LITERARY NOTES.

"Sermons preached in English Churches," by the Rev. Phillips Brooks, will be published in September by E. P. Dutton & Co., simultaneously with its appearance in England. The same firm will also publish "The Life and Achievements of Edward Henry Palmer," by Walter Besant, the well-known English novelist.

For young people Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons announce "Plutarch for Boys and Girls," selected and edited by Professor John S. White. The book will be in quarto form with large type and is to have many illustrations.

Henry Holt & Co. have in preparation two novels by new American authors. One will be "anonymous" and in all probability the names of both authors will be withheld. These will be the only novels of American origin which Messrs. Holt & Co. have issued for many years.

"Among the Mongols on Missions" and "Eastern Women on Missions" will be issued by A. D. F. Randolph & Co. in a few weeks.

Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co. have in preparation "Travels in the Soudan Country," by F. L. James. The book is a narrative of the experiences of three journeys to the Soudan and will contain forty original full-page engravings on wood. Miss Lucy M. Mitchell's "History of Sculpture" will be published in a few weeks.

Harper & Brothers' autumn publications will contain, among other works, "What Social Classes Owe to Each Other," by William Graham Sumner, Professor of Political and Social Science in Yale College; "French and German Socialism in Modern Times," by Richard I. Ely, Ph. D., Associate Professor of Political Economy in the Johns Hopkins University; and "Old Mexico and her Lost Provinces," by William Henry Bishop.

General Cesnola is pushing forward his large three volume work on the Cyprus collection which Osgood & Co. are to publish, illustrated with elaborate plates plain and in color. The attacks made on this collection last year retarded subscriptions, but they have since been received more rapidly and the list is now nearly full. People who once thought the collection might have been overvalued are reassured by the recent growl of the London Saturday Review which said:

"Lord Beaconsfield's Government, before annexing Cyprus, let the Cypriote collection of General Cesnola to be sold to America for a song. The Americans are now deprecating the value of their purchase; we wish they would sell it back at cost price. It is a matter of taste; but one single gem, an emerald engraved with the story of Boreas and Orithyia, seemed to us as desirable as even the Ashburnham manuscript decorated by the pencil of Perugino and his great contemporaries. However, it is idle to make these comparisons with accuracy, because the country has lost the treasures which it would have been a pleasure to compare—the finest works of the generation before Phidias and of the generation before Raffaelle. They are most probably going into the possession of people who do not yet seem quite capable of understanding the measure of their own good fortune."

M. Emile Ollivier, who aspires to be at once politician, author, journalist and musician, is about to come before the public as the author of a pamphlet treating of the leading questions that have arisen in France between the Church and the State. Some of the questions thus treated are the suspension of the salaries of the Church officials and the character of the books to be used in the schools. The title of the pamphlet will be: "Is the Concordat Respected?" and from M. Ollivier's past position will probably attract considerable notice in France. He is understood to take a position of violent hostility to the present Government.

BLAINE'S FORTHCOMING BOOK.

From a New-York Letter to The Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"What is the largest number of copies you have sold of a single book?" I asked Mr. Haskell, the active manager of the company.

"Four hundred thousand of 'A History of the Bible,'" he replied.

"And how large a sale do you anticipate for Mr. Blaine's 'Twenty Years in Congress?'"

"Easily a million. Here is a book," he continued, taking down a small ledger from a shelf near at hand, "that contains every post office district in the United States, arranged alphabetically. This table gives the population, and this contains the name of our agent. Every canvasser is expected to take so many subscribers in his district. He reports weekly to us in this printed form, showing the number of orders received. If we think he is not pushing enough we dispossess him and give his field to another. According to our latest reports we have already received 50,000 subscribers to Mr. Blaine's book.

"I saw Mr. Blaine in Augusta last week," said Mr. Haskell. "He is hard at work. Some of the chapters last written, notably a monograph on the Western campaigns of Lincoln and Douglas, surpass any he has yet written. His style seems to gain in force and finish as he proceeds. Undoubtedly many of his partisan admirers will be disappointed with his impartiality especially if they look for personal antagonisms and predilections to be represented in the pages of his narrative. But the history will be the gainer, and he is thus making a permanent contribution to the literature of this country."

As an instance of this wise elimination of prejudice from his work, Mr. Haskell quoted a remark of Mr. Blaine, brought out by a question of the portraits to accompany the text. The principal Congressmen, from 1860 to 1880, will be fully represented in steel engravings. The publisher was regretting that the great State of New-York furnished no representative name worthy to be honored in this manner. "You forget Mr. Roscoe Conkling," said Mr. Blaine quickly. "But Mr. Conkling," put in the publisher deprecatingly. "Don't 'out' Mr. Conkling," interrupted Mr. Blaine, rising to his feet and with a ring in his voice; "Roscoe Conkling is the brain of New-York to-day as he has been for twenty years past. The history of Congress would be incomplete without his name and services, and I intend as far as it lies with me to do his career full historical justice." Mr. Blaine's book will be adorned with a fine engraving of his most inveterate political enemy. I suppose this is only justice, but it savors of magnanimity.

NEW-YORK MILITARY ACADEMY.
FORT WASHINGTON, N. Y.
Established 1854.
Superintendent—JOHN B. HAYS, M. D.
REOPENS SEPT. 4, 1883.
A Boarding School of the highest grade, whose three-fold end, and scrupulously followed, is to mould, at an early age, the intellect of youth by science, the will by obedience, and the feelings by religion; never separating these three great requisites, instruction, discipline, religion, while fitting for every profession.
Situated on Washington Heights, about ten miles up the Hudson, it is reached by the Sixth Avenue Elevated Road to 155th-st. Carriages are always in waiting, or, by timely notification, the superintendent meets the arrival of any train.
A more beautiful and healthy place—on an eminence commanding the most delightful scenery—or more attractive surroundings, are not found along the far-famed banks of the Hudson. Its buildings are unusually homelike.
There are forty acres of land attached to it, shaded and intersected by oak groves, affording ample space for play grounds.
French, German and Spanish spoken.
