proposed, was accepted, and married the heroine without loss of time. The effect of this has been wonderful. Hopeful young ladies can be seen standing in the vicinity of street-crossings, with one eye searching for stray blind men, and the other on the lookout for a rich bachelor; for it would be an awful bore if they should tackle the old man and have the bachelor nowhere around.
