PERUVIAN GUANO.—OFFICIAL NOTICE.—CONSULate of Peru, New York, 22d June, 1852.—As several incorrect statements have appeared in the public papers of England and of this country, relative to an alleged discovery of guano on the coast of the South Pacific Ocean, which may tend to mislead shipowners and masters of vessels into the belief that they can legally touch at the localities referred to and load guano, I, the Peruvian Consul in New York, fulfilling the instructions of the representative of Peru in this country, make the following statement, as a caution to owners of vessels and others:—1st. The islands called the Lobos de Fuera and Lobos de Tierra are not desert islands, as has been publicly stated. They belong to the district of Lambayeque, province of Lambayeque, and have been known ever since the discovery of the west coast of South America by the Spaniards, to whom they belonged, and they now form part of the several deposits of guano situated between the latitude of the river Loa and that of Tumbes, which are in the possession of the republic of Peru. 2d. By virtue of a decree now in force, no vessel, either under the national or any foreign flag, has a right to go to the Peruvian guano deposits, without first obtaining permission from the Peruvian government, under penalty of confiscation. 3d. Foreign vessels furnished with government licenses are allowed to load at the Chincha Islands only. 4th. The before mentioned islands of Lobos de Fuera and Lobos de Tierra, as well as those of Guanape, Malabrigo and other localities north of Callao, where deposits of guano exist, as also some of the southern deposits in the province of Tarapaca, are purposely kept uninhabited and unfrequented by order of government, in order that the birds may be left undisturbed, and thus a constant increase of the deposits be promoted. 5th. From time immemorial the fishermen of Lambayeque have been accustomed to inhabit the Lobos de Tierra and Lobos de Fuera; but for some years past, the Peruvian government have prohibited their so doing, and bringing away boat loads of eggs to the villages of Lambayeque, San Pedro, and other places on the coast. 6th. Since the commencement of the export of guano to Europe, all the deposits belonging to the republic of Peru have been surveyed and measured by orders of government, and amongst these are enumerated the Lobos de Tierra and Lobos de Fuera, within the jurisdiction of the department of Libertad, formerly called Truxillo. 7th. Finally, any attempt to load vessels without the proper license would subject them to be seized by the government vessels appointed to cruize off and visit the different guano deposits, in order to prevent not only the illegal extraction of guano by foreign trading vessels, but also to prevent the natives of Peru from violating the government orders against visiting those localities and destroying or disturbing the birds.
THOS GALWAY, Consul of Peru.
