Euphrosyne.

I must not say that she was true,
Yet let me say that she was fair;
And they, that lovely face who view,
They should not ask if truth be there.

Truth—what is truth? Two bleeding hearts
Wounded by men, by fortune tried,
Outwearied with their lonely parts,
Vow to beat henceforth side by side.

The world to them was stern and drear,
Their lot was but to weep and mourn;
Ah, let them keep their faith sincere,
For neither could subsist alone.

On one she smiled, and he was blest;
She smiles elsewhere—we make a sin!
But 'twas not love that heaved her breast,
Fair child!—it was the bliss within.

Matthew Arnold.

Miscellaneous.

Modesty has great advantages. It enhances beauty and serves as a veil to uncomeliness.

To prevent butter from sticking to the ladle dip the ladle first in hot water and then in cold.

Machine oil stains can be removed if, before washing, the spot is rubbed with a cloth wet with ammonia.

While her mother was taking a fly out of the butter, little Daisy asked: "Is that a butterfly, mamma?"

Stoves may be kept looking nice for some time by rubbing them thoroughly with a newspaper every day.

The smallest pony known, is the pet of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts-Bartlett. The pony stands only thirteen inches high, and is five years of age.

"And what is this animal called?" asked the teacher of the class in natural history, as he pointed to a picture of a sloth. And the class all shouted at once, "A messenger boy!"

"What is true bravery?" asks a New York paper. It is going to the front door yourself, when you don't know whether the caller is a dear friend, a book agent, or a man with a bill.

The Republic of Guatemala has engaged a Ceylon planter to introduce into that country 500,000 cinchona trees, for obtaining Peruvian bark, from which is distilled the salts known as quinine.

A Pittsburg girl who had refused a good-looking telegraph repairer man three times within six months, gave as a reson that he was too much of a wanderer; that he roamed from pole to pole, from one climb to another, and, if he did come, he'd be insulate that the neighbors would be sure to talk.

A young fowl may be known before plucking by the largness of the feet and leg joints; after plucking, a thin neck and violet thighs may be taken as invariable signs of age and toughness, especially in turkeys and fowls. The age of ducks and geese is tested by their beaks, the lower part of which breaks away quite easily when they are young.

Mme. Leonie Leon has in her possession a series of letters upon political events for the last ten years, which M. Gambetta wrote to her from day to day. It seems that he used to write to her every evening when they were separated from each other, and to describe minutely all that had taken place. According to the Figaro, this new "Journal to Stella," is expected to see the light of no very distant day.

A good-looking Sixth avenue girl, whose lover lately asked her in the tenderest tones why it was she was so magnetic, explained the phenomenon by informing him that her mother and father were both telegraph operators.

During the last illness of the famous Curran, some one told him that he seemed to cough with more difficulty than on the previous day.

"Do I?" said Curran. "That's odd enough; I've been practicing all night!"

The Freie Presse of San Antonio, Texas, tells, of a species of ants found in that state which make a honey equal to any that is produced by bees. The little insects store the honey as they gather it in pouches about the size of a small pea that is attached to their bodies. When this pouch is full they march into the cells of their subterranean habitations and there unload. The Press says that these ant hills are as full of honey as bee hives, and suggests that they could be turned to the same practical food-producing use if similar care were taken in breeding and cultivating the insects.

The best food for hens to make them lay in the winter is wheat varied with corn-meal and mixed into mush, with scalded skimmed milk, sweet or sour, and given hot. On such food, with warmed water to drink and a tight, sunny, warm and clean house, a small flock of 20 Light Brahma hens last winter laid from 12 to 15 eggs a day. It is hardly possible for food to do more than that. They had a run over the fields and yard when the ground was bare of snow, and picked a good deal of grass. The quantity of food given was three quarts daily. Good wheat is better than screenings and cheaper in the end.

A young lady who thought her personal charms gave her the right to be disagreeable was present a few nights since at party, during which quarrels between husband and wife were discussed. "I think," said the unmarried elder son who was present, "that the proper thing is for the husband to have it out at once, and thus avoid quarrels for the future I would light a cigar in the carriage after the wedding breakfast and settle the smoking question forever." "I would knock the cigar out of your mouth," interrupted the belle. "Do you know, I don't think you would be there!" quietly remarked the elder son.

Lighting gas with the finger is a feat anybody may perform. Let a person, in his slippers, walk briskly over a woolen carpet, scuffling his feet thereon, or stand upon a chair, with its legs upon four tumblers to insulate it, and be there rubbed up and down on the body a few times with a muff, by a second individual, and he will light his gas by simply placing his finger to the tube. It is only necessary to take the precaution not to touch anything or to be touched by anybody during the trial of the experiment. The shock of electricity acquired by the process we have described is discharged by contact with another object. One person must turn on the gas while the other fires it.

The repute of "thieves' vinegar" as a prophylactic in contagious fevers is said to have arisen from the confession of four thieves, who during the plague at Marseilles, plundered the dead bodies with perfect security, and, upon being arrested, on condition of their lives being spared, stated that the use of aromatic vinegar had preserved them from the influence of contagion. It is on this account sometimes called "Le vinaigre dose quarte voleurs." It was, however, used long before the plague of Marseilles, for it was the constant custom of Cardinal Wolsey to carry in his hand an orange deprived of its contents and filled with a sponge which had been soaked in vinegar impregnated with various spices, in order to preserve himself from infection when passing through the crowds which his splendor or office attracted. The first plague raged in 1619, whereas Wolsey died in 1531.

Gallantry awakens early in the breasts of some Boston boys: A lady in that city has a class in the Sunday School of one of the leading churches, the membership of which consists of boys who are each about eight years of age. Like most youngsters, they are of too exuberant spirits to keep altogether as quiet as the demands of the school require, and are prone to become restless and noisy at times. Last Sunday one of them was particularly uneasy, when the teacher, thinking to shame him into quiet, said: "Now, George, I don't know what I shall do with you if you are so noisy, I am afraid I shall have to punish you, and think the best way to do so would be to make you sit in my lap." "Ah," said the young scapegrace, with an arch look; "if you should do that, Mrs.——, I think you would find the whole class getting noisy."

Viewed through the microscope the mosquito presents a picture of mechanical ingenuity as marvelous in execution as it is devilish in design. In the bill alone, which seems so fragile to the unaided sight, there is a combination of five distinct surgical implements. These are a lance, two meat saws, and a suction pump. The fifth instrument I have forgotten, but labor under the impressica that it is a portable Corliss engine to run the rest of the factory with. I know that the hum of the mosquitoes in the cottonwood thickets along the Lower Mississippi reminded me constantly of the hum of a manufacturing village, and several times I walked back several miles looking for a town before I could convince myself that the buzzing I heard was made by the mosquitoes, with their engines running to sharpen their saws. When the insects operate on a man, the lance is first pushed into the flesh, when the two saws, placed back to back, begin to work up and down to enlarge the hole. Then the pump is started and the victims blood is syphoned up into the reservoir carried behind, and finally, to complete the cruelty of the performance, the wretch drops a quantity of poison into the wound to keep it irritated.

IDLE GOSSIP.

THERE IS NO IDLE GOSSIP HOWever, that the undersigned will take Portraits in any style or views to order in the best style of the Photographic Art, and on the most Reasonable Terms—but it is idle gossip which says "he will not try to please," for he always was and will be willing to please everyone who can be called; and never treated anyone out of the way, and never will treat anyone otherwise than in a proper manner. Do not listen to gossip, but come and see for yourself—there is always two sides to a story. (999 3m) H. L. CHASE.
