CHATTANOOGA:

TUESDAY MORNING, DEC. 9, 1862.

THE SITUATION.

We have stirring news from the vicinity of our army at and around Murfresboro. Since our last issue, there has been a general movement of the troops towards Nashville. Hardee's corps, from Shelbyville, advanced on Saturday to Trinne, a small village about 20 miles from Nashville with an excellent turnpike road leading into the city. Simultaneously with this movement, Gen Kirby Smith's corps, heretofore stationed at Manchester, advanced to Reedyville, a short distance from Murfreesboro, and is destined, so we are informed, for Lebanon. The whole army was in motion and at last accounts skirmishing had commenced between Nashville and Murfreesboro. It is the opinion of some here, that Nashville is to be invested on all sides. Our line of battle now extends from Franklin, in Williamson county, eighteen miles south of Nashville, to Lebanon, the county seat of Wilson, about thirty miles north east of that city. Morgan we understand is to operate on the Louisville and Nashville Road.

This movement of our army would seem to indicate that General Jo. Johnston, has determined to lay seige to the beautiful capital of Tennessee, but we are of opinion that such is not his attention. If the forces under Rosecrans could be induced to come into the level plains around Lavergne, or any where between Murfreesboro and Nashville, our army would doubtless engage them in battle. Otherwise we do not believe a general engagement of the two armies is imminent. If Gen. Johnston can invest the city and cut off the enemy's communication with the North, he may force him to give battle, or, else re-enact the retrogade movement, which has already cost one Federal commander in the department of Kentucky and Tennessee his commission. We shall await future development from that quarter, with no little interest.

Apart from the stirring scenes about to be enacted in the vicinity of our own capital—two other great battles are imminent—one in North Mississippi and the other in Virginia. The recent removal of Burnside from the army of the Potomac, was evidently to satisfy the public clamor at the North for an immediate advance upon Richmond. There is no doubt that the new commander will be compelled by the same pressure to march the Federal army of the Potomac forward—in which event its inevitable destruction is bound to be the result. Nevertheless, Hooker is one of those sort of individuals to "obey orders if it breaks owners."

In Mississippi, the second great encounter of opposing forces is likely, at any moment, to occur. The enemy are reported to be moving one column of thirty-five thousand men South from Corinth, while another force of thirty thousand is probably by this time at Grenada. These two columns are doubtless intended to co-operate with each other, possibly to form a junction somewhere in the vicinity of Jackson.

We congratulate the country that there is at length a prospect for some improvement in the management of our present system of transportation by railroad throughout the Confederacy. The following dispatch, giving notice to Railroad Presidents and Superintendents in the Confederate States, to meet at Augusta, on the 15th, has been received from Richmond:

RICHMOND, Dec. 4, 1862.

Having been appointed Assistant Adjutant General, and assigned to the special duty of superintending and directing Government transportation by railroads, I desire a conference with the Presidents and Superintendents of all the railroads in the Confederate States at Augusta, Georgia, on the 15th day of December, inst.

WM. M. WADLEY,
A. A. G., P. A. C. S.

We sincerely hope the railroad managers everywhere in the South will be punctual in attending this meeting at the time specified. We are exceeding glad that the Government has at last hit upon a system through which the outrageous delays and shameful failures in the transportation of necessaries to the army, which has characterized the management of our Southern railroads, since the war began, may be remedied. It is full time that some steps should be taken in this matter. The Press has neglected heretofore to make complaint, and has forborne to condemn the mismanagement of our transportation system, until "forbearance has ceased to be a virtue." The railroad companies are amassing fortunes from the public and the Government, and their success seems to have made them indifferent as to whether the trains are put in motion or not. Schedules seem to have become obsolete, and "irregularity" appears to be the chief end and object and the watchword of a latter-day railroad corporation.

