ed at that time. The dividend for July, 1851, is less than that of July, 1850, $5,547 39.

The net earnings up to the 1st of June, 1851, had been sufficient to give semi-annual dividends ranging from one-and-a-half to two-and-a half per cent, and there is, therefore, no doubt but that the future dividends will steadily increase to an extent corresponding with the increase in the net earnings. Monthly returns show a steady increase in the gross receipts; and as the system of expenditures has been greatly improved, there is every reason to believe that the net income will hereafter be a larger per cent on the aggregate receipts. The dividend for the year ending July, 1851, was four per cent on the par value, and for the year ending July, 1852, the dividend will be five per cent on the par value. There is no doubt of this. It therefore appears to us that the present market value of the stock is a great deal below its actual value. That others entertain a similar opinion, is shown by the steady purchases and upward movement in prices.

The annexed statement exhibits the value of merchandise exported from this port during the month of October, distinguishing the extent of shipments to each country:—

—Total value of merchandise exported in October, 1851, $3,264,344.

This is very small, even for the season. But for the shipments of specie, we should have had a greater excess of imports for the month, than that reported. There was been a better distribution of our exports than usual. Considerably less than one-half of the aggregate value went to Great Britain. With South America, Central America, and the West Indies, our export trade during the past month has been limited.
