ST. PAUL AT HALIFAX AFTER SIX DAY TRIP

Boilers Began to Leak Almost Immediately After Departure From New York.

Special to THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 4.—The American Line steamship St. Paul arrived at Halifax at 9 o'clock to-night after an eventful six days at sea with leaking boilers and thoroughly exhausted engineers and firemen, some of whom had been at their posts for forty-eight hours without rest.

The St. Paul was two hours late last Saturday getting away from her pier at West Twenty-third street, New York. She carried 153 first class passengers and 550 in the third class. Trouble in the engine room almost immediately developed. In the late afternoon it was discovered that the water circulating pumps would not work and there was no water for bathing, drinking or cooking except what the stewards carried from the tanks below decks.

By noon on Sunday the defect had been discovered and repaired, but in the meantime more serious trouble had developed. The tubes in the boiler would not stand steam pressure and were blowing out one by one as soon as the steam gauges mounted. The St. Paul, it will be remembered, turned over at her New York pier in April, 1918, and was submerged until October of that year.

When she was overhauled she was placed in commission without a sea trial although she had a berth trial. Under United States regulations a boiler trial can be made by hydraulic pressure, but as it was explained by one of the engineers the salt water probably had produced chemical changes that only temperature under a steam test would develop. Be that as it may, it was soon found that the ship could not make more than eleven knots and frequently slowed down to four or less.

On Monday a southwest gale came up with a long rolling, tumbling sea. As the ship was proceeding slowly she made, as the sailors' saying is, good weather, and all on board were comparatively comfortable. The engine force worked heroically, but every time high pressure was generated out blew a tube and no repairs could be made until that boiler had been cooled for at least four hours. On Tuesday the wind shifted to the northeast and a heavy gale with frequent rainstorms blew flying scud all over the ship, making the decks impassable. It was a wretched day with every one in the engine room well nigh exhausted.

The night was worse and amid the howling gale the ship was slowed down to bury with proper ceremony a third class passenger who died of pneumonia. At 1 o'clock on Wednesday morning the chief engineer went to the bridge and told Capt. Mills it was no use trying to go on and advised turning about. The captain was convinced there was nothing else to be done and he at once altered his course for Halifax and sent a wireless to the company, at the same time posting a notice to the passengers that he was going to Halifax.

Capt. Mills was at all times good natured and courteous to the temporarily excited passengers. He had a distinct objection to having the wireless outfit of the ship used for the general dissemination of news, hence THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD correspondent found it necessary to await arrival in Halifax before giving these particulars to the world.

About 5 in the afternoon the following wireless was received: "Regret situation extremely. Approve your proceeding Halifax. Arranging forward third class passengers on steamer Canada, now Halifax, and Cedric, calling Halifax Monday. Also expect Canada move part your cabin passengers, but give all cabin passengers privilege returning New York our expense. Make full announcement to passengers and keep us fully posted your progress.

"FRANKLIN."

This was quite reassuring but some wanted more explicit information. After dinner a meeting was held in the main saloon. The first speaker, a man from Liverpool, began making an invidious comparison of British and American steamships. Several patriotic Americans would not have this for a minute and international politics ran high until a Frenchman smoothed things out by suggesting more moderate resolutions asking the company for additional information.

A committee of three, one Englishman, one Frenchman and one American, was appointed to wait upon Capt. Mills and present the resolutions. The captain received the committee politely, promised to wire the request to the company and then went to work with his editorial blue pencil and condensed a one thousand word resolution into a briefer wireless.

By this time the sea went down, a beautiful moon appeared and all went on deck, the orchestra began to play and in a few minutes a full fledged ball was in progress.

Thursday proved beautiful, clear and cold, and the ship had a fine run to Halifax. The daily runs were as follows: First day, 185; second day, 227; third day, 259; fourth day, 196; fifth day, 240.

The corrected reading of the barometer (reduced to sea level) at New York on Thursday, March 4, 1920, at 8 AM, as reported by the United States Weather Bureau, was thirty and forty-five hundredths (30.45) inches. This closely approximates seven hundred and seventy-three and four-tenths (773.4) millimetres. Captains of all vessels now lying in or near the ports of New York and Brooklyn can advantageously use the above official data for observing whether their own barometers require any considerable correction or adjustment.

Wind at Sandy Hook, 8 PM, SE, 18 miles; clear; moderate sea. At City Island at sunset, NE, fresh breeze; thick.
