Opening of the LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

In accordance with the proclamation of the King, the Legislative Assembly convened at 12 o'clock on Monday, September 2, at the Court House. The hall was densely-crowded with spectators. Within the bar were the Nobles, Representatives, Diplomatic Corps, and their ladies; while the body of the house was filled with ladies and gentlemen.

Punctually at 12, His Majesty left the Palace under a royal salute, escorted by several companies of cavalry and infantry, and accompanied by his Aids and Ministers. Entering the hall at 12½, he proceeded to the rostrum and read the following address, first in Hawaiian and then in English:

NOBLES AND REPRESENTATIVES:

Under the provisions of the 29th and 46th Articles of the Constitution, I have convoked this Extraordinary Session to inform you of the result of the negotiations for a Treaty of Reciprocity, carried on between my Government and the Government of the United States of America, to secure your approval of the same, and to consult with you upon the modifications, which your approval will render necessary, in our Tariff.

My Minister of Foreign Affairs will lay before you the Convention of Commercial Reciprocity negotiated in San Francisco between the Minister Resident of the United States and My Minister Plenipotentiary.

He will likewise submit to you the Bill necessary for carrying into effect the provisions of the treaty.

The admission, free of duty, of a large number of articles from the United States, will create in our revenue a considerable deficit. My Minister of Finance, ad interim, will lay before you his estimates of the same, and will provide you with all such additional information as you may require.

I am satisfied that the anticipated benefits of the Treaty of Reciprocity will not be confined to any special branch of our industry, but will extend over all.

I therefore consider it advisable that in re-adjusting our revenue system, special taxation should be avoided, and a policy adopted that should distribute the burden equitably and justly upon all classes of my subjects.

NOBLES AND REPRESENTATIVES:

The Treaty which will be submitted to you is designed to strengthen the friendly relations now existing with the Government of the United States of America, and to promote the prosperity of this Kingdom.

Relying upon your wisdom and patriotism, and invoking the blessing of heaven upon your deliberations, I do now declare this Extraordinary Session of the Legislature of the Kingdom open.

His Ex. the Minister of Foreign Relation presented a bill entitled "An act to carry into effect a Convention for Commercial Reciprocity with the United States of America." Bill read for the first time.

AN ACT to carry into effect a Convention for Commercial Reciprocity with the United States of America.

WHEREAS, on the 24st day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, a Convention or Treaty of Reciprocity was concluded at San Francisco, in the State of California, one of the United States of America, by Plenipotentiaries duly authorised; and

WHEREAS, said treaty is now before this Legislative Assembly for approval; now, therefore,

BE IT ENACTED, by the King and the Legislative Assembly of the Hawaiian Islands, in the Legislature of the Kingdom assembled:

THAT this Legislative Assembly approve said treaty and the provisions thereof, and when the same shall have been duly ratified by His Majesty the King of the Hawaiian Islands, and the President and Senate of the United States of America, and when by Royal Proclamation it shall be made known that it has been so ratified, the said treaty shall have force as law in every part of His Majesty's dominions; and all the articles which by said treaty it is stipulated shall be admitted into the Kingdom, free of duty, shall be admitted free of duty accordingly, anything in any Act or Law of this Kingdom, then in force, to the contrary notwithstanding.

After the reading of the bill, His Excellency the Minister of Foreign Relations made a few remarks as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT:—The bill which has just been read before this Honorable Assembly is the bill alluded to by His Majesty in his Royal Speech and provides for the carrying into effect the stipulations of the Convention for Commercial Reciprocity.

The present Constitution, while leaving with the Sovereign the Treaty making power, wisely demands the co-operation of the Legislative Branch of the Government to give full force and effect to Treaties altering the Tariff or the Laws of the Kingdom. For this reason and in conformity with these requirements, this extra session has been called and the present bill submitted to your deliberations.

I do not propose, on this first reading, to enter into a discussion of the merits of the Treaty, to insist upon the political and commercial advantages we anticipate from it. This we propose to do on the second reading, in conformity with our precedents and usages.

It is however my desire, if allowed so to do, to say a few words upon the historical part of the question, to trace back the idea of a Treaty of Reciprocity, to see where it has originated from and to satisfy you, Nobles, and you, too, Representatives of the People, that the measure now submitted to you for approval, is no new measure devised by the present administration, but is the result of persistent efforts on the part of preceding administrations, who, however divided they may have been in their views on many subjects have all felt and acted similarly in regard to that one question.

This, in itself, is already a strong recommendation in favor of the adoption of this bill.

Not only have previous administrations advocated a Reciprocity Treaty with the United States, but I can prove that at a time when administrations hardly could be said to exist in our present sense of the word, at a time when all the power was vested in the King and chiefs, at a time when laws were enacted in their name and by them, they, your King and chiefs did, more than fifteen years ago, enact a special law on this very subject and thus created a precedent for the very vote we solicit from you.

