THE HAWAIIAN GAZETTE.

A WEEKLY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO HAWAIIAN PROGRESS.

VOL. XI,---NO. 30. HONOLULU, WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, 1875. WHOLE NO. 550.

Our Gipsy.

Two inches upon full of unbridled fun,
Curls all tangled and snarled into one,
Sunburned face, merry, dimpled and sweet,
Wise mouthes, pattering, bare brown feet,
Chubby hands grasping her bonnet strings,
As back and forth on the gate she swings.

With wondering glance she is trying her best
To learn how to fashion a pretty nest,
Like that she robbed last long main
Are building down by the garden gate;
Her voice full of music, clear and strong,
Trying to mimic the wild bird's song.

Now she is off for a race with old Pomp!
Away they go in a scampering romp!
The hoop of forgotten, the kings adds,
Mamma, the shaggy old dog for a ride,
Chickens, sunflowers, daughtlins—and yet
A darling, a sunbeam, our household pet.

—Little Corporal.

Variety.

Light headed—A street lamp.

A Fast Friend—The telegraph.

Where to Go when Short of Money—Go to work.

Female Suffrage—A No. 16 corset on a No. 20 woman.

Man's greatest enemy is the wine-glass; woman's, the looking-glass.

One fellow we know is a three-handed man,—right hand, left hand, and behind hand.

What is defeat? Nothing but education—nothing but the first step to something better.

Pillows, though not belonging to the human species, come under the head of rational beings.

Insults are like counterfeit money; we cannot hinder their being offered, but we are not compelled to take them.

"Any letters for Mike Howe?" asked an individual of a clerk at a post-office window.

"No letters here for anybody's cow."

Jim Bunyan says:—"There is something about dogs I never could get used to." We don't know, but we suppose Jim means fleas.

The latest instance of like curing like is the announcement by a Western veterinary surgeon that brandy is a remedy for the "staggers."

A young lady, being asked by a rich old bachelor, "If not yourself, who would you rather be?" replied, sweetly and modestly, "Yours truly."

Alex. Stephens says that the next President of the United States will be a journalist. Very likely—about—several parties have spoken to us—that is——says Lewis.

"Captain," said a son of Erin, as the ship was nearing the coast in inclement weather, "have ye an almanik on board?"—"No, I haven't." "Then, be jabbers, we shall have to take the weather as it comes."

Jones to Smith:—"I haven't slept a wink all night. I owe Brown $300, can't pay him and have walked my room all night."—Smith to Jones;—"You're a fool; why didn't you let Brown do the walking? That his business."

"What's your business?" asked the Judge of a prisoner at the bar. "Well, s'pose you might call me a locksmith."—"When did you last work at your trade?"—"Last night; when I heard a call for the police, I made a bolt for the door."

"That clock, stranger," said a Michigan farmer, "was the best kind of a clock up to six months ago, when my daughter began to have beaux; and now the blamed thing is always two hours too slow."

One clergyman said to another:—"The sexton wakes up any man he finds asleep in the church." The other answered, "It would be much better, brother, whenever the sexton found anybody asleep under your preaching, to wake you up.

Visitor—"Well, Mrs. Flannegan, what did the doctor say about your poor husband's deafness?" Mrs. F.—"Bedad, Miss, the doctor says Tim will never hear again; but (whispers) please don't speak loud, it might make him depressed loike."

People are always talking of perseverance, and courage, and fortitude; but patience is the finest and worthiest part of fortitude, and the rarest, too. I have known twenty persevering girls to one patient one, but it is only the twenty-first one who can do her work, out and out, and enjoy it. For patience lies at the root of all pleasures as well as of all powers.

It is easy for the man of a loose, careless, unholding memory, to forgive; it is a very difficult for a person of steadfast memory to forgive; I quite understand the saying of Queen Elizabeth to the Countess of Nottingham, "God may forgive you; I cannot." Elizabeth had a very pert memory. To such persons the original injury comes back years after with the freshness of feeling as on the day upon which it was endured; while to the persons of poor memory, the original transaction comes back in a very blurred and indistinct manner.

Most of the failures in life arise from an ignorance of how and when to leave off. When you read the life of almost any great man, with the exception of Augustus Cæsar, you see how much greater a man he would have been if he had known how and when to leave off. Although it may be a trivial thing to mention, the art of leaving off is not less requisite in courtship than in other and more important transactions of human life. How many a man has failed to make himself happy or miserable ever afterward because he has made too much of a slight advantage, or pressed too far a small encouragement.

The New York Commercial Advertiser tells about the Maid and the Mongolian:

A maid heard, "Mongolians are meek,"
So she sailed off to China to seek
And find whether she Could n't marry a he
Tea-drinker, or a mandarin meek.

She found a gay heathen—Fing-Wi,
A chap who stood seven feet high.
Says she, "Gracious! what fun!
Oh, you son of a son
Of a gun, come and marry sweet I."

Something must have bothered the sight
Of one eye, as he whispered, "All right,
Maybee high old gallee!
Oh! Hankee Dorre!
Me no workee! you washee! all right!"

Then soft to herself said she, "Nay,
Civilization has traveled this way."
So, taking her hat,
She got up and got,
And is still going East, I dare say.

