AGONIES OF THE TRANCE.

A Young Man Describes the Tortures of Suspended Animation.

"You have undoubtedly read now and again in the daily newspaper accounts of persons lying in a trance," said a well-known gentleman the other day to a reporter of the National Labor Tribune.

"I am one of those persons. It is very harrowing to me to read accounts of people lying in this condition and being put in a coffin, and even stored in a vault, before they came to. I have even read of where a few weeks after some necessity caused disinterment, and then the body was found turned face down, as though there had been a struggle for freedom.

"My experience went no further than fifteen hours, I am certain, but that was enough, thank you. The fact is, I woke one morning in my room feeling quite rested. I know that I had spent a pleasant night in sleep and I lay speculating without moving or caring to open my eyes.

"Then I thought of getting up. I felt rather chilly, I thought, but still comfortable. When I wanted to open my eyes I couldn't. When I tried to put my hands to them I didn't move. Then I struggled to stir at all, but it was only a mental struggle. I then devoted my entire faculties to myself. I tried to call, but couldn't. My mind actually seemed to be ready to burst with rushing blood and confused thought. Then a relapse came and I felt stupefied. I didn't care whether I moved or not.

"Then came alternate periods of mental struggle and stupor. In the afternoon I was discovered by my landlady, who came to look after the room. It seemed astounding to me to think that I should be compelled to lie there and appear as one dead. I heard everything that went on—heard her calls, but couldn't answer. She called others of the family and a doctor.

"Burning my fingers and feathering my nose didn't disturb me. I couldn't feel it. I came around about 10 o'clock that night. When I did I came with a bound, and I was nervous for a week after. The thought of that probably coming again is a constant source of worry to me."

WANTED TO HIRE THE PARLOR.

The Countryman Had Important Business to Transact.

One afternoon early in the week a tall, lank specimen of the tribe encountered in the backwoods of Michigan, attired in what was evidently his Sunday suit, walked timidly in from the Michigan boulevard entrance of the Victoria Hotel, and approached Chief Clerk Shafer, who was behind the desk, with a bow and a rural scrape, says the Chicago Post.

Then he ran his horny hand into his trousers pocket, fished up a generous roll of greenbacks, bowed and scraped again, and said to Shafer:

"Mister, kin we hev the use uv your parlor for 'bout fifteen minutes?"

"What do you want the room for?" asked Shafer.

"Well, sir, we want to hold a little sort uv a consultation"—and he spoke the big word with the airy incoherence of a drunken man attempting to refer to the anthropological exhibit.

"We charge nothing for the use of our parlor for fifteen minutes, my friend," said Shafer, "but we would really like to know what you propose to do there."

"I'm a-goin' to git married, mister," said the backwoodsman, leaning across the desk and talking in a hoarse whisper.

"Go ahead, then," said the clerk.

"Thank you," said the stranger, returning his big roll to his pocket. "Your rates are very cheap here."

Then out he went, and soon marched in again through the Van Buren street entrance, piloting the blushing bride and a party of ten, including the minister. All of the gentlemen wore boots, and as they tramped upstairs it sounded like hail falling down an elevator shaft. They all entered the parlor, closed the doors, the ceremony was performed, and they tramped out again.

"The last I saw of them," said Shafer, "they were climbing the viaduct incline for a wedding tour to the Fair on the Saleback. They'll be big people in their town."

FROM THE NEW YORK WORLD:

Hosea Higgins is generally well known as any man in New York, and the fame of the institution over which he presides has spread all over the country. The invariable and pronounced success that has followed his methods in teaching the art of dancing has made it the largest establishment of the kind in the world. To the better class of people Mr. Higgins's is an ideal institution, its facilities are unequalled, the floor space is enormous, the music provided is above criticism, while his staff of fully and gentleman teachers stand at the head of their profession.

MR. HOSEA HIGGINS, in his class lessons, gives individual instruction in a room separate from the general classroom, without paying (like others) a great advantage. HE GUARANTEES THE WALTZ IN SIX PRIVATE LESSONS, MAKING NO EXTRA FEES.
