THE DAILY REBEL

INCREASE OF RATES.

Owing to the great advance in the prices of paper, ink, and all other material necessary to the publication of a newspaper, together with the enormous expense of living, we are now reluctantly compelled to increase the rates of the DAILY REBEL. From and after the 1st day of April, the rates of subscription will be as follows:

Terms of Subscription.

Daily Rebel, one year	$12 00
Six Months	7 00
Three Months	4 00
One Month	1 50

Rates of Advertising.

The subscription of the Daily Rebel, first insertion, $1 square, each additional insertion, fifty cents per square.

Contracts for advertisements will be made at the following rates, viz:

One square one month, $8 00
Two squares one month, 15 00
Three squares one month, 20 00
Four squares one month, 25 00
Six squares one month, 30 00
Eight squares one month, 40 00
Twelve squares one month, 50 00
Sixteen squares one month, 60 00
Twenty squares one month, 70 00
Thirty squares one month, 80 00
Forty squares one month, 90 00
Fifty squares one month, 100 00

One column two months, 250 00
One column three months, 300 00
One column six months, 500 00
One column twelve months, 800 00

Contracts for more than three months will be charged $25 per square.

Reading notices will be taken only for the Weekly Rebel, at ten cents per line.

Advertisements not marked for a specified time will be published until forbid, and charged for accordingly.

Advertisements inserted in the Weekly Rebel will be charged $1 per square for each insertion.

Obituaries and notices that are purely in the nature of general news, will be published, but charged for as such.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, APRIL 1, 1863

The war is about to be brought to a close by the interposition of an agent mightier than crown or sword. This agent is Gold. Nobody pretends to dispute the supremacy of the Money-Devil; his subjects are as numerous as his territory is extensive; his power to please is equal to his power to control; and the worldly care it takes of those who fall down and worship it is so well established, that men have long since ceased to make much opposition to it.—Let the adventurers who fell seeking the fabled El Dorado, the unburied ghosts of the Spanish Buccaneers, and the bones that whiten the coast of California, answer for the courage and zeal of its followers.

It is about to intervene in this quarrel. Not from England nor France, but from the Far West. Give us thy hand, gentle reader, and go with us, in fancy, or rather upon the map, far into the twi-lit realms of the Rocky Mountain passes. North of Colorado—a little North East of Utah—West of Nebraska—lies a region, Shoshone by name. It is hereafter to be known as Idaho, pronounced Ide-ho. The Yankee Congress at its last session passed an act for the purpose of organizing a territorial government for this. It carved out its limits from Oregon, Dacotah and Washington, as Colorado was formed before it from Kansas, Nebraska and Utah. It embraces four degrees of latitude—from forty-one to forty-five in the eastern half, and from forty-two to forty six in the western half—and thirteen degrees of longitude—from one hundred and four to one hundred and seventeen. The pony express route from Missouri to California traverses the eastern half of it. The Rocky mountains form a gigantic back-bone, stretching up northwesterly from South pass, and innumerable rivers act as the veins and arteries, carrying off the melted snow from those high latitudes and sending their tribute to the Father of Waters. A few years ago no white man resided within its wide limits. It was a dark, dismal, distant realm almost inconceivable as a dwelling place. But now—now it is beginning to be peopled, to be inhabited. The smoke of the cabin rises from its dim forests, and the ring of the miner's axe and spade echoes up its far off glens. Idaho is found to be a land of gold!

Not the rich galleons of the Spanish main, nor the silvery chimborazos of Mexico, nor the yellow fields of California are said to equal the deep delved treasures of this newly risen mining region.