Scientific Notes.

A writer in the Educational Monthly says that if a thin section of coal be macerated in a solution of saleratus, and afterwards washed and submitted to the action of nitric acid, to remove mineral impurities, the microscope will show that it is made up of vegetable cells. They usually show no sign of structure but occasionally fragments of old logs have been found. The change from wood to coal, in some instances, is not complete, as woody fibre has been detected by the iodine test.

TEMPERATURE OF THE STARS.—The spectroscope, in revealing the constituents of the stars whose light it analyses, also indicates a difference in the temperature of different stars—a fact not so well known. According to a well-known astronomer, there appeared to be three general classes of stars with reference to temperature; those in which the metals are detected, which are not so hot as the first class; and those in which the metalloids are found, which have a still lower temperature.

In the early part of the siege of Metz foraging parties brought in great quantities of vine leaves from the surrounding vineyards, on which they fed their horses. The leaves were eaten with avidity, and the horses grew fat and sleek—much better in condition than those fed on hay and straw. This has led to a chemical analysis of vine leaves, and it is found that a very large quantity of cane-sugar and glucose exists in the tissue.

Mr. George Smith of the British Museum has recently examined some of the tablets found by him at Kouyunjik and now in the above building. They form parts of a continuous series of legends giving the history of the world from the Creation down to some period after the fall of man, with a number of incidents and explanations as to the origin of evil, the fall of the angels, the wickedness of the serpent, &c., which are not included in the Mosiac account. There is also another series of legends of primitive history, including the story of the building of the Tower of Babel and the Confusion of Tongues. Mr. Smith intends to publish a translation of the legends.

BELLS AND AGE.—A fiddle improves by age and use; a piano does not, neither does a bell. There is, perhaps, a slight improvement for the first few years, but afterwards the quality deteriorates. Metal, we know, is altered by repeated and long continued hammering. Thump a piece of iron, and you change the quality of its magnetism; the shock of the waves modifies the magnetism of an iron ship; and some of the music is knocked out of a bell by long continued use of the clapper. A peculiar effect is noticed in the bell of Cripplegate Church when it strikes twelve. The first two strokes are distinct and clear, then a discord begins, which accumulates with every stroke, until with the eleventh and twelfth a complete double sound is produced.—Chalmers' Journal.

CURIOUS.—In the 20th year of Queen Elizabeth, a blacksmith, Mark Scaliot, made a lock consisting of eleven pieces of iron, steel, and brass, all of which, together with a key, weighed but one grain of gold. He also made a chain of gold, consisting of forty-three links, and having fastened this to the before-mentioned lock and key, he put the chain about the neck of a flea, which drew them all with ease. All these together, lock and key, chain and flea, weighed only 1½ grain. Oswaldus Norbingerus, who was more famous even than Scaliot for his minute contrivances, is said to have made 1,600 dishes of turned ivory, all perfect and complete in every part, yet so small, thin and slender, that all of them were included at once in a cup turned out of a pepper-corn of the common size. Johannes Shad, of Mitelbrach, carried this wonderful work with him to Rome and showed it to Pope Paul V., who saw and counted them all by the help of a pair of spectacles. They were so small as to be almost invisible to the eye. Johannes Ferrarius, a Jesuit, had in his possession cannons of wood, with their carriages, wheels, and all other military furniture, all of which were also contained in a peppercorn of the ordinary size. An artist named Claudius Gallus made for Hippolytus d'Este, Cardinal of Ferrara, representations of sundry birds sitting on the tops of trees, which by hydraulic art and secret conveyance of water to the trunks and branches of the trees, were made to sing and clap their wings, but at the sudden appearance of an owl out of a bush of the same artifice, they immediately became all mute.

TIME FOR READING.—"I have no time to read" is the common complaint, especially of women, whose occupations are such as to prevent continuous book perusal. They seem to think, because they cannot devote as much attention to books as they are compelled to devote to their avocations, that they cannot read anything. But this is a great mistake. It isn't the books we finish at a sitting which always do us the most good. Those we devour in the odd moments, half a dozen pages at a time, often gives us more satisfaction and are more thourghly digested than those we make a particular effort to read. The men who have made their mark in the world have generally been the men who have in boyhood orned the habit of reading at every available moment, whether for five minutes or five hours. It is the habit of reading rather than the time at our command that helps us on the road to learning. Many of the most cultivated persons, whose names have been most famous as students, have given only two or three hours a day to their books. If we make use of spare minutes in the midst of our work, and read a little, if but a page or a paragraph, we shall find our brains quickened and our toil lightened by just so much increased satisfaction as the book gives us. Nothing helps along the monotonous daily round so much as fresh and striking thoughts, to be considered while our hands are busy. A new thought from a new volume is like oil which reduces the friction of the machinery of life. What we remember from brief glimpses into books often serves as a stimulus action, and becomes one of the most precious deposits in the treasury of our recollection. All knowledge is made of small parts, which would seem insignificant in themselves, but which, taken together, are valuable weapons for the mind and substantial armor for the soul. "Read anything continuously," says Dr. Johnson, "and you will be learned." The odd minutes which we are inclined to waste, if carefully availed of for instruction, will, in the long run, make golden hours and golden days that we shall be ever thankful for.