In the general confusion attending the movement of our armies, and amid the bustle and tumult of revolution, when every one connected with so important a department should redouble his energies and tax his brain to the utmost to further the ends of our cause, the railroad officials, from President to engine stoker, seem to have grown apathetic and aggravatingly "slow." A thousand frivolous excuses are put forward, and the cry of "no more trains" and "scarcity of transportation facilities," are known to be much exaggerated.

We reiterate our congratulations to the community at large, and especially to the suffering troops of our armies, that an energetic agent of the Government has been appointed to superintend and direct our transportation, and it is the duty of all the railroad authorities to lend him every assistance in their power. In no other way can they so well contribute to the triumph of our arms and to the relief and comfort of their fellow-citizens.

We publish this morning a brief telegraphic synopsis of Lincoln's Message to the Federal Congress, which is certainly enough of it to satisfy us that it must be, in the expressive language of one of the dispatches, "a very sorry document." It was read to the Congress on Monday, the 1st, and occupies seven columns of the New York Times. It opens by saying, "that since the assembling of the last Congress, another year of health and bountiful harvest has passed. While it has not pleased the Almighty to bless the United States with a return of peace, we can but press on, trusting that in God's own good time all will be well." He calls his famous proclamation a contemplated emancipation scheme.

His Excellency Governor Harris has recently entered into a contract with parties at Saltville, Virginia, by which four hundred bushels of salt is being made daily for the use of the people of this State, to be equally distributed among the counties within our lines, according to the population and their necessities. The salt is to be delivered in bulk to agents appointed by the county courts, at points on the nearest lines of railroad to the respective destitute, and the distribution will be made to the people by the railroad agents, who will be responsible for the same. The cost of the salt will be one dollar and seventy five cents per bushel, including freight charges and transportation and Dr. Jno. Bell, Q. M. General of the State, a gentleman of sound discretion and superior business capacity, has been appointed to superintend the salt distribution.

Nothing could be more acceptable to the people of Tennessee than an arrangement of this sort, at this time. The farmers, especially, above all others in the community, are suffering for the want of this most essential product. The season for hog slaughtering and pork packing has fairly set in, and many are positively unable to kill for the want of salt for curing purposes. There are many persons in various portions of the State who are unable to procure enough salt for cooking purposes and for table uses, while those, even, who are fortunate enough, or, rather, unfortunate enough to get it, are compelled to pay the exorbitant price of the extortioner, as was evidenced in the transactions of a dealer in this city a few days ago, who held his salt at the enormous rate of one hundred and two dollars per sack!

And while on this subject, we desire to enter a protest against the transportation of salt over our roads for individual speculators, to the exclusion of the salt intended for general distribution among our people. We cannot understand, why the salt designed for county distribution is not received here by the distributing agents, when private speculators and soulless extortioners can receive it by the car load.

☞ The Yankees call the soldiers of our army "seedy." From the way their Generals are superceded of late we incline to the belief that they are getting super-seedy.

☞ The dignity of a good many "Staff officers" is so unbending, they would be more appropriately denominated "Stiff officers."

"GENERAL ORDERS, No. 25."—Orders for breakfast at a hotel; it takes just that many to get it.

LEAVES AS THICK AS THOSE IN VALLAMBROSA.—Leaves of absence to line officers.

"POETRY OF MOTION."—Promotion on the field.

☞ The Montgomery Theatre opened on the night of the 5th, with a full corps dramatique, in Coleman's Tragedy of the Iron Chest.

☞ The much talked of Confederate Armada, is not iron-plated—as yet it is only contemplated.

☞ The "Index," is the title of a new first class weekly journal, the publication of which has recently commenced in London. So far it has proved a success, and is beginning to wield no little influence in the political circles of Great Britain. The chief spirit of the Index, is a young gentleman, of Mobile, Mr. HENRY HOZIE, formerly an attache of Mr. Forsythe's paper, the Register. Mr. HOZIE, we believe is a native of Switzerland. He was formerly connected with a newspaper in Montgomery and afterwards removed to Mobile, and was engaged on the Register and Advertiser, of that city. He entered the Confederate service, but was afterwards despatched to England in the service of our government, as a commissioner or kind of envoy to the court of the English press. "No man," says the Mobile Register, "was better fitted for the task by his energy, his extensive political and historical reading and his zeal as a missionary of the Confederate cause. It would have been money well expended had the Government devoted a fund to sustain the sterling organ which that gentleman has established at the centre of English intelligence. In the absence of this, it is fortunate for our cause that a Mobile gentleman has been found both able and willing to furnish the most of the capital that supported it."