The story of progress, which leads to the recent discovery of its gorgeous extent, is brief. Far into the autumn of 1861 discoveries were made showing that gold actually existed, and was to be found in paying quantities. The mines were said to be located on the head of Salmon river—a tributary of the Columbia. In the spring of 1862 there was a rush from California, Salt Lake and Pike's Peak, and the country was pretty well prospected. As soon as navigation opened, three or four hundred persons from St. Louis passed up the Missouri as far as Fort Benton. The most of these were sent under the auspices of the American Exploring and Mineral company—an organization that still exists. From Fort Benton they found a good road to the gold fields, one hundred and eighty miles distant. In the early part of the season the miners were not very successful; but about the 1st of September last, rich placers were found, from which were realized from twenty to forty dollars per day. The gold is of a fine quality, known among miners as scale gold, and at the mint would be worth $19,50 per ounce. This strata of gold gradually grows in extent and depth. The lower the spade went the richer the trophy until lo! out of the mists and shadows arose in glittering beauty that grimly brilliant spectacle of wealth, which we have christened the Money-Devil.

Here then is the solution of the war problem. Let the Yankees stop the folly. Let them enlist under their newly spread banner of gold instead of the black bats of conscription. Let the soldiers of Rosecrans—ceasing to do evil and learning to do well—give up the poor pay, rations and reward of their idle crusade against the South, throw aside their muskets, shoulder their pick-axes, and start at once for the Gold fields of Idaho. We are willing to compromise with them upon such terms as will give them a fair proportion of the gold crop. We will be willing to be content with a third, making up our deficit by our cotton. Ten years, nay half of them, of peace and hard labor, would enable us to pay our war debt in coin without taxation, and would at least give them enough to settle up the interest on theirs. It is a thousand fold better to dig than to fight, especially when the tillage is in gold-in-dust and nuggets.

☞ A plagiarist by M. Gounod, just caught, is receiving a fine in the art of circulation. Cute. The old fact is fabulous, and will prove hopeless to popularize when the picture is properly exhibited. It represents Louis XIV, dining tête-à-tête with Molière, and surrounded by his intimates and attendants, some of which he invites, while others stand at the astounding absurdity of a great king admitting a poor author to sit down to dinner. The grouping is favorable, the color exquisite, better still the expression and individuality of the heads is beyond cavil. On the back of the painter account called by a knowledge of the more reliable forms of human expression, which will materially increase the reputation of this talented artist.

☞ Yankee prisoners arrive in Charleston every day. They come in every conceivable shape.

"Some in rags
And some in tags,
And some in velvet gowns."

But very few of the latter. On yesterday afternoon quite a pleasant party came up on the train. We noticed several of them in the royal Southern Confederate jeans. Let us suggest that since Rosecrans is so bloody against the wear and tear of Yankee suits by our boys, that we issue a similar order against them.

☞ General Forrest's late achievement excites the most universal and unbounded admiration. It is regarded as the first of the campaign by those who are best acquainted with the details. What a pity Forrest and Morgan were both absent from the battle field of Murfreesboro.

☞ Col. Thomas Moll. Aston, for some time past connected with the Knoxville Register, was in the city yesterday. We are pleased to learn that he has been appointed by Gen Bragg an Army News Agent for the Army of Middle Tennessee.

☞ The editor of the Washington Chronicle—John W. Forney—says that Abraham the First is the bravest of America's Presidents. He has certainly the courage of the bully and the conscience of the brave.

☞ Marshall Calloquy is reported to be about to visit Africa, on a military excursion of a scientific character under special orders from the Emperor and the Society of Arts in Paris.

☞ The weather has been singularly freakish for the last few days. Chill winds, blasts of snow and hail, with gusts of rain.—The prospect for fruit is disagreeably diminished.

☞ The political elections in Virginia are creating much ado in that State. Several very distinguished gentlemen are out for Governor, and any quantity of Congressional candidates.

☞ Voorhees, of Indiana, in a late debate in the House of Representatives at Washington said that Lincoln and imbecility would elect a mean about the same thing.

☞ Was any people, or free sugar made this year? If so, where is it? As yet we have seen none. It would command a most liberal price.

☞ Some people think that Congress will adjourn in April. Like a setting hen it lays no eggs, and therefore the sooner it quits its nest the better.

☞ The quietude in Middle Tennessee is only the profound tranquillity, which precedes the whirlwind, the tempest, the hurricane of war.

☞ The Alabama Congressmen advise their constituents to plant nothing but food. We advise our readers to do the same thing.

☞ The death of M. Horace Vernet, mentioned at length in another part of to-day's paper, is a great calamity to the world of art.

