Coastwise Ship Lines Gain by Railway Strike

Increase in Traffic Reported by Principal Concerns; Shippers Seek Routes to West Free of All Delays

Freight traffic between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts is going to the water routes in an increasing proportion, due partly to delays in rail transportation caused by the shop and coal strikes, and to a larger extent to the reduction of fifty per cent in rates since the beginning of the ocean war. Officials of the principal lines in the intercoastal trade said yesterday that there had been a marked gain in the last few weeks, but that the tendency of rates still was downward.

Christian J. Beck, freight traffic manager for the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, said that shipments over his line "show a very material increase." In his opinion this is due to the ability of the company, which caused the collapse of the Atlantic Intercoastal Conference by its resignation, to meet its competitors without restrictions. He pointed out that as a result of the decline in water rates, the ship lines were able to attract shipments from farther inland on the Atlantic coast and send them a greater distance inland on the Pacific. Railroad difficulties, especially in the West, Mr. Beck said, undoubtedly had aided this trend.

Mr. Beck was asked if the line would be represented at Washington next Thursday, when the Shipping Board holds a hearing on the protest of the shipowners against the government competition in the intercostal trade. He answered that it would if invited, but that he had heard nothing from the board.

Southern Pacific officials said that there had been a slight increase in southbound business, but traffic to the North practically was unchanged. The rail strike apparently had made no difference in passenger travel, it was said.

At the Mallory line offices it was said that there was an improvement in both North and South bound commerce, due largely to the crops now beginning to move in the South.

Isthmian Line officials acknowledged an increase recently, but attributed this to the wider territory drawn upon since the decline in rates.

At the North Atlantic and Western Steamship Company, attention was directed to a greater proportion of shipments coming from the Pacific to Atlantic ports. Normally, it was said, the westbound traffic runs about 25 per cent higher, but the volume is about the same both ways at present.

U. S. Sues to Foreclose Mortgage on Shipyards

The government to-day brought suit in Federal Court at Newark, to foreclose a mortgage for $1,337,000 against the Standard Shipbuilding Company and the Shooters Island Shipyard Company. The loan was made by the government in April, 1920, to enable completion of ships which were under construction on Shooters Island, which is near Staten Island.

The loan was to have been paid back in five annual installments, but the government alleges defaults in the 1921 and 1922 payments.

The United States Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporations were named co-defendants as the agencies which negotiated the mortgage, and three individuals, Albert Conway and W. A. Young, of New York, and Alfred A. Stein, of Elizabeth, were made defendants as receivers for the Shooters Island Shipyards.

New Steamer Launched For German Lloyd Line

The North German Lloyd Steamship Company announced receipt of information yesterday from Danzig of the successful launching of a new 32,000-ton ship August 8. This vessel, the Columbus, will be placed in the regular service of the company between New York and Bremen.

The Columbus stuck on the ways several weeks ago when the first attempt to launch her was made. Tugs were used in efforts to get her safely into the water, but failed.

Under the new contract negotiated between the United States Lines and the North German Lloyd the Columbus probably will be operated on alternate sailings with the Leviathan.
