Deserters Captured.

Two deserters from the ship Iroquois were captured by Captain Hilbus while searching the barkentine Irmgard, preparatory to departure yesterday. They were comfortably stowed away in the hold. Captain Hilbus took them in charge and escorted them to the police station. On the way, one of the men, named McClellan, struck the large glass window on the Nuuanu side of McVeigh's machinery store. The first attempt did not succeed but after punching two or three times he succeeded in breaking the glass. McClellan then showed fight and made as if to attack Captain Hilbus. The latter was too much for him and, taking him by the collar, marched him to the police station without further ado.

The O. S. S. Australia, Houdlette commander, arrived in port at noon yesterday after a trip of seven days and two hours from San Francisco. Following is the purser's report: Experienced for the first forty-eight hours, light NE winds and smooth sea; thence to port light moderate SW winds and fine weather. The Australia brought thirty-one cabin and fifteen steerage passengers together with forty-one bags of mail.

Two days before the Australia arrived in San Francisco on her last trip, three coal passers—John Quinlan, Paul Keuse and Richard Connolly—were ordered to do some work on the donkey boiler, which they refused to do. The men were placed under arrest by Captain Houdlette and turned over to the authorities on the arrival of the Australia in San Francisco. The men claim that they had just come off their watch and the order was an improper one. They also claim that they did not really refuse to do the work, but were considering the matter when placed under arrest. After a hearing before the proper authorities the men were discharged.