☞ The bride of the Prince of Wales is to be "a bonny blue eyed lassie" sixteen years old. Nice prospect the Prince has before him.

☞ Mexico still spills out blood and battle upon the French, who reel and stagger among the peaks of the inferior for very life.

☞ A Havana packet lately ran a Southern port with a load of cigars, fruit, wine, and preserves.

☞ A letter writer in the Richmond Enquirer says that the eye of President Davis is at this time intensely fixed on Tennessee.

☞ The iron clads are getting as unpopular and out of date as the older coat of mail.

☞ Maggie Mitchell, the actress, is still in the Yankee capital.

LETTER FROM RICHMOND.

[Special Correspondence of the Rebel.]

RICHMOND, VA., March 28, 1863.

The Finance—Speculation in money—Congress and Legislation—The Army of Virginia and the soldiers of the South-West, &c. &c.

The most important measures now before Congress are those looking to an issue of some form of money which shall be an adequate medium of exchange, and which shall be equally available throughout the country. The great difficulty seems to be to find the ability of the Congress to accomplish any valuable results in this direction, as evidenced by the wild speculation in all kinds of property, which rages through this portion of the country. However unpalatable these conclusions may be, "discretion is the better part of valor," and "discretion" may be, nevertheless we cannot ignore them. It is at first blush a somewhat singular phenomenon that the people of the country have been from the first, are now, and in all probability will continue to be far in advance of their rulers in patriotism. It is conceded, in discussions in every quarter, that persons who are active in the legislation of the Government are not loyal. The army has crushed out the last of some of its false gentlemen and energy, that being the only field presented to the contest, by the disloyal or lukewarm politicians and the gathering of new ones. And from the ranks of popular, which carried the best of brain and soul into the army, what more than one that at the most disinterested estimation, would not now be absolutely able to take the field, or, if not body, were whatever ability he possessed, at all events make it all known, regardless of wounds, scars or pecuniary losses will be preferred for an admiring posterity, and where his merits would be appreciated to the general consume, which is likely to be the verdict rendered to the present Congress. Can another element in force be called, where the people are heavily taxed, taxed heavily, taxed from head to toe, taxed on what they eat, and what they wear, taxed to fill pecuniarily from every pore and a Legislative hall, leading in their hands the destiny of the people, wasting day after day, week after week, in trifling discussion, on frivolous subjects—in fact, in an unusual but expensive similitude—Milking a he goat in a fourfold measure part. "History for them has failed to give the teaching of philosophy by example. They will not avail themselves of the experience of the past, but must set out on a new exploration, in the company of a fragmental orthodox and philosophy.

Contrast this "assembled wisdom" with that of the "plain spoken man" (see Lieutenant of artillery) who took in his pale the disordered, distracted finances of France, and on the day a hackman was justified in driving a fare at the rate of one franc (near $1.55) for a ride in the Opera Comique, and immediately brought order out of chaos, infused into the veins of the dying one modest finances, vigorous life, and made them an Gas of strength upon which the destinies of the empire rested, securely against the shocks of eighteen hundred thousand hands that strove to overturn them. A corollary inference can exists in the thought that these men are only here pro tempore. They know with a consciousness that they will pass away with the present war. The men who have seen so much of humanity, who know the weaknesses of its facts, will recall whenever they desire hereafter to become in conflict with such smooth platitudes and political impossibilities as these.

Every breath of news from our Western army received here is of its worst. Everybody is on the tiptoe of expectation and solicitude as to its movements. Our valor and endurance of its troops are not questioned, but it is a generally received opinion that the army confronting them is made up of better materials than that composing Hooker's army. They are not probably as well organized as this latter command, but many are more familiar with the rifle, and are fair horsemen. It it could be known that General Johnston would command in the next general engagement, the fact would allay much of the anxiety now prevading the public mind. From the Rappahannock the same old story is reported, sand, mud and. The recent snow storm will postpone movements on either side at least a month. S.

FROM MILLEDGEVILLE.

MILLEDGEVILLE, GA., March 28, 1863.

