

He handles cattle by the thousand yearly—now has 1,400 head on a Washington range. He had made a deal of money at the business in years gone by and had lost a heap in the last two years. But he was not discouraged and didn't lay his ill luck to the Republican tariff kite or to the Democratic scuttle-fish. He just kept his temper and his courage and said he'd stick to the tails of his bulls and cows till they drew him out of the financial mire or perish in the "draw," as many a good stockman has done before. That's the kind of a rooster that I'd like to have for a neighbor, and I wish his ranch was next to mine. He gives a fellow courage and hope, and these are the things most of us need in these low down financial times. But I believe I'd better get off the perch for a while and let your other readers have a chance to shout. Perhaps you'll hear from me again next week.