The editorial sanctum of the "Index," has become the focus and rendezvous of Southerners in London. Among the contributors and leader-writers for this paper are two English gentlemen, J. B. HOPKINS and PERCY GREGG, Esqrs. The first named gentleman has recently written an introduction to the "South Vindicated," by Gen. Williams, a book just published in London in magnificent style and well received. This work, as some of our readers will remember, was first published under the title of "Letters During the Presidential Canvass of 1860, in Nashville," by James Williams, late United States Minister to Constantinople, and was the first book copy-righted under the Confederate States.

☞ A gentleman at Grenada, previous to the evacuation of that place by our troops, informs the Jackson Mississippian, that the preparations for evacuating the place were hurried and confused, illustrating a miniature Nashville panic. It is said that cars were drawn off empty, while a considerable amount of Government stores were left to fall into the hands of the enemy.

☞ The Chicago Times says that Gen. McClernand's grand Mississippi army will be divided into three corps d'armee. Major General Sumner will command the right wing, Major General Walcott the centre, and Major General Frank the left wing. The army will be organized and ready to move about the 5th of December.

A clergyman Rev. John Williams, recently in Houston, England, has just been convicted of poaching, and sentenced to pay a fine.

☞ In exchange of hats and umbrellas, &c., we generally find that he who makes the first move has the advantage.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF TENNESSEE,
Murfreesboro, Nov. 29th, 1862.

General Order, No. 4.

Gratified beyond expression at the confident tone and fine discipline which pervades his troops, and full of admiration at their fortitude and patient submission to privations, united with their gallantry and heroism in the recent arduous and brilliant campaign, by which so much valuable territory has been redeemed and so many true and loyal people liberated, the General Commanding is induced to publish a full pardon to all soldiers absent without authority who shall within a reasonable time return to their commands and report for duty.

They are urged at once to avail themselves of this privilege before the inauguration of the new system of Military Courts established by law, as a vigorous and prompt administration of justice will be meted out to all delinquents. Thereafter, no excuse will be allowed those who abandon their colors and leave their comrades to perform their duties and defend their homes.

Commissioned officers guilty of such offences are excluded from the benefit of this amnesty, and will not be excused. They are held to be unworthy to command gallant men, and to merit exemplary punishment. Vigorous measures have been adopted to arrest all who fail to respond to this last and generous appeal, and they must expect full justice tempered only with the mercy they have failed to show either to their comrades or their cause.

By command of Gen. Bragg.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT No. 2,
TULLAHOMA, Nov 17, 1862.

General Orders, No. 140.

The General Commanding announces with pain, the shameful fact, that numerous officers and soldiers are absent from this army without leave or sanction. This evil so injurious to the service, and discreditable to those who wearing the uniform of the Confederate States, are now living in ease and idleness instead of sharing the common perils and duties of their companions in arms, must be arrested. Such cases neglection of duty whilst in the presence of an active and powerful enemy, calls not only for release from the Commanding General, but also for efficient measures on the part of the citizens of the South to secure the return of such delinquents to their commands.

The Commanding General orders that all officers who continue to be absent without leave shall be brought before the "EXAMINING BOARD" authorized by an act of Congress, entitled "An act to relieve the Army of disqualified, disabled and incompetent officers," in order that their names may be dropped from the rolls of the Army whose glory they wish to reflect but whose dangers and toils they are unwilling to encounter.

II. All soldiers who continue absent will be treated as deserters and punished as such.

By command of Gen. Bragg.