Enclosed I send you for publication, a copy of resolutions offered in the House of Representatives to-day, by Col. R. H. Tatum, Representative from the County of Dade, to-wit:

"WHEREAS, the Government of the Confederate States is involved in a war for the independence of each of the States of the Confederacy as well as for its own existence: And whereas, the destiny of each State of the Confederacy is indissolubly connected with that of the Confederate Government: And whereas, also, the Confederate Government cannot successfully prosecute the war to a speedy and honorable peace without ample means and credit:

Resolved, therefore, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Georgia in General Assembly convened, That the General Assembly concurs in opinion with the General Assembly of the State of Alabama, and the General Assembly of the State of Florida, that it is the duty of each State of the Confederacy for the purpose of sustaining the credit of the Confederate Government, to guarantee the debt of that Government, in proportion to its representation in the Congress of that Government.

Resolved further, That the State of Georgia hereby accepts the proposition of the State of Alabama, to guarantee said debt on said basis, provided, each of said States shall accept the proposition, and adopt suitable legislation to carry it into effect, and that their Resolutions shall stand as the guarantee of this State, of the aforesaid proportion of the debt of said Confederate Government.

Resolved further, That his Excellency be, and he is hereby requested to transmit a copy of these Resolutions to the Governor of each State of the Confederacy, and to the President of the Confederate Government.

These resolutions were referred to a joint committee of both Houses—that had been previously raised to consider of this subject. Governor Brown in his message to the General Assembly now in extra session convened, opposed this measure.

The joint committee will report in favor of the guarantee. CHEROKEE

WRITING INK MANUFACTORY.

THE subscriber is now manufacturing a superior article of fine

BLACK WRITING INK.

This Ink is made from an English recipe, and is remarkable for its fluidity, brilliancy and permanency of color. It is entirely free from dregs or sediment and will not mold or thicken. Every bottle being tried before packing, it is warranted in every respect, it is decidedly superior to any Ink now offered for sale.

The following are some of the commendatory notices I have received as to the quality of the Ink:

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE,
Columbia, March 17, 1863.

W. B. Johnston, Esq:

DEAR SIR: Having fairly tested the bottle of Ink which you presented me with a few days since, I feel warranted in saying that I have never used any Ink superior to it, and with confidence recommend it to those who wish a good ink.

Very respectfully your ob't Serv't,
WM. R. HUNT, Secretary of State.

TREASURY NOTE OFFICE,
Columbia, S. C., March 16, 1863.

W. B. Johnston, Esq:

DEAR SIR: I thank you for your bottle of Ink. It is a good article, and has the advantage over Harrison's in color. Mr DeBow, the book Keeper in this office, says that he prefers it to Harrison's, which we have been using and consider a very good article.

Very respectfully,
JOS. DANIEL POPE.

COLUMBIA, March 18, 1863.

W. B. Johnston, Esq:

DEAR SIR: I have been using your Ink for several days, and do not hesitate to say that it is a very superior article. I consider it equal to any, and superior to most of the Inks made in the United States. May you become a successful manufacturer in the Southern Confederacy.

Very respectfully,
B. F. DEBOW,
Disbursing Clk Tr. Dep't at Columbia, S.C.

BANK OF CHARLESTON, S. C.,
Columbia, March 12, 1863.

W. B. Johnston, Esq:

DEAR SIR: The bottle of Ink which you have kindly sent me has been tried by the officers of this Bank and is highly approved of. Its permanency is equal to its fluidity. I do not hesitate to pronounce it excellent.

Respectfully,
J. CHRESTOMCH, Cashier.

EXCHANGE BANK OF COLUMBIA.

W. B. Johnston, Esq:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT NO. 2,
Tullahoma, Tenn., Feb. 27, 1863.

GENERAL ORDERS
No. 8.

I. Frequent inquiries at these Headquarters, indicate that numbers of able bodied men liable to conscription are still employed in different departments of the army against conscription.

II. It is therefore announced for the information of Executive officers, that no military employment of any kind whatever, exempts the employee from being enrolled. Applications for exemptions must be decided by the Enrolling officers, no other parties being recognized by the department as having any control of the matter.

By command of Gen'l Bragg.
