VOL. XX.---No. 21. | HONOLULU, WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1885. | WHOLE No. 1063.

When the Sea gives up Her dead.

I am looking back through the days and weeks
That lie in the shadowy land of yore,
As awaiting spirit stirs and speaks,
The spirit of dead years gone before.

Speaks with a murmur of mournful sighs,
In a voice that carries the sound of tears—
And lighting the lamps in its passionate eyes,
It opens the charnel of the buried years.

The wind is blowing up from the world;
The stars are sinking down on the sea;
But the wind is black and the light is cold,
And the only of pain they speak to me.

For the wind once toyed with a silken tress,
And the stars once shone on a saintly face;
And how can a faithful love grow less?
Or a new love take the old love's place.

The sea is swirling up to my feet,
Singing to mournly, soft and low;
But the song of the sea is dreadly sweet,
For I mind how it sang my years ago.

We had been parted, I and she,
With nearly a hundred mile between;
And now she was coming across the sea
(Oh, thenky was blue and the waves were green!)

Coming—and yet she never came!
Meeting—and yet we met no more!
She heard me not when I called her name,
Though the dead might have heard me on that shore.

Oh, love, though my eyes feel dimly now,
There is hope in my pathway where I tread,
That over the sea there will call to me
In the day when the sea gives up her dead.

If the paternal ancestor of your betrothed enters the parlor at 2 a. m., with a double-barreled shot-gun, retire politely. It is not necessary in this case to be formal in making your adieus. All formality may be postponed on account of the weather.

Pius IX. never left his palace after the entry of the Royal troops into the Holy City, and Leo XIII. has followed his predecessor's example. For fourteen years the quaint Papal equipage of white mules and red halberdiers has never once been seen in the streets of Rome.

A lawyer walked down the streets the other day with his arm taxed to hold a lot of law books. "Why, I thought you carried all that stuff in your head!" observed a citizen. "I do," replied the young lawyer, with a knowing wink, "these are for the Judge of the District Court."

New York city has in her schools an average daily attendance of 129,545 pupils, and the whole number of teachers employed, including principals, was 3,152. A regulation has just been adopted by the Board of Education of that city forbidding the employment of married teachers in the schools.

The effects of inhalation of fumes of strong ammonia on the system are deafness and catarrh. In some instances the troubles are very serious indeed. It will induce lung disease if there is any tendency to weakness of the lungs. The most valuable remedy is to inhale the fumes of strong glacial acetic acid, which reacts upon the alkali ammonia.

The celebrated English physiologist, Dr. Carpenter, has proposed a substantially new version of the germ theory of diseases. He believes, from observations based upon the mutability of bacille, that the same germs may produce different constitutions, a theory that is corroborated, is not confirmed, by recent observations, which show that the bacteria of typhoid fever and malaria are of the same description.

Helen of Troy was over 40 when that famous elopement took place. Ten years after, when the fortunes of war restored her to Menelaus, he received her with love and gratitude. Cleopatra was past 30 when she made the conquest of Antony, and Diana de Poictiers at 36 and for many years afterward was considered the most beautiful woman at the court of Henry II. of France. Ninon de l'Enclos received a declaration of love on her 88th birthday.

The Brick, Tile and Metal Review reports a new use of glass for shingles. It is claimed that glass roofing is at once better, more durable and cheaper than slate. The glass is usually opaque, but may be translucent or clear, as desired. The exposed parts of the shingles are corrugated. The shingles lap at the sides, are closely interlocked, and one rivet suffices for a pair of shingles. It takes but 150 of these shingles, 8 by 12 inches, to cover a square of 100 square feet, the waste is so small; whereas of slates of the same size 300 are required.

Poor German tutor—Know you what I do when I hunger have? Then draw I at home on my slate with chalk a' white sausage. When I right severe hunger have, draw I two. Then drink I once from my mug of beer, eat a piece bread and rub from the sausage on the slate a piece away. Then drink I again, eat again a piece of bread and rub again from the slate a piece sausage away—till the last morsel away is. So picture I myself in, I have the sausage really eaten. Behold you, it is all only imagination on the world.

There are, says the American Machinist, 29,227 locomotives of all kinds belonging to the railroads of North America, according to the most reliable official figures. Reckoning the life of a locomotive at twenty-five years, it ought to require the construction of 1169 locomotives annually to maintain the stock of engines. A great many locomotives kept on the motive power list are doubtless out of service; but, making all free allowance for this, the figures indicate that in the last year the renewals of locomotives have been far below the necessary requirements. Many of the engines built do not represent maintenance of stock, but are called for by new roads and extensions.

"And don't you skate little girl?" he asked as he sat down beside her. "Oh, no, sir." "But you can learn." "I guess I could, but I don't want to." "And you come here just to watch the skaters?" "Oh, no; I come to watch Mrs. R." "Who's she?" "She's papa's second wife. He don't want her to come, but she will do it." "And why do you watch her?" "Well, papa wanted her to promise that she wouldn't lean on any body when she was skating with 'em, that she wouldn't flirt when she was resting; but she wouldn't promise, and so I came to watch her. The short marks are when she leans and these long ones when she flirts." "And you show them to your father?" "Yes, and he dates them and puts them away, and by and by he'll have enough to get a divorce on and marry somebody who can't skate."

While experimenting and studying the march of the French soldiers, Mr Marey has demonstrated that low heels have a favorable influence on the pace which a person walks and that the rythm of the step has an important influence on the speed. The rythm was studied by means of an electric bell, actuated by a pendulum of variable length to enable the subject to keep exact time, and the distance traversed was recorded on the odograph by electric signals sent along a wire every fifty meters traversed. It was then found that the length of the step increases until sixty-five steps per minute are taken; it then increases until seventy-five, and afterward decreases as a higher rythm is reached. The speed of travel increases with the acceleration of the rythm up to eighth-five steps per minute, and decreases at higher rythms.