This, I contend, should satisfy you that this Reciprocity Treaty was not considered by Kamehameha III., by Keoni Ana, &c., as a white man's Treaty, that they, your chiefs, thought it a good, a wise measure, some of them are still sitting in this very hall, and those who now sit in the places since left vacant, will, I trust, like their ancestors, take a comprehensive view of the subject, leave aside all petty feelings of race or of nationality, and will, after weighing all reasons, all arguments, come to the same conclusion as Kamehameha III. and his chiefs did, as Kamehamaha IV. and his Privy Council did, as Kamehameha V. and his Ministers did.

Three of your Kings, Nobles and Representatives, are already voted.

I finally contend, and this is the natural, logical conclusion of what I have stated, that this Treaty is the result of a national and traditional policy, pursued for years under various fortunes, defeated by adverse circumstances, and now waiting for the combined sanction of King, Nobles and Representatives.

The King has given his, we apply for yours.

And now permit me, in a few words to prove my assertions.

I have to go back as far as 1848 to find the idea of a treaty of reciprocity between Hawaii and the United States officially discussed. Mr. J. J. Jarves, then Representative of this Kingdom, made two unsuccessful attempts at negotiation—the first on the 26th of October, 1848, with Mr. Buchanan, then Secretary of State; the second on the 23d of November, 1849, with Mr. Clayton, Secretary of State.

In 1852, the subject was revived again under a different form, and on the 28th of February of that year, a petition, numerously signed and recommending that an attempt be made to negotiate a treaty of reciprocity, was introduced in the Privy Council. It resulted in the following Act: (See page 20 of Laws of 1852, English text; page 6 of Laws of 1852, native text.)

This Act was passed under the Constitution of the 8th of October, 1840.

This fully establishes what were then the views of the King and of the Chiefs, in whose hands the Executive and Legislative powers were entirely vested. This fully proves that the negotiations attempted in 1849, and so substantially indorsed in 1852 by King and Chiefs, were theirs.

What Kamehameha III. attempted, Kamehameha IV. did attempt. He ascended the Throne in November, 1854, and on the 19th of March, 1855, he, with the advice of his Privy Council, signed the full powers accrediting W. L. Lee, then Chief Justice of the Kingdom, as his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary for the negotiation of a treaty of reciprocity. On the 20th of July such a treaty was duly signed in the city of Washington between the late W. L. Marcy, then Secretary of State, and the Hawaiian Plenipotentiary.

I still remember, Mr. President, the cordial and enthusiastic welcome extended to the late W. L. Lee, on his return from the United States of America. I still remember the speeches made, the congratulations exchanged on the success of a national and traditional policy.

Every one here is familiar with the causes of the failure of this negotiation. I will revert to them at some future stage of the discussion.

Kamehameha IV., died at the end of November, 1863. Kamehameha V. had hardly been four months on the throne, when, on the 20th of March, 1864 he commissioned our Hon. Chief Justice E. H. Allen as his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, to negotiate with the United States of America a treaty of reciprocity, on the basis of the Convention of 20th of July, 1855. The war in which the American Government was then engaged, prevented the success of the negotiations; but, relying on the friendly disposition of the United States Government and on their assurances that, as soon as the successful issue of the war would permit, then they would enter into negotiations, the King and his Government waited until they felt justified in commissioning my colleague, the Minister of Finance, to proceed on the same errand on which J. J. Jarves, W. L. Lee, and E. H. Allen had already preceded him.

The treaty you heard read yesterday is the result of this mission and it will rest with you, by passing the bill now before you, to enable His Majesty to carry into effect the provisions of the same. Should you reject the bill, you reject the treaty. Should you approve of the bill, you approve of the treaty.

I hope I have satisfied you that historically speaking this treaty is the fruit of a national, traditional policy. When the general discussion will take place we hope to satisfy you further that politically and commercially you ought to endorse it. I am the more confident of your so doing as I have myself had some of the doubts that now assail you. This question has been the subject of long and careful consideration on my part, at various times, during a residence of thirteen years among you, and has been viewed by me from every point of view. I did, years ago, hesitate before coming to a conclusion, and I trust that the reasons and arguments that convinced me will carry conviction to your minds.

Hon. S. W. Mahelona moved that this bill pass its first reading. He said that it was an important bill, and he wished that it might be printed and placed in the hands of members.

There being no objections, the bill passed its first reading.

Hon. S. H. Phillips requested that no debate take place until the bill be printed. He hoped to-morrow to be able to lay before the House carefully prepared statistics to show the estimated deficiency in the revenue, &c., and moved that it be made the special order of the day to-morrow.
